Sixty-Eighth Congress Adjourns Sine Die

FURIOUS SESSION, SCANDAL-TAINTED, ROARS TO CLOSE

Gavels in House and Senate Fell for Last Time at 7 O'Clock Saturday Night.

CAMPAIGN ORATORS TO RESUME BATTLE

Teapot Dome and Daugherty Scandals, Tax Cut, Immigration and Bonus Were Achievements.

COOLIDGE SIGNED 105 BILLS SATURDAY.

Washington, June 7.—Bills and resolutions to the number of 105 were signed today by President Coolidge as his part in making possible the adjournment of congress.

The president approved about two dozen bills and vetoed one—the postal pay increase measure—during the day in his office. An hour before congress adjourned he went to the capitol and there, surrounded by members of his cabinet, he affixed his signature to all of the measures brought to him before the adjournment bell sounded the ending of the first session of the sixty-eighth congress.

Washington, June 7.—(Special.)—The sixty-eighth congress of the United States roared to its close at 7 o'clock tonight. As the hands of the clocks in house and senate indicated the appointed hour, the gavels fell for the last time and the acrimonious debate which has featured the six months of the session came to a sudden stop.

It will be resumed by campaign speakers of both parties who will stump the nation in the months between the national conventions and the November election day, reiterating the charges and counter-charges of floor orators, and interpreting the basis of those debates to the detriment of opposing factions.

Even the last hours of the sixty-eighth congress were marked by furious exchange of political repartee as senators and representatives staged last-minute filibusters to block passage of important but mooted bills, and prevent adoption of committee reports.

A renewal of the Teapot Dome debate in the senate, growing out of a furtile effort by Senator Walsh, of Montana, to secure approval of the majority report of the oil committee, tied up business at that end of the capitol most of the afternoon.

The house cleaned up many minor bills but spent most of the day quarreling over the reclamation legislation, which had been attached by the senate to the deficiency bill. The principal features of the administration's reclamation plan finally were accepted but other changes were made to which the senate would not agree.

Among the mourners over the unusually painful demise of the session

Shot Stepfather To Save Mother And Sister, Claim

Death Charge Fired To End Attack on Family, Mother Says.

Augusta, Ga., June 7.—(Special.) Ben M. Brunson, about 45, caretaker of the old Camp Hancock hostess house, on the Wrightsboro road, about one mile outside the city limits, was shot and killed insantly by George Baldowski, his 20-year-old stepson. The motive for the killing was to protect his mother, Mrs. Minnie Brunson, and his sister, Eva Baldwoski, from attacks of his stepfather, the youth's mother told officers.

The shot was fired from a 12-gauge double-barrelled shotgun through a window and from a point outside the house, Mrs. Brunson declared. The load entered Brunson's head.

A coroner's jury charged Baldowski with the slaying.

Small Bull Pup Stops Dog Fight When Men Fail

Battling Canines Disregard Human Interference But Stop to Play Tag.

Hastings, England, June 7.—Traffic in the shopping district was completely suspended Saturday while policemen and a crowd of 1,000 volunteers tried to stop a dog fight in the main street.

An old man emptied his snuff box over the dogs.

A woman threw the contents of two pepper cruets in their faces.

Buckets of water were thrown on them from all directions.

Policemen beat them with their clubs.

Men tried to thrust canes between them.

Everybody began to sneeze.

But the dogs fought on—until a bull puppy, of the Bonzo type, jumped from its mistress' arms and, waddling toward them, persuaded them to join it in a game of tag.

EVANGELIST PRAYS FOR WOUNDED SON DURING OPERATION

Percy B. Wolfe, Graduate of Theological School, Is Fighting Death at Grady. Assailant Is Jailed.

Rev. Percy B. Wolfe, 25, of 271 Lucile avenue, graduate of a Methodits Theological school and superintendent of the Central curb market at 164-170 South Forsyth street, is near death at Grady hospital from a shot said to have been fired by H. A. Jackson, of 12 West Ormond street, nightwatchman at the plant, who is held without bond.

The victim's father, Rev. H. J. Wolfe, a traveling evangelist, and his three brothers, John, Wilmer and Lee, who were called from a revival service at the Fox Street Methodist church, held family prayer in the room adjoining that in which the operation was to be performed.

Little Hope for Recovery.

The bullet, which entered the back, punctured the intestines and lodged in the lining of the stomach. Doctors declared that there is practically no hope for recovery, and his death was expected momentarily Saturday night.

The shooting took place at about 10 o'clock Saturday night in a room at the rear of the shop, following the opening night of the curb market. Jackson, who police say was intoxicated at the time of his arrest, declares the shooting to have been accidental, and told police that he was nervous and upset following an argument a few minutes previously with C. C. Mitchell, of 34 West Ormond street, a carpenter also employed by the market.

The wounded man's father declared that he will insist on a thorough prooing of the shooting, and declared that he had heard rumors of threates against his son's life. He told officers that he had a presentiment of evil, and fearing that harm would befall his son in the youth's new business venture, had begged him to forsake it.

Eerie Light by Candle.

A candle, which cast an eerie light over the room, was the only illumination at the time of the shooting, as lights had not yet been installed in the building. Jackson blames his nervous condition and the fact that he came upon Wolfe in the uncertain light for the shooting.

He told Call Officers J. A. Brown and W. M. Holland, who made the arrest, that he was on his first round of inspection following departure of the crowd which had attended the opening, and that it was his duty to see that all lights were out and all doors locked.

He was carrying his revolver in his hand at the time, he said, and pulled the trigger subconsciously, before he had even recognized Wolfe.

Notifies Police.

L. W. Whitfield, of 69 Travis street, who was attracted by the shot as he was passing the market, was the first to reach the wounded man. He notified both police headquarters and Grady hospital.

Mitchell, who also was arrested, was released on copy of charges when he was unable to tell any important facts in regard to the shooting other than a corroboration of Jackson's story of an argument between those two. The altercation, Mitchell stated, was purely a personal matter, and after it had been settled he started on his way home, and Jackson on his round of inspection. Mitchell was a short distance from the building when he hard the shot.

Wolfe, according to statements given police by his father, was instrumental in the construction of a curb market on Courtland street, and later served as superintendent. A short time ago he disposed of his interest in the Courtland street market and undertook erection of the new market on Forsyth street, which was completed only last week.

FRANK M'DOWELL WILL GO ON TRIAL FOR LIFE MONDAY

Former Decatur (Ga.) Youth To Plead Insanity as Defense for Murder of Parents.

INTELLECTUAL ANGLE LIKE FRANKS CASE

Slaying of Sisters by Fire Marked First Step in Atonement for Sin, Boy Will Declare.

Clearwater, Fla., June 7.—A murder trial akin to the sensational Franks slaying in Chicago will open here Monday.

Frank McDowell, young intellectual, will go on trial for his life charged with the murder of his mother and father in a fit of religious frenzy. The killing to "save his soul" and to atone for a "sin against the Holy Ghost" took place in St. Petersburg just one year after young McDowell says he burned his two sisters to death in Decatur, Ga.

McDowell, scarcely twenty years old, a brilliant scholar and a deep student of religion, psychology and other advanced subjects, will plead that he is a paranoiac and that when he shot and killed his parents as they slept it was in answer to a command from God to expiate his own "blasphemy."

Slew Sisters First.

Obeying a mandate to "cleanse his soul" in fire, blood and water, McDowell, according to his unusual defense, began his campaign of death and destruction a year ago last February 19, when he locked his two younger sisters in their bedroom in Decatur, Georgia.

The two girls had been drugged and their beds saturated with kerosene which young McDowell says he ignited as he fled from the death chamber. The boy was not suspected at the time the two girls were burned to death.

On the anniversary of fulfillment of the first of his atonements McDowell shot and killed his mother and father as they slept in their home in St. Petersburg.

Declares Innocence.

Having recompensed in fire and blood McDowell on next February 19 would have drowned himself, thus completing his expiation, he said.

McDowell contends he is as "innocent as any person not even present" because his acts were in moments of mental irresponsibility when he was obeying the dictates of a higher law.

Alienists will be called in an effort to prove the brilliant youth insane and will attempt to show that the apparently motiveless murders and

COOLIDGE VETOES POSTAL PAY RAISE

"Extravagance Must Stop. People Are Paying All It Is Possible for Them To Pay," Says President.

Washington, June 7.—The postal salary increase bill was vetoed by President Coolidge today with the declaration that "government extravagance must stop."

It was returned to the senate with a message objecting to the legislation because it made no provision for raising the approximately $68,000,000 from the postal revenues.

Approval was given by the president to the provision added to the bill to regulate campaign expenditures and the statement was made that he would approve that section if stood alone.

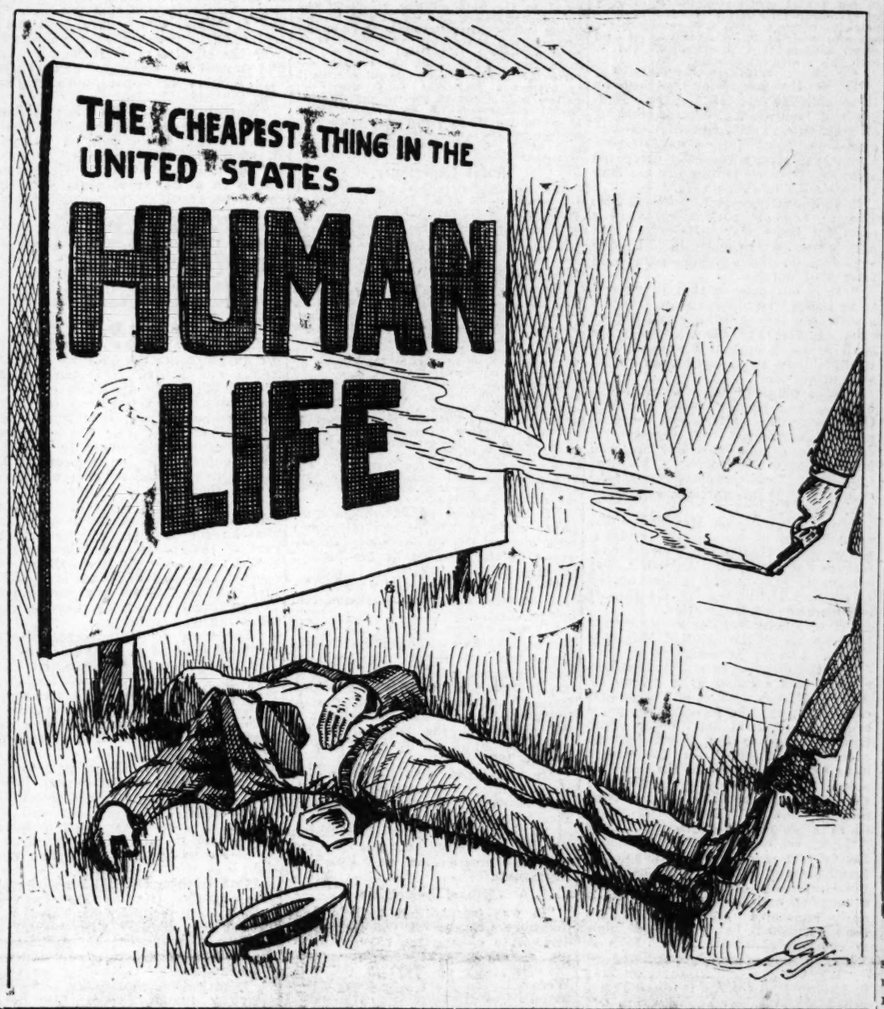

Delay in the revision of postal salaries, conceded to be inequitable in certain cases, until the postoffice department is able to compete its inquiry into cost ascertainment was advised by the present.

Awaits Result of Inquiry.

"When the results of this inquiry are available," the president said, "they will form the basis for an intelligent consideration by the postmaster general and by congress of all questions relating to the adequacy or inadequacy of postage rates. They will afford a proper basis for consideration

The Shame of It!

Candler Questions Legality of Call For Methodist Meet

Bishop Issues Statement Setting Forth Views at Length on Church Controversy.

In a signed statement given to The Constitution for exclusive publication, Bishop Warren A. Candler, of the Southern Methodist church, explains at length his position in regard to the extra session of the general conference of that church, which has been called by a majority of the bishops, for July 2, this year.

While the purpose of the extra session is to pass upon the proposed unification plan, already approved by the Northern Methodist church, and which would unite these two great bodies of American Methodism, Bishop Candler makes plain in his statement that his objection to the extra session, is primarily one regarding the legality of its call, and is not an objection to the proposed unification plan itself.

Bishop Candler, after quoting the opinion of many of the greatest lawyers in Methodism, sets forth a strong case for his argument that the call for the extra session was not made in strict legal accord with the constitutional rules of the church. He contends that, before such a call can be legal, it must be approved by all the annual conferences, and that each annual conference must have the opportunity, if it desires, to elect a new delegation for the special session of the general conference, and to instruct that delegation as to its views on the question which the extra session is called to discuss.

Impossible to Vote.

It is impossible, Bishop Candler declares, for all the annual conferences to meet and pass on the extra session call between now and July 2. They cannot, therefore, either instruct their present delegations to the general conference on their views of the unification plan, nor can they elect a new delegation, if they desire. On the other hand, if the date advocated by Bishop Candler and the other bishops who voted in the minority when the call was approved had been adopted, that of the first Wednesday in May, 1925, all the annual conferences would have met in the in-

PREPARE GROUND FOR NEW 12-STORY OFFICE BUILDING

Structure To Cost $1,218,000 To Be Erected at Ellis Street and Carnegie Way.

Work of preparing the ground for a 12-story office building to cost nearly a million and a quarter dollars began Saturday morning, according to the announcement of the Wynne-Claughton Realty Sales corporation, under whose auspices the big business structure is to be immediately erected at the corner of Ellis street and Carnegie way. The new building will stand in the immediate rear of the Winecoff hotel, and in the heart of the theater and hotel district of Atlanta.

In making the announcement of the new structure, the Wynne-Claughton company stated that the building is to be erected to meet the increasing demand for centrally located business space. The ground floor of the big structure will contain 8,000 square feet and will be divided into stores and elevator lobby, while the second story will be taken over by the owners, the Wynn-Claughton Realty Sales corporation, as its principal office.

The next ten stories will be devoted to offices and lofts, the arrangement being left largely to lessees, it is understood. The building is to be financed by a local concern, and G. Lloyd Preacher and company, architects for many of the most famous hotels, apartments and office buildings of this city and the south, is drafting the designs. Gude and company, also famous for its part in the big building campaign now in progress in Atlanta and the south, will do the contract work.

Concrete Construction.

The Wynne-Claughton building, the name of the new office structure, will be fire-proof in construction, concrete and steel being used, while terra cotta and limestone will be employed in its ornamentation.

The cost of the building proper

ANTI-KLAN PLAN WILL BE URGED ON BOTH PARTIES

New York World Leads Movement to Have Both Democrats, Republicans Take Stand.

New York, June 7.—An anti-Klux Klan Klan plank in the platforms of both republican and democratic parties is urged in a petition to be presented to the resolutions committee of the two conventions, according to an announcement by The New York World Saturday night.

The petitions will conform in substance to the anti-klan plank drawn up by The World, Ralph Pulitzer said.

The text of the plank reads:

Text of Plank.

"This party pledges itself and its candidates to stand inflexibly for government by due process of law and against all groups which attempt to take the law into their own hands. If its candidates are elected, this party gives assurances that no act of theirs will render aid or comfort to any organization based on prejudice or discrimination against any citizens for reason of race, color or creed."

Dr. Charles Franklin Thwing, president emeritus of Western Reserve university, will present the petition to the republican convention.

Among the general committee to sign the petition are Bishop Charles Woodcock, of the Episcopal Church of Kentucky; Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Major General James G. Harbord, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Jane Addams and the presidents of several universities.

Many Approve Plank.

Added to the list of the committee are the names of persons who have approved the proposed plank in a symposium sent out by The World.

Among this list are Robert Lansing, former secretary of state; Charles M. Schwab, Gilbert M. Hitchcock, former senator from Nebraska; James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany; Judge Ben B. Lindsay, James M. Cox, former governor of Ohio; John H. Clarke, former U. S. supreme court justice; Senator James A. Reed, Governor George S. Silzer, of New Jersey; Governor Arthur M. Hyde, of Missouri; Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, and numerous college presidents and committeemen to the two national conventions.

POLITICAL STAGE SET FOR MEETING OF G.O.P. TUESDAY

Pre-Convention Contests Over Delegates Are Settled and Party Managers Rest.

5 VICE PRESIDENTIAL BOOMS ARE LAUNCHED

Gov. Lowden's Backers Appear Confident He Will Be Picked as Coolidge's Running Mate.

STREET CAR OFFICIALS RUSH TO AVERT STRIKE.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 7.—W. D. Mahon, president, and W. B. Fitzgerald, vice president, of the International Amalgamated Association of Street Car Workers, will arrive here from Detroit Sunday in a last-minute effort to avert a street car strike here which threatens to tie up traffic during the republican convention.

Announcement that the international officers would come was made Saturday after all other attempts to avert the strike, scheduled for Tuesday at midnight, had failed.

Mahon and Fitzgerald will go into conference immediately with W. R. Hopkins, city manager, who requested the hearing.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 7.—The last stage of the pre-convention period was reached today when the republican national committee wound up its work of hearing contesting delegations.

Party leaders and convention managers, released from the grind of making decisions between warring factions, went in for relaxation or surveying the vice presidential booms which are variously launched and promptly deflated, or wafted along as the arriving delegates stir up the political airs.

Five vice presidential booms had risen above ordinary mention today. The largest and seemingly healthiest was still former Governor Lowden's. It had companions, however, in booms for Senator Borah, despite the fact

G.O.P. CONVENTION TO BE BROADCAST

Observer in Glass Cage on Speaker's Platform to Paint Story on the Air.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 7.—Every procedure of the national convention beginning here Tuesday will be broadcast by radio. From a glass cage on the speaker's platform, every speech, motion, resolution and event will be sent. Even applause will be heard, the announcer explaining reason for every occurrence.

James Preston, superintendent of the senate press gallery in Washington, has been named as official observer and will inform the announcer as to the significance of every act. During the lulls between speeches, the announcer will give a word picture of Public hall, explain delays and tell what is to follow. An announcer will be on duty every minute during the convention from the time it convenes at 11 a. m., Tuesday, eastern standard time, until the last detail has been completed.

No hourly program has been arranged, but radio fans who "tune in" on the convention will have no difficutly from other disturbances as other broadcasting stations have agreed to "sign off" while the convention is in session.

Fourteen powerful stations in eleven cities will flash proceedings and smaller stations will re-broadcast into isolated territories. The larger stations are: Cleveland (WJAX-WTAM); New York (WEAF); Washington (WCAP); Buffalo (WGR); Kansas City (WDAF); St. Louis (KSD); Chicago (WGN-WLS-WMAQ); Pittsburg (KDKA); Schenectady (WGY) and Boston (WNAC.)

The program for the first day, as outlined by John T. Adams, Iowa, chairman of the national committee, begins with calling the convention to order at 11 a. m., reading of the convention hall prayer, appointment of a committee to escort Temporary Chairman Theodore Burton, Ohio, to the platform, introduction of Mr. Burton and his "keynote" address, expected to start shortly before noon.

COMPEL SEVERAL HOUSES SHOWING THEM TO CLOSE

Anti-American Feeling Has Reached Serious Stage Because of Exclusion Legislation.

DANCE BROKEN UP AT AMERICAN HOTEL

Insulting Language Used by Ruffians. Police Make No Efforts To Check Outrages to Americans.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Tokio., June 7.—Gangs of ronin (political ruffians) tonight forced several motion-picture houses showing American films to close. Anti-American feeling here has reached a serious stage.

The motion-picture business here has been noting the effects of the anti-American boycott for several days, the dropping off in business becoming more and more noticeable. Tom D. Cochrane, Far East manager for Paramount Films, arrived in Tokio today. Instructions to close the Tokio houses due to the business slump, unless unusual improvement is noted, have been issued.

SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE BROKEN UP.

Tokio, June 7.—Ruffians broke up the Saturday night dance at the Imperial hotel tonight, attended by many members of the foreign community, with a demonstration of opposition to the exclusion clause of the new American immigration law.

Members of the foreign colony had gathered as usual for the Saturday night dance, a regular event in their social life. So far as the foreigners were concerned, the demonstration came without warning, the ronins walking onto the dance floor and starting speeches.

About 50 foreign women were present, most of them Americans. They left the dance room at once, not only because of the menacing attitude of the ronins, but because of the insulting character of their language.

Fight Barely Averted.

The foreign men remained and a threatened fight was averted only by the intervention of the Japanese guests, who as calmly as possible persuaded the ronin to leave. After the intruders had gone, a spokesman for the Japanese guests addressed the Americans present, saying "that the demonstration had not been intended as an affront to the Americans, but was intended to shame the Japanese present who were associating with Americans in 'this time of national danger.'"

The dance, however, was at an end, for the orchestra had disappeared.

Police Knew In Advance.

The police made no move to halt the demonstration, although according to reliable information, they had known of the plans for it since 3 o'clock this afternoon. It is learned from authoritative Japanese sources friendly with America that tonight's demonstration is only part of a larger affair which has been planned with the intention of evicting all Americans from the country.

In addition to making speeches, the ronin distributed handbills urging a boycott of all American goods. Up-

TWO MACON BOYS ARE SENT TO PEN

Five to twenty year terms in the penitentiary were given Saturday by Judge J. D. Humphries to Leland L. Harvey, 18, and Frank P. Webb, 19, Macon youths, who pleaded guilty to a series of robberies. Harvey confessed to six cases of robbery of grocery stores and to one automobile theft, while Webb admitted five robberies.

Mrs. W. L. Harvey, of Macon, mother of Leland, and his sister were in court when sentence was pronounced. Both wept bitterly. J. H. Webb, of Macon, father of Frank, was also in court.

Attorney William Schley Howard represented Harvey, declaring he belonged to one of middle Georgia's best families. Attorney E. F. Goodrum, of Macon, represented Webb.

CANDLER QUESTIONS LEGAILTY OF CALL

terim and passed on the question at issue.

Bishop Candler points out that the call for the extra session on July 2, next, after it had been approved by a vote of the majority of the bishops, was signed by himself, as chairman of the college of bishops, and by Bishop Denny, as secretary, on instructions of the majority, but inasmuch as they both voted against the date for the call, he felt that it would have been better if the bishops who voted with the majority had signed it in person.

Later, says Bishop Candler, he and Bishops Denny, Darlington and Dickey, who had opposed the July 2 date on the ground that such a call was unconstitutional, gave out a statement to the newspapers for publication.

Statement in Full.

Bishop Candler's statement, giving a thorough analysis of the situation, and explaining the legal points at issue, is as follows:

"On May 20, Bishops Denny, Darlington, Dickey and myself united in a statement (not a protest in any sense), giving our reasons for dissenting from the conclusion reached by a majority of the bishops in calling an extra session of the general conference on July 2.

"We felt the statement was 'due the church as well as ourselves.'

"Our statement was entirely free from all personalities, as it should have been, and it contained no slightest reflection on our colleagues from which conclusion we felt constrained to dissent. It was as nearly impersonal as it was possible to make such a statement.

"I regret that it is necessary to say anything further on the subject which called it forth, but justice to my colleagues who united with me in it, requires me to say what I now write, to the end that no erroneous conception of its origin or misleading impression of its purpose may go forth in the present, or be handed down to the future.

"From what I am about to say I shall exclude all personalities and unworthy insinuations, having no disposition to indulge in such unseemly things and believing their indulgence by anyone, and especially by a bishop, to be improper and also injurious to the church.

Meeting of Bishops.

"I shall give a plain account of the statement issued by Bishops Denny, Darlington, Dickey and myself, and the proceedings in the college of bishops which led us to make it.

"The bishops met in Nashville on Friday, May 2. They were occupied mainly on Friday and Saturday with the usual routine matters of the annual meeting, and with the revision of the 'Manual of Discipline.'

"Then the matter of calling an extra session of the general conference was taken up; and, in advance of any action by the northern general conference on the subject of the proposed 'plan of unification,' a resolution was passed to call a session of the general conference not later than August 1.

"Subsequently one who voted for the resolution moved that it be reconsidered; but the motion to reconsider failed, by a vote 7 ayes and 7 nays.

"From the outset of the discussion of the matter, I argued that it would be illegal as well as unjust to call an extra session of the general conference in advance of the next sessions of the annual conferences.

"On the second day of the discussion I read to the college of bishops a paper designed to sustain the position I had taken concerning the illegality of an extra session before the next meetings of the annual conferences.

"That I might be more sure of the correctness of my view, I communicated with several eminent Methodist lawyers in easy reach of Nashville, asking them to wire me what was in their opinion the correct legal construction of paragraphs 37 and 38 of Discipline of 1922. Both they and I assumed that those paragraphs had been legally enacted.

Fundamental Rules.

"In reply, Hon. W. G. M. Thomas, of Chattanooga, wired me on Monday, May 5:

Among the fundamental rules and principles which must always govern construction and interpretation of statutes are that the intention of the makers must prevail. To reach this, every part of the statute must be considered. A thing may be within the letter and yet not within the statute unless it be within the intention of the makers. The words, the context, the effects and consequences are to be considered, and if the words admit of two possible constructions, it must be presumed that the makers intended that which is reasonable, fair, sensible and just in view of the entire subject matter. Sections 37 and 38 must be read together. When this is done the construction is clear that if a general conference be called, the time fixed must be such as that the annual conference shall have opportunity to say whether it prefer to send the existing or a new delegation. W. G. M. THOMAS.

"On the same date Hon. Guston T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, wired me:

Replying to your letter, I think the words "at any time," in paragraph 37 of discipline, are limited by the provision in paragraph 28; that the annual conference shall have the opportunity to elect new delegates to the call session of the general conference. In my opinion the power to call extra session of the general conference cannot be exercised so as to deprive the annual conference of the right to have the character of representation which they are entitled to select under paragraph 38. G. T. FITZHUGH.

Letter to Thomas.

"On Tuesday, May 6, I sent to Associate Justice William H. Thomas, of the supreme court of Alabama, a Methodist lawyer of great ability, the paper I had read to the bishops on Monday, May 5, accompanied by the following letter:

My Dear Judge: The last general conference directed the bishops to call an extra session of the general conference in case the northern general conference approved the proposed plan of unification.

Anticipating that the northern Methodists will approve the plan of unification, the bishops have under consideration the time when an extra session of our general conference could be lawfully held.

The sections of the discipline that touch the matter are sections 37 and 38, edition of 1922, which are as follows:

"Section 37. The bishops or a majority of the annual conferences, shall have authority to call a general conference at any time if they judge it necessary."

"Section 38. When a general conference is called it shall be constituted of the delegates elected to the preceding general conference, except when an annual conference shall prefer to have a new election."

Some of the bishops hold that the bishops are authorized to fix any time for holding a called session of the general conference without regard to the right of objection vested in the annual conferences by paragraph 38. Others hold that the authority given the bishops by paragraph 37 is limited by the rights vested in the annual conferences by paragraph 38, and that a general conference can not be called until each and every annual conference has had opportunity to exercise its right of option, conferred by paragraph 38.

Pending the discussion of the matter on yesterday, I read to the bishops the paper which I enclose.

The matter is not yet settled, but will probably be determined on tomorrow or Thursday.

Please wire me on Wednesday morning your judgement concerning the correct interpretation of the law governing the matter. Wire, of course, at my expense. A longer or shorter opinion, as you may prefer.

Thanking you in advance for this valuable service, I am, yours very truly,
W. A. CANDLER.

Opinions on Call.

"To my letter, Justice Thomas replied on Wednesday, May 7, as follows:

Letter just received. Section 37 of discipline gives the bishops unlimited power in the exercise of a wise discretion as to the necessity, subject, however, to the limitation fixed by section 38, and therefore this discretion to call an extra session is limited as to time to such date as to give to the annual conferences the opportunity of exercising their rights of selecting delegates to represent such conferences in the concrete question to be considered at said called session. That is section 37 and 38 must be construed together.
WILLIAM H. THOMAS.

"With the conclusion reached by these able lawyers, Hon. Percy Maddin and Hon. J. McFerrin Anderson, of Nashville, Tenn., agreed, as did also Hon. Perry Rader, of Jefferson City, Mo., whose carefully prepared opinions, given in writing are too long to be quoted in this article.

"Subsequently, Hon. W. G. M. Thomas and his partner sent me a carefully considered opinion, which also is too long to quote in full. It is sufficient to quote this paragraph from that opinion.

"'It is out opinion that in the call to be issued, the bishops must fix such a date for the called general conference as that the annual conference shall be given opportunity to express itself, should it so prefer, as to its own delegation.'

"These opinions were given to the bishops, just as they were received. On Wednesday afternoon, May 7, news was received that the general conference of our northern brethren had approved the "proposed plan of unification," and promptly the bishops were called by me to meet on Thursday, May 8.

"In the meeting on May 8, the discussion both of the legality and expediency of calling the general conference not later than August 1, was continued, and finally it was agreed to adjourn until May 20, for further consideration of the matter.

"It was necessary for me to return to my home on the night of May 8.

Lawyer Investigates.

"In the discussion had on that day, a word was dropped by a bishop favoring an early session of the general conference, to the effect that paragraphs 37 and 38 had never been handed down to the annual conferences—a fact which for the time I have forgotten, although the fact was stated in a report made to the general conference of 1914, by the "commission on the constitution," composed of Bishops Alpheus Wilson, James Atkins, William B. Murrah, Collins Denny and myself, and although the fact had been brought to the notice of the church by Hon. W. F. Barclay, a member and secretary of a previously appointed commission in a book published in 1902 and highly commended by Bishop John J. Tigert, who was the Book editor.

"When I reached Atlanta, on May 9, having many tasks to discharge, I asked Mr. William D. Thomson, one of the ablest Methodist lawyers in the south, to investigate the constitutionality of paragraphs 37 and 38 for me. This he kindly did, and after his careful investigation he handed me the following statement:

For the first time in the history of Methodism it becomes necessary to call a special session of the general conference. The novelty of this procedure has invited an examination of the method that should be adopted to render the called session of the conference legal.

Prior to 1808 such conferences had been mass conferences attended by all of the ministers of the church. In the last mass conference which was held in 1808, a plan for a representative general conference was adopted. The only reference to a called session of the conference incorporated in this plan, is contained in the following extracts from the journal of the meeting held Tuesday afternoon, May 24, 1808.

"Moved by Daniel Ostrander, and seconded by Ezekiel Cooper, that the general superintendents, with or by the advice of all the annual conferences, or, if there be no general superintendent, all the annual conferences respectively, shall have power to call a general conference, if they judge it necessary, at any time. Carried."

This motion, along with other motions adopted at the same session, has been since considered as the fundamental law governing representative general conferences, and indeed has often been spoken of as a part of the constitution of the Methodist church. The foregoing motion evidently did not intend to render it an easy matter to bring the general conference into special session, as no call could be issued until all of the annual conferences had first approved it.

Change in 1866.

No change was made in the above law until the conference of 1866, at which the report of a committee was adopted, which provided that 'the bishops or a majority of all the annual conferences shall have authority to call a general conference if they judge it necessary, at any time. When a general conference is called it shall be constituted of the delegates elected to the preceding general conference, except when any annual conference shall prefer to have a new election.

This action of the conference of 1866 was not submitted to the annual conference for ratification, although it involved a very radical and fundamental change in the law and gave the bishops the authority to impose on the church a called session of the general conference without consulting any of the annual conferences—whereas, previously any one annual conference could have prevented the call of the special general conference by declining to advise the same.

If the motion adopted at the conference of 1808 and first above set forth is to be treated as a part of the constitution of the church, and such seems to have been the generally accepted view of it. See: Manual of the Discipline, page 7, foot note 15; The Constitution of the M. E. Churches, by Barclay, pages 37 to 41; report of the commission on the constitution of the M. E. Church, South, page 29 (recommendation as to rule 37), it would seem that such a radical change as was proposed by the annual conferences, who were thus divested of what had theretofore been one of their fundamental rights.

It is to be noted that under the action of 1808, no provision was made as to who should constitute a called general conference. It was doubtless contemplated that inasmuch as the annual conference had to act affirmatively before such a session could be called, that they would in the event of their decision to advise the call of the general conference, at the same time elect delegates to such general conference. In other words, the called general conference was in effect the calling of a new body and not merely calling into a second session a general conference which had already held one regular session.

As this change of 1866 was not submitted to the annual conferences, it would seem that the attempt to thus amend the fundamental law had not been completed, and that the action of the general conference in adopting the proposed amendment was merely the first step toward bringing about the change—the second step in which was just as necessary and should have consisted in the approval of the annual conferences.

Two Constructions.

It would appear, therefore, in order to call a general conference at this time in a manner that would place its legality beyond doubt, necessary to follow the law as it unquestionably existed prior to 1866 and require the call to originate with the the annual conferences."

The change proposed in 1866 is probably capable of two constructions—one of which is extremely radical and the other of which is very much less radical and would preserve to the annual conferences a larger measure of the power that they unquestionably had prior to 1866.

Under the first construction, the bishops would have authority to call a general conference at any time that they might see fit without waiting for sessions of the annual conferences to intervene between the date of the issuance of the call and the date of the session of the general conference. If the conference is thus called by the bishops, it would necessarily be composed of the delegates elected to the last general conference as none of the annual conferences would have an opportunity to change their delegation even though they desired to do so. Any conference which had been created at the last regular session of the general conference would be without representative in the called session.

The other construction puts special stress on the provision giving to the annual conferences the right to elect new delegates to the called session of the general conference if they so desired. In order to give the annual conferences a chance to express such preference it must be implied that the bishops, in fixing the date of the session, should not fix it prior to the next session of all of the annual conferences. If the date is thus fixed subsequent to the session of the annual confeerences, the annual conferences have an opportunity to meet and consider the called session and instruct their delegates to the last general conference—or if they prefer, elect new delegates, who would go to the called session of the conference with a full knowledge of what action their conference desired taken.

In my opinion, therefore, the safest rule to be followed in calling the general conference, is to follow the law as it existed prior to 1866 (and it is probably still exist, because of failure to submit the action of 1866 to the annual conferences). If this is done, the call for the general conference and then be acted upon by the bishops pursuant to the advice of the annual conferences. New delegates to the conference will be selected by the annual conferences at the same time that they advise the call, if they should so desire.

If it is determined to act upon the law as now set out in the discipline, even though it has not been approved by the annual conferences, it is clearly best to construe said law conservatively rather than radically, and to fix the date of said conference at such time as will be subsequent to the next meeting of all of the annual conferences. For the bishops to give it the radical interpretation is to claim for themselves a power that will doubtless in some quarters be considered usurpation on their part for the result would be to deprive the annual conferences of the right to express a preference for a new delegation, and indeed to deprive one or more annual conferences of any representation at all in the general conference since such conferences were only created recently and have never yet elected delegates to a general conference.

Vital Importance.

The subject matter to be considered at the called session of the general conference, is of such vital importance and may be brought into question in the courts of so many different state jurisdictions as to render it absolutely necessary for the bishops in this case not to give to the law any interpretation about which there is doubt.

The action of the general conference of 1922 in instructing the bishops to call a special session of our general conference, is and probably was only intended to be merely advisory, as under no construction is the general conference itself given any power to call or to require the bishops to call a special session.

Being merely advisory it must be read in connection with the law of the church regarding called sessions of the general conference, as it could not be construed to advise the bishops to do an illegal thing. This advice of the general conference of 1922, would undoubtedly be complied with should the bishops fix the date of the session of the general conference at a time subsequent to the next meeting of all of the annual conference.

"I had copies of Mr. Thomson's paper made, and in perfect fairness I sent one to Bishop McMurry in advance of the meeting of the bishops on May 20.

"When the bishops met on May 20, this constitutional question was laid before them.

"It was shown that the chapter in the book of Discipline on the general conference has always been held by both branches of Episcopal Methodism in America as being of a constitutional nature since its adoption in 1808, and that it was so declared in the edition of the 'Manual of the Discipline' approved by the bishop as late as 1920.

"It was shown also that this view of the chapter was sustained by Bishops Soule, McKendree, McTyeire, Tigert and Merrill and was supported by Dr. J. M. Buckley and Bishop Thomas B. Neeley in their treatises on the constitution of Episcopal Methodism.

Change Undertaken.

"It was pointed out that in 1896 the northern general conference undertook to change the time of meeting of the general conference from the 'first day of May' to the 'first Wednesday in May,' and that it was found necessary to refer to the annual conferences even so small a change in the constitution as that.

"Particular attention was called to the very significent fact that the northern general conference of 1856, undertook to change the method of calling a special session of the general conference, and did actually pass a bill to that effect, but failed to refer the proposed change to the annual conferences; that this illegally adopted amendment was printed in their book of discipline from 1856 to 1900—44 years—when the error was discovered and corrected by the adoption of their revised constitution as it now exists.

"Of their illegal attempt in 1856 to change this feature of the constitution, Dr. Buckley says in his book on the construction, 'There is no evidence that this change was submitted to the annual conferences. It was, therefore, clearly a usurpation of power by the general conference to enact it and an imposition upon the church to change its discipline without authority.'

"Besides the statement of William D. Thomson, on the subject, Hon. Perry S. Rader, of Jefferson City, Mo., gave a full discussion of this constitutional question, but his opinion was not read to the college of bishops.

"I have been told that in reply to a letter by one of the majority by whom the extra session of the general conference was called, Hon. John T. Ellison, of Centreville, Ala., also pointed out that paragraphs 37 and 38, of edition of disclipline, 1922, had never been legally adopted; but no mention of his letter was made to the college of bishops.

Move by Dickey.

"Pending the discussion on May 20, Bishop Dickey, seconded by Bishop Darlington, moved to fix the date of the called session of the general conference for the first Wednesday in May, 1925, and against their motion the point of order was made by Bishop Mouzen that it could not be entertained without reconsideration of the action taken early in the session fixing the date not later than August 1, and that the motion to reconsider had been made once and defeated already. I ruled that the point was well taken, and the motion could not be made unless the former action was rescinded. No motion to rescind was made, it being evident that it would be voted down.

"Pending the discussion I said that I would agree to May 25, 1925 for the date of the extra session and would unite with all the bishops in earnestly urging the annual conferences to unite with us in making the call for the extra session of the general conference at that time. I expressed the confident belief that every one of the annual conferences would respond affirmatively to our urgent request, and that thereby all legal difficulties would be escaped and all other obstacles removed.

"But the called session was set for July 2, 1924, notwithstanding all arguments and appeals to the contrary.

When the final vote had been taken the bishops ordered the chairman and secretary (Candler and Denny) to frame the formal call, which we cheerfully agreed to do, provided it might be submitted to the bishops for approval or amendment when it had been framed.

"Accordingly at the night session of the college of bishops on May 20, the formal call was submitted, slightly amended and then unanimously approved. Thereupon I signed it as chairman and passed it to the secretary, Bishop Denny, for his signature, and he gave it publication in the usual way. He tells me that he did not feel free to give the official paper to any other newspaper in advance of giving it to the editor of the official organ of the church, The Christian Advocate; but that he gave to the representative of the morning paper in Nashville, The Tennessean, the fact of the call, which fact was published on the morning of May 21, and sent out the night of May 20, by the Associated Press to all the papers of that association in America. This was done before the statement made by Bishop Denny, Darlington, Dickey and myself was so much as written.

Decide on Statement.

"We four (Denny, Darlington, Dickey and Candler) remained in the room after the college of bishops adjourned and after consultation we decided that we ought to publish a statement, which statement I was requested to write. I then went aside and wrote it. When it was read to Bishops Denny, Darlington and Dickey, a few minor changes were suggested by them, which having been made, they affixed their signatures to the paper. As it was in my handwriting and I was obliged to leave Nashville early the next morning, I carried it to the city editor of The Tennessean about 11 or 12 o'clock that night, read it to him and requested its publication. He published it on the morning of May 21, in connection with an extended publication of the fact that the extra session had been called for July 2.

"This is a plain statement of fact about which there is nothing mysterious and nothing reprehensible.

"If we had made no statement many good people might have supposed that we approved the call, and especially so, in view of the fact that the bishops who ordered the call did not sign it (as I believe would have been better), and it was ordered published over the signatures of Bishop Denny and myself as secretary and chairman, neither of whom approved the call.

"Moreover we felt that it was due the church as well as ourselves, that the statement of the case, as we saw it, should be published.

"For one I should have felt I was remiss in a matter of plain duty, if the facts, as we stated them, had not been laid before the church.

"It is a matter of little importance how or when the statement we made was published.

"Nor is the position of any one or all of us with reference to the 'proposed plan of unification' the main issue.

The Real Issue.

"The real issue is: Was the call for an extra session on July 2 made legally and justly? Were paragraphs 37 and 38 of the discipline of 1922, under which the majority of the bishops assumed to act, ever legally inacted? Were they ever handed down by the general conference to the annual conferences for approval? If they were not (and no man will dare affirm that they ever were submitted to the annual conferences), they are not any part of the law of the church; the law of 1808 is still a part of the constitutional law of the church; and as such it should be respected and obeyed. Here is a plain matter of fact, which need not arouse any personal feeling or provoke any irritation whatsoever.

"The most ardent advocate of the proposed plan of unification, if he be wise, would not wish it adopted with even a color or cloud of illegality resting on the method of its adoption. Its most earnest opponent could not wish for it anything worse than its adoption under a process of doubtful legality.

"It is nothing to the purpose to say the very great men, who were members of the general conference of 1866, could not have blundered by failing to refer a constitutional amendment to the annual conferences. It is an indisputable fact that they did.

"One of them, Dr. William A. Smith, of Virginia, one of the mighiest among them, candidly confessed that he did thus blunder with respect to another most important amendment. He offered in the general conference of 1854 the measure providing for what is now called the bishop's "veto," which is found in paragraph 43 of discipline. The general conference of 1854 adopted the measure, but both Dr. Smith and the general conference overlooked the fact that it was necessary to refer it to the annual conferences. Nevertheless, it was inserted in the discipline of 1854. He says he intended to call up the matter at the general conference in 1858, but forgot to do so. It continued to appear in the discipline until 1870, although without authority. Dr. P. A. Peterson, in his "History of the Revisions of the Discipline" says of it: "This provision was inserted in 1854. But as it possessed the power and quality of a constitutional provision and had been adopted simply by a majority vote of the general conference, its validity was doubted. The matter was brought up in the general conference of 1866, but was not settled." By the general conference of 1870 it was referred to the committee on episcopacy, who reported that it was without authority and recommended the adoption of the proviso, as it now appears in the Discipline. The recommendation of the committee "received the constitutional majority of two-thirds and was sent down to the annual conferences for their concurrence, which was given."

"Thus it appears that a paragraph which was illegal and without authority continued to appear in the discipline from 1854 to 1870. But its author, Dr. W. A. Smith, with courage and candor declared it null and void, and the other great leaders in the conference of 1866 agreed with him, although both he and they failed in that conference to correct the blunder.

Blunder Undisguised.

"The great men, who composed the general conference of 1866, did not, for one moment, seek to disguise their blunder or to defend an unconstitutional amendment by pleading that it had become valid by its appearance in the Discipline for very many years without objection by any one. They were not men to indulge a spirit of lawlessness.

"The great leaders of 1866, among whom there was none greater than Dr. William A. Smith, of Virginia, were far too candid and clear-headed to claim that a constitution may be amended by the mere lapse of time, or by ignorance of the people, or by inadvertence of the law-makers.

"Were they living today they would unite in the honest confession that inadvertently they erred when they failed in 1866 to refer paragraphs 37 and 38 to the annual conferences, and they would declare those paragraphs to be without authority, and, therefore, null and void.

"All this I steadfastly believe. I believe also that even if those paragraphs had been constitutionally adopted, a true construction of them forbids the bishops fixing a time for a called session of the general conference in advance of the sessions of the annual conferences and, thereby, depriving them of their right of option under paragraph 38.

"I believe also that every legal difficulty in the way of a special session could have been escaped, as I have indicated; every objection on the score of what the Florida Christian Advocate has called "unnecessary and unseenly haste" could have been overcome; and the will of the general conference of 1922 done most fully if the called session had been set for the first Wednesday in May, 1925, and the annual conferences requested to approve that call for it.

"I do not believe the rights of the annual conferences with reference to this matter should have been denied them. Their rights are very sacred.

The "Previous Question."

"I do not believe that all our preachers and people should have been denied the opportunity to examine carefully and study deliberately the proposed plan of unification, about which there has been next to no discussion in the papers of the church, editors having been advised not to discuss it in advance of action upon it by the northern general conference.

"I do not think it just and right to 'call the previous question' on the whole church, and, thereby, restrict from full discussion a subject which should receive the fullest possible consideration, and about which the wishes of all our people should be consulted.

"I believe, therefore, the setting of the time for the called session of the general conference on July 2 was, and is, unwise, unjust and without authority of law.

"It pains me to differ with any of my colleagues, and ever since I was called to the office of bishop, I have endeavored to promote the harmony and maintain the unity of the college of bishops, often yielding most promptly my own opinions to the judgment of the majority of my colleagues.

"But in a matter so serious as that which now confronts the church, there seemed to me no other course for me to take than that which I have taken because I could not otherwise do faithfully what I conceived to be my duty.

"The unity of the college bishops would have been preserved by fixing the time of the called session for the first Wednesday in May, 1925, and for this I made an earnest appeal to my colleagues, but without avail.

Personal Reference.

"May I now in conclusion be allowed a brief personal word?

"I entered the ministry of my beloved church three months before I was 18 years of age. To its service I have given the undivided strength of my life for above forty and nine years. I have never taken a vacation, and during this period of nearly a half century I have preached on an average of more than three times a week. I have served missions, circuits, stations and districts, living in plain parsonages when I did not dwell in mine own hired house. I have done editorial and educational work. From no field of service to which I have been called by my church have I turned away. All my appointments I have accepted without complaint.

"As a bishop I have served some 26 years, and of all the effective bishops in American Methodism I have served longest.

"During all these toilsome years I have exercised myself to have always a conscience void of offense toward God and toward men. I have approached every duty in singleness of purpose and discharged it as well as I could. I have coveted no man's silver, nor gold, nor house, nor land, as I have gone in and out before my people; but I have endeavored to fulfill all my obligations unbiased and uninfluenced by any personal or selfish consideration. In the fear of God and in the love of men I have lived and labored for my church from youth to old age.

"My career is now drawing to a close, and its end may be nearer than I know.

Has Done Duty.

"But if I knew this were my last communication to the preachers and people of the church, which is more dear to me than life, I would solemnly declare, and I do now solemnly declare, that in all good conscience I have done my duty as God has given me to see it.

"In the matter now before the church, and which is discussed in this paper, I have done my duty kindly and faithfully without resorting to any sinister method or uncandid indirection. I have not considered what might be the consequences to me of the course of duty I have felt constrained to take.

"Notwithstanding recent personal attacks upon me, as unjust as they were unseemly, in the presence of my God, before whom I must appear for judgment, not many years hence at furthest, and before the preachers and people of my church, who have known my manner of life during all these years, I declare that in all I have done, or refused to do, I have acted from pure motives and with singleness of purpose. Above all things else I desire the welfare of my church, whose adversities have given me my sorest pangs and whose prosperity is ever my chief joy.

"And now my witness is in heaven and my record is on high beyond the reach of unjust imputations and unkind insinuations. There I leave it with serene confidence and perfect contentment.

LEE puncture-proof PNEUMATIC CORD TIRES

For Commercial Vehicle and Passenger Car

Successful operators in this and many other cities have solved their transportation problems and reduced tire expense by specifying Lee Puncture-Proof Cords.

If you will inquire, we will show you a list of the commercial car owners in this neighborhood, who are protected against waste of driver's time and broken delivery promises by using these tires.

As long as regular pneumatic casings, liable to injury, are used on delivery cars, the factor of possible delays and loss of driver's time must be reckoned with. The Lee Puncture-Proof is the only pneumatic tire which eliminates such costly factors—it is guaranteed against puncture and blowout.

Let us explain its many money-saving features.

3 layers of overlapping steel discs which never touch each other, protect the casing of this tire and make punctures and blowouts impossible.

Here we show what happens to a nail when it strikes a Lee Puncture-Proof and is stopped by the steel disc sheathing under the tread.

COMMENCEMENT HELD BY MARIST COLLEGE

Marist college has just closed one of its most successful years in the curriculum of the school. After spending one week in their annual encampment in military barracks on the Campbellton road, back of Fort McPherson, the entire corps returned to the city to complete the closing exercises of the school year.

Military closing exercises took place Wednesday afternoon. They consisted of competitive drills by various companies and squads, and competition in the manual of arms, followed by the regular military promenade. Four booths were erected on the campus, designating headquarters and the three military companies. These were presided over by the sponsors and maids of honor chosen by the cadet officers in command.

Exercises at Woman's Club.

Academic exercises took place on the following day at the Woman's club. These consisted of the following: Overture, by the Marist orchestra; remarks by the principal, Rev. Mark W. McElkearney; awarding of athletic honors by Joseph Bean, head coach; violin solo, by Allen Palmer, accompanied by Miss Helen Schaid; presentation of military awards by commandant, Captain E. R. E. Schmidt; awarding of medals and prizes by the principal; valedictory, by John Vincent Devitt, awarded the class medal for the highest average in the graduating class; conferring of diplomas and address by Rev. James A. Horton, president.

Memorial Hall At Georgia To Pay Honor to Heroes

Athens, Ga., June 7.—Forty-seven University of Georgia alumni who sacrificed their lives for their country during the world war are to be honored in the handsome memorial hall erected on the campus here. The building, said to be one of the finest in the south, is nearing completion and will be dedicated on Tuesday, June 17, alumni day, at the 124th university commencement.

The University of Georgia, according to official figures, sent more men to the colors per alumni and student body than any other American college, and those who returned after they had answered the call of their country were quick to take action to erect a monument to the memory of their comrades who surrendered their all on the altars of patriotism and love of country.

Such heroes are preserved in memory by shafts of marble or boulders of stone too often, which is itself fine, but to erect a great building for the use of generations of Georgia sons and daughters yet unborn and dedicate it to the memory of the sons of "Old Georgia," those whose loyalty, valor and patriotism is unquestioned, is a greater tribute still, leaders say.

On Tuesday, June 17, the building, located midway between the university and the State College of Agriculture campuses, will be dedicated. It will be delivered by the million-dollar fund managers to the board of trustees, and the event will be one of the greatest in the history of the oldest state university in the world.

Two simple bronze tablets, mounted in alcoves in the entrance of the building, will carry the names of the honored heroes—47 of them.

The honor list follows:

Class of 1880, Frederick Grady Hodgson.
Class of 1887, Rufus Benjamin Clarke.
Class of 1896, Joseph Brown Connally.
Class of 1907, Frank Butner Clay, Clyde Hugh Lee, Henry Lee and Jewell Williams.
Class of 1908, Clarence Hull Dobbs and Samuel Guy Strickland.
Class of 1910, James Alpheus Anderson and Ezalbert Talmadge Miller.
Class of 1912, James Allen Etheridge, Ray Edgar Lanham and Wilbur Oglesby.
Class 1913, Allen Randolph Fleming, Jr., Joseph Morris Neel, Jr., and James Thorpe Rayle.
Class 1914, Calvin George, Allen Napoleon Keiffer, Walter Hill Levie, Macon Caldwell Overton and Paul Thomas Settles.
Class 1915, Chester Price Adair, Carl Goldsmith, Robert Jenkins Griffith, Covington Drake Jenkins, Percival Connally Jones, Justus Erwin Owens, Wilbur Stuart Sewell and Young Hall Smith.
Class 1916, Henry Warren Brown, Erwin David Shaw and Trygue Johann Tolnas.
Class 1917, Tom Reed Beasley, Elliott Muse Braxton, Jr., Howell Burnett Cobb, Beverly Daniel Evans, Jr., Henry Thomas Gillespie, Yoel Lyons Joel, Edmund Brewer Tate, Hugh Miller Willett, Jr., and Marion Footman Wilson.
Class 1918, Robert James Cochran, Vergil Guerry Craig, John Leon Derrick, Homer Gentry and Robert Henry Leonard.
Class 1919, Paul Bryan Minter.

Inscribed over each tablet in Latin is: "Bonum certamen certavi; cursum consummavi; fidem servavi," which means in English, "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my career; I have kept my faith."

COPE ENTERS RACE FOR LEGISLATURE

Channing Cope, young Atlanta business man, Saturday announced that he is a candidate for one of the three Fulton county seats in the state legislature.

Mr. Cope, who is 30 years old, has resided in Atlanta for 10 years. He was an officer in the United States merchant marine for several war years, commencing his service before America entered the conflict and frequently ran the German ocean blockades. He is a former newspaperman.

In announcing his candidacy Mr. Cope said that one of the chief planks in his platform would deal with taxation. He asserts that the need for tax reduction is apparent on all sides, and draws particular attention to the crying necessity for action which will end the situation under which Fulton county pays more than one-fifth of the state's total tax revenue, directly, and a much greater proportion if indirect taxation is considered.

"With the addition of emergency taxes and special taxes," said Mr. Cope, "the citizens of Fulton are paying even more than 20 per cent of the state's tax money. If I should be elected, this fact would be uppermost in my mind at all times and I would make every effort to return to Fulton county, for use on her own schools, roads and public institutions, as much as possible of the funds she now supplies for distribution elsewhere."

Mr. Cope added that he was not for "economy at the expense of progress," but asserted his conviction that a great deal of genuine reform could be accomplished which would reduce the tax burden.

COUNCIL CEMETERY PROBERS TO HOLD PUBLIC MEETING

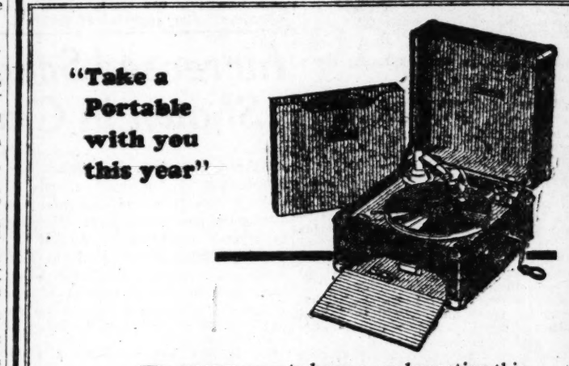

Public hearing on protests against the proposed Oak Grove cemetery in Fulton county north of Atlanta will be held at 8 o'clock Thursday night by the special committee of city council appointed to decide what attitude the city government should take in the controversy. The committee was appointed to learn whether city of Atlanta interests, especially the water supply, would be affected by establishment of the new cemetery.

LAST SERVICES HELD FOR DR. J. B. BAIRD

Funeral services for Dr. James B. Baird, prominent physician, who died Friday at the Georgian Terrace, were held at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon from the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son, with Rev. C. B. Wilmer officiating. Interment was in West View.

Pallbearers were Dr. W. P. Nicholson, Dr. W. S. Elkin, Dr. E. L. Connally, Dr. C. T. Brockett, Dr. L. M. Crichton, Judge George L. Bell, Judge H. M. Reid and Mr. Redus.

Dr. Baird, who was 75 years old, was formerly professor of principles and practices of medicine and dean of the faculty of the Southern Medical college, and a member of the faculty of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, which is now the medical department of Emory.

MARSAL WILL TRY TO FORM CABINET

BY JOHN O'BRIEN.

Paris, June 7.—Francois Marsal, minister of finance under Premier Poincare, has accepted the premiership of France.

Marsal was summoned to the Elysee after a day of disorders in the chamber of deputies, and offered the post left vacant by Poincare, who resigned as premier following the recent elections.

Marsal will carry a message from President Millerand to the chamber, and it is understood that Millerand, who has thus far withstood the united assaults of the left wing, will resign if the chamber returns a vote against his proposal.

Bobbed Blond, Who Left For Florida Job, Missing

:: ASK AID IN QUEST FOR GEORGIA STENOGRAPHER ::

Irene Parrish, Statesboro stenographer, who has been missing since April 7.

Statesboro, Ga., June 7.—(Special.) Bulloch county officials today asked aid of police in Florida and other sections of the southeast in locating Irene Parrish, 22-year-old bobbed haired stenographer, who has been missing from her home here since April 7. After fruitless efforts her family and friends have asked officers to take up the futile quest for the young woman, which they have conducted quietly since her disappearance.

An air of mystery surrounds the leaving of her home to accept a "better position in Florida," and efforts to locate her there have been unfailingly unsuccessful. A note addressed to Joe Parrish, her father, and a prominent planter of Bulloch county, is the only clue to work on. The missive was mailed at Garfield. It said that she would wire when she learned what her permanent address would be. No wire or other communication has come. The note warned the family "not to worry about me."

Miss Parrish was employed by a local law firm as a stenographer. The day before she left that night, she is said to have confided in associates at the office, and to have asked them to say nothing to members of the family because they might object to her leaving.

She is described by her father as being 22 years old; height, 5 feet 3 inches; weight, 125 pounds; blue eyes and light bobbed hair.

She wore a ruby ring, a signet ring and a wrist watch.

The family will appreciate any information concerning her.

Georgia Women Prominent At Federation Sessions

BY JEAN CAMPBELL.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 7.—(Special.)—Among the outstanding social events of the convention of the General Federation of Women's clubs in session here, will be a dinner and reception to be given Monday by the Georgia delegation. The dinner will be in honor of Mrs. Winter, the retiring president of general federation, and will be an important function. The reception, in which the Florida delegation will join, will be given in honor of Mrs. W. T. Jennings, first vice president, in the gallery of the Biltmore hotel following the evening session. The Georgians will be guests of the Los Angeles Friday Morning club at a tea to be given next week in the organization's new club house.

The Georgians are playing a prominent part in the convention and owing to their decision to attend every session as a unit are always conspicuously present. Mrs. J. E. Hays, has won general recognition for her wit and magnetic personality and is being mentioned as presidential timber of the future.

Between sessions the Georgians are enjoying many social attentions and the sights of the section.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hooks, of Gordon, were guests today of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Smith of Kentucky, on an auto tour through the orange groves. Mrs. Melton Jones, of Rome, with Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, attended the Hollywood Bowl concert Saturday night, hearing Madam Galli-Curci.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson enjoyed a luncheon as the guest of Colleen Moore, Atlanta Cinema star, at her Hollywood studio Saturday.

A party leaving Los Angeles harbor for Catalina Island Sunday includes Mrs. Charles Haden, Mrs. Samuel Inman, Mrs. Frank Inman, Mrs. Charles Crenshaw, Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Miss Sara Farrar and Miss Rosa Woodberry.

Mrs. Charles Toll is entertaining Mrs. M. Lorenz at a luncheon Monday. Mrs. Willoughby Rodman and Mrs. Lorenz entertained with Princess Cantacuzene, granddaughter of President Grant, house guests at Mrs. Hancock Banning's country estate.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson will be guests of relatives living in Los Angeles, during the coming week.

Mrs. E. R. Crenshaw and members of the flower lovers' division of the Atlanta Woman's Club are invited to a private showing of the exquisite sunken gardens surrounding the estate of friends of the Lorenz family, declared to be a wonderful horticultural achievement.

DELEGATES SEE FILM STARS ACT.

Los Angeles, June 7.—Today was play-day for the biennial Federation of Women's Clubs arranged by the local entertainment committee.

Excursions to the beaches, mountain resorts, motion pictures and Catalina were enjoyed by the delegates and visitors attending the convention. The majority of the club-women crowded the motion picture "lots" where they were guests of producers, directors and stars. Actual work of taking pictures was under way and the visiting women had an opportunity to see many film stars in action.

An "early California fiesta," recalling scenes of Spanish days under the auspices of the Ebell club of Los Angeles, featured the evening's entertainment. Six hundred delegates who received invitations to the affair were taken back to the romantic days when sandaled padres tread the road to Monterey.

COMPLETE CHECK-UP PLACES DEAD AT 14

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 7.—Complete check-up of fatalities in the gas explosion at the Loomis colliery of the Glen Alden Coal company today placed the death list at 14, all of whom were identified. Three bodies that had been missing were recovered early in the day and brought to the surface.

A preliminary survey by state mine inspectors developed that six of the men died from suffocation. Three others, killed by the explosion, were within 50 feet of safety, it was reported. Because of the condition of the mine, it was stated no attempt would be made to ascertain the cause of the blast until Monday.

Tech Senior Class Will Hear Baccalaureate Sermon Today

A round of brilliant social events during the past three days, interspersed with the more business-like features of graduation, has marked the graduation program of seniors of the Georgia School of Technology. With the baccalaureate sermon at the First Baptist church at 11 o'clock this morning and the commencement exercises proper Monday, graduation festivities will come to an end.

Mr. M. Ashby Jones, pastor of Ponce de Leon Baptist church, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon, as his brother, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the Second Baptist church, who had been selected, is ill. Tech seniors and members of the faculty will follow their annual custom of gathering on the steps of the state capitol at 10 o'clock, forming the "senior procession" to the church to hear the baccalaureate address.

$100,000 for Chemistry Addition.

At the annual meeting of the board of trustees Saturday expenditure of $100,000 for erection of an addition to the chemistry building was authorized and President M. L. Brittain was instructed to proceed with plans and sepecifications toward completion of the building.

Money for the building will come from the "Greater Tech Fun." The new addition will be modern in every way and equipped throughout with the most modern necessities.

The meeting was held in the offices of President Brittain, and was featured by the reading of the annual report by former Governor N. E. Harris, chairman of the board of trustees, who brought out that the graduating class this year is the largest in the history of that institution and exceeds in number any senior class ever graduated in the state. Trustees went on record as being gratified with results of the closing term and adjourned after approval of the graduation roll, and completion of other business of a routine nature.

Monday Is Busy Day.

A meeting of the Alumni association will be held at 9 o'clock Monday morning, with commencement exercises, delivery of diplomas and special ceremonies, marking the end of the school year, coming at 10 o'clock. In the afternoon, the annual baseball game and golf tournament will be staged, with the senior promenade at 7 o'clock. At 9 o'clock Monday night the Pan-Hellenic dance will be staged as the formal closing event. This affair ordinarily is one of the most brilliant social events of the season in Atlanta, and the Monday night affair promises to eclipse all previous Pan-Hellenic dances.

In addition to the large list of graduates, the following have won special honors during their four years at Tech:

Increased School Attendance Shown in Georgia Statistics

Athens, Ga., June 7.—(Special.)—Enrollment in the high schools of Georgia has increased 355 per cent during the past seven years, according to records compiled by Dr. R. P. Brooks, alumni secretary of the University of Georgia. This growth has been due to the leadership of the University of Georgia through its department of secondary education, it is pointed out.

Dr. Brooks has prepared a chart which outlines the number of students in high schools of Georgia in 1911-12 until the present year. In 1911-12 there were from 4,000 to 8,000 students in the high schools, and this number has increased steadily until in 1922-23 there were 45,000 students in Georgia high schools.

War a Stimulant.

The same chart shows enrollment of students in the University of Georgia since 1908, when 500 were registered, until 1923-24 term, when slightly over 1,600 were enrolled. For the first ten years since 1908 there was very little growth. As late as 1917 there were not 800 students in the university, but since the war the number has doubled. In 1918-19 the number jumped to nearly 1,200 as against less than 800 in 1917-18. Last term the university registered a little more than 1,600 students.

However, as favorable as this showing is, the facts are that fewer high school graduates are entering the university than in 1911 in proportion to the number graduated. For instance, the chart points out in 1910, 2,000 students were graduated. One of these in 14 entered the university. In 1922-23 high schools of Georgia graduated 8,000 students, and only one in 20 entered the university. The institution could not accommodate them.

Poor Students Barred.

Some striking figures concerning the maintenance of the university are quoted by Dr. Brooks, who is also dean of the school of commerce.

In 1908 the university and State College of Agriculture received from the state the sum of $80,000 and in 1920-21 $165,000. The amount then slipped back to $160,000 for both institutions, at a "time when the attendance of the university was increasing 230 per cent and the teaching staff 200 per cent, and when the cost of the services and supplies utilized by the institution was advancing as never before in history, the state increased the annual maintenance by only 100 per cent. It was impossible to defray the cost of conducting the institution on this meager income.

"The burden has been placed on the students in the form of heavy tuition fees. In fifteen years fees have increased five-fold. This means that the poorer boys and girls find it more and more expensive to attend the university. The state is not living up to its doctrine of free public education," Dr. Brooks points out.

Florence E. Bamberger, associate professor of education in Johns Hopkins university has been promoted to full professor.

A New Type of Low Price Car is Ready to be Announced

If you are considering the purchase of an automobile—WAIT!

In seven days there will be offered to the public a new type of motor car—one that represents many months' closely guarded research on the part of a prominent manufacturer.

"One Shot"

This phrase will be on every tongue for months to come.

It marks the end of a grimy, greasy, ever-distasteful task that is costly to neglect.

It marks the end of the oil can and the grease gun.

It is the name of an exclusive feature on a car that will make motoring history.

What is it? Next week's advertisement tells all.

This will mark one of the great epochs in the development of the automobile.

It will be a six cylinder car of distinguished appearance, comparatively light in weight, yet extraordinarily strong and enduring.

It will be powered by a new type of motor which provides a range of hill and highway performance that is unique in the light of existing design.

Its owners will never be compelled to use an oil can or grease gun on any chassis part.

It will have as standard equipment—at no extra cost—genuine supersize balloon tires; and as optional equipment, four-wheel brakes of the most advanced design.

It will bear a name now known and respected wherever motor cars run.

It will be manufactured as a unit in a plant that is uncommon in size and unexcelled in the completeness of its equipment.

In view of this, we feel justified in urging all to withhold until next week any definite decision to purchase any motor car—however costly, however inexpensive.

A large advertisement appearing in this publication one week hence will reveal complete details and state where this truly marvelous new car may be seen.

PARDON IS SOUGHT FOR EX-POLICEMAN

Notice that an application for pardon for E. C. Stigall, former Atlanta policeman, now serving a 15-year term for manslaughter, will be made before the Georgia prison commission, was posted Saturday at Fulton county courthouse. Stigall was sentenced after he had fatally shot W. H. Hames, a private detective.

Branch and Howard, law firm which conducted Stigall's defense, will seek the pardon, it was stated in the notice which was posted by Attorney J. Walter LeCraw, of that firm.

Hearing on the application probably will not be held before July, Attorney LeCraw declared, in view of the fact that 30 days must elapse after posting of the notice before the commission can take the application up, under the Georgia law. The attorney said it was desired to have a hearing before the pardon board on the first Monday in July, though the board would not be asked to take it up out of its regular order.

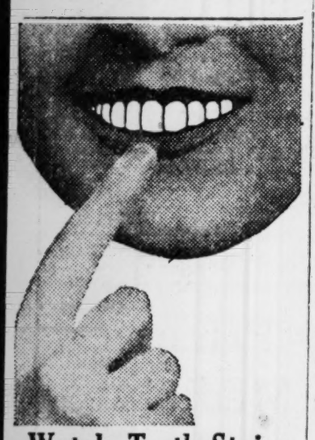

Stigall was indicted for murder and the prosecution, in a sensational trial that lasted almost a week, sought for the extreme penalty of the law. The jury, nowever, found the defendant guilty of voluntary manslaughter and he was sentenced to 15 years. The defense claimed that the shooting was in self-defense.

The crime occurred at Houston and Courtland streets and Ernest Stanton and J. H. Kirk, companions of the slain man, were wounded by the same gun that took Hames' life. Stigall surrendered to city officers after the affray.

May Sell Home.

Prior to the notice that a pardon would be sought, the most recent development in connection with the case was when attorneys for Stigall filed application for a temporary restraining order to prevent the Security Trust company from selling his home. This order was granted in Fulton courts but Sheriff James L. Lowry was ordered to re-advertise the house for sale on Saturday, simultaneously with the posting of the pardon notice. It is claimed by trust company officials that payments on the home are past due.

Splendid Medical Attention Given Vets at Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., June 7.—In its report today to the surgeon general of the United Confederate Veterans, the medical committee, which operated four emergency hospitals here during the reunion of the veterans this week, complimented local hospitals, physicians, nurses and boy scouts for their cooperation with the committee in taking care of the feeble men in gray.

The report stated the committee had at its call constantly during the reunion a force of 150 physicians and surgeons, more than 100 trained nurses, a dozen ambulances and facilities of four hospitals. Internes and nurses from two of the hospitals, as well as ambulance attendants, volunteered their services for day and night watches in the emergency hospitals stationed in or near the city auditorium, where the reunion was held, and the barracks where thousands of the veterans slept.

Only four veterans remained in hospitals tonight. One of them, H. Q. Rogers, of Ward, S. C., was reported seriously ill of pneumonia. Only two of the 4,000 veterans who came here for the reunion died during the great gathering of the gray hosts. They were H. F. Brack, of Austin, Texas, who died suddenly shortly after his arrival, and E. F. Small, of Atlanta, who died of shock resulting from a fall in which he suffered a broken shoulder.

The committee declared that the aid of the boy scouts, who served as escorts for the feeble veterans, "undoubtedly prevented many minor and possibly major accidents."

Taxpayers' League Sounding Members On School Taxes

Sentiment of the 2,000 members of thee Taxpayers' league toward the proposed one-mill tax levy to finance schools through November and December is being sounded and the league may announce definitely its attitude toward the levy during this week, Frank A. Weldon, executive secretary, stated Saturday night.

The league was organized, he said, after the school board had made its formal request for independent tax levying power in April. It was intended to protect the interests of property owners from undue tax burdens. Since abandonment of the independent school board tax levy plan, the league has been observing a policy of "watchful waiting" with a view to supporting efforts toward public economy and opposing unnecessary expenditures and taxes.

braiding the the Japanese present, numbering about 150, the ronin accused them of "associating with foreigners in a frivolous amusement when their nation was insulted and in danger."

Time for Action.

The handbills bore the signature "Great Forward association," and read:

"This is not a time for discussion, but a time for action. Now is the time for the young men of the empire to rise."

"1. We demand deportation of all Americans.

"2. We demand boycott of American motion pictures.

"3. We demand boycott of all American goods.

"4. We demand prohibition of the entrance of Americans into Japan and abrogation of all Japanese-American treaties.

"5. We demand abolition of the evil of dancing, which is ruining our country."

After the demonstration, all Japanese left the hotel.

Jefferson Caffery, charge d'affaires of the American embassy, and several other members of the embassy staff were among witnesses of the affair.

Language Insulting.

The Imperial hotel is the nerve-center of the community so far as Japanese and foreigners are concerned, which may be the reason for the staging of the demonstration there.

While the speeches of the ronin echoed the sentiments on the handbills, they were couched in the most vulgar and insulting language.

The demonstration has created a most profound impression in official circles and in the foreign community which, up to now, had not directly felt the effect of the undoubtedly rising bitterness toward America.

OLD CABINET ASKED TO HOLD OVER.

Tokio, June 7.—Command of Prince Regent Hirohito that the Kiyoura cabinet remain in office until relieved was received by the premier tonight. Members of the cabinet expressed the opinion that it would be several days before their successors were named. The cabinet's resignation was presented at 4 p. m., today.

Almost at the same time the regent's command was delivered to Premier Kiyoura, an imperial messenger left for Kiyota, presumably to consult Prince Saionji, one of the two remaining Elder Statesmen, whose opinion always is sought before a new government is formed.

Marquis Matsukata, the other of the Elder Statesmen, already was in Tokio tonight. Prince Saionji has been detained in Kiyota by his illness.

Refusal of the prince regent to accept the cabinet's resignation at once was in keeping with Japanese government traditions, custom prescribing that such resignations never should be accepted until the successor is named.

WASHINGTON ALARMED OVER SITUATION.

Washington, June 7.—While administration authorities here lacked official advices tonight telling of the disorders in Tokio reported in press dispatches, they plainly showed concern over the general situation, which has developed since the exclusion provision of the immigration act became a law.

The conviction was found everywhere that the Japanese government would take prompt and adequate measures to protect Americans. It was pointed out hat the acts of these elements should in no sense be accepted as reflecting the attitude of the Tokio government.

In this connection, it was recalled that Ambassador Hanihara, in handing to Secretary Hughes the protest of his government, was instructed to express confidence that the communication would be received "in the same spirit of friendliness and candor" in which it had been made.

KIYOURA TAKES BLAME FOR DIPLOMATIC BLUNDER.

Tokio, June 7.—While the outstanding reason for the cabinet's resignation is the defeat of its supporting parties in the elections, it is understood Premier Kiyoura also accepts responsibility for a "diplomatic blunder" in connection with the exclusion of Japanese immigrants from the United States. If Kiyoura had been able to command a majority of representatives in the diet, it is said, he would have insisted that his predecessors in the prime ministry, Admiral Baron Tomosuburo Kato and Admiral Count Gombei Yamamoto, share the responsibility for this event, but since he must leave office in any case, it is believed he is willing to shoulder the blame and thus clear the way for his successor.

68TH CONGRESS IS ADJOURNED

was the senate Daugherty committee, whose plans to resume sessions in midsummer went awry because Chairman Brookhart failed to obtain opportunity to call up an authorizing resolution drafted for that purpose.

Coolidge at Capitol.

An hour before the final fall of the gavels on the presiding officers' desks in senate and house, President Coolidge went to his room in the capitol to affix his signature to last-minute legislation. He signed a number of bills and received there the senate and house committees appointed to notify him of the adjournment.

After it had disposed of deficiency bill and its reclamation rider, the house twiddled its thumbs during the last half hour of the session but in the senate partisan strife contributed its dramatic note until the very end.

Senator Walsh tried early in the day to secure action on the oil report but Senator Spencer, republican, Missouri, objected to a vote until he had opportunity to state at length his objections to it. Despite democratic charges of a filibuster, he talked for more than two hours and when he had finished Senator Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, obtained the floor to make a fight for farm relief.

Smoot Renews Filibuster.

No sooner had the South Dakota senator moved to attach a wheat export bounty provision to a pending house bill, however, than Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, launched into a speech of more than a half hour on the financial record of the administration. That aroused a debate which continued until the deficiency bill, with the reclamation provisions as amended in the house, came up under privileged status.

The item whose elimination aroused Senator Pittman was the appropriation of $800,000 for the project at Spanish Springs, Nevada. Gaining recognition a half hour before the time set for adjournment, he announced the bill never would become a law until this item was reinserted.

Several others, including some of his best friends on the democratic side, pleaded with him in vain to withdraw his objection and take his seat. The tension in the chamber increased as the hands of the venerable senate clocks slowly approached the deadline and disorder became so pronounced that Democratic Leader Robinson suggested the sergeant-at-arms "be instructed to restore and maintain order."

Adjourns in Bedlam.

With only a minute left, Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, then moved that the emergency resolution passed five minutes before by the house be adopted, but Senators Borah and King immediately demanded to be heard. While they were shouting for recognition, President Cummins announced the senate had adjourned.

The house, however, failed to go through with its program to adjourn at 7 o'clock. Five minutes before that hour was reached, Representative Longworth, the republican leader, proposed a 15-minute recess. The hands of the clock opposite the speaker's dais were turned back, but when word of the senate adjournment was received, the house followed suit.

King Blocks Navy Bill.

Although Chairman Warren of the senate appropriations committee insisted that authority to make the necessary expenditures to put the bonus into operation could only be provided by a special session of congress, other leaders of the senate and house did not agree with him.

The partially-enacted status of the deficiency bill caused some senators to contend that the federal bureaus to which appropriations would have gone were justified in proceeding with the expenditures of funds, and then reporting a deficiency to the next congress.

It was Senator King who also blocked the navy department's bill for cruisers and battleship improvements. It had been passed by both house and senate, but the Utah senator had a motion to reconsidr npeedgnitharoi motion to reconsider pending and he served notice just in the tail-end of the session that if an attempt were made to take it up he would require at least four hours to present his objections.

House Just Drifted.

The house drifted along listlessly during the day but as the wind-up approached there was more activity, marked by a break in the ranks of the "drys" for the first time since the arrival of prohibition.

Representative Cramton, republican, Michigan, proposed that teeth be put in the prohibition enforcement investigation to be conducted during the recess by the alcoholic liquor traffic committee, by giving it two clerks, and permission to hold sessions away from Washington. Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, who previously had stood shoulder to shoulder with Mr. Cramton and other "drys" on prohibition, opposed the proposal, referring to the inquiry as a "lot of nonsense." The committee, which until recently had not held a session for five years and is without a clerical force, he declared, was aiming to do some junketing during the summer, and he insisted that its investigation could no more than duplicate one which will be undertaken by a senate committee.

Whoops Greet Gavel.

The Cramton resolution was rejected, 153 to 85, many "drys" joining with members who have persistently worked for modification of the Volstead act in snowing the measure under. Immediately afterwards and without debate, the house adopted a resolution authorizing its veterans

Tax Cut on Democratic Plan.

The Mellon tax bill was born during the session, only to be discarded for the Simmons-democratic plan, which President Coolidge signed after disapproving some of its provisions.

The drastic immigration law, including its Japanese exclusion provision, was placed on the statute books.

The soldier bonus law was enacted, vetoed and reenacted over the veto. The Bursum pension bill for civil war veterans met executive disapproval, as did the postal salaries increase bill.

Farm Bills Fail.

Farm legislation, embodied in half a dozen measures which were put into shape early in the session, failed of enactment, although efforts were continued for it up to the last hour.

Likewise, no railroad legislation of great importance was placed on the statute books. This legislation, however, and much other were put into positions where they can be taken up at the next session with much of the work of hearings and investigation completed.

Muscle Shoals, a question which has been in the forefront now for many months, once more went over for settlement at the December session.

Insurgents Were Factor.

One of the important factors in the work of the session was the balance of power held by the insurgent group headed by Senator La Follette, republican, Wisconsin. This group, by reason of the close relation between the democrats and republicans in both houses, wielded a powerful influence. Joining with the democrats, it seated a democrat, Senator Smith, South Carolina, as the head of the senate interstate commerce committee. In the house, again joining with the democrats, it forced a revision of the rules.

The constitutional right of congress to investigate government departments was never exercised to a greater extent Beginning early with the Teapot Dome inquiry, senate committees investigated Attorney General Daugherty, the internal revenue bureau, Russian recognition, the election of Senator Mayfield of Texas, the existence of propaganda touching the United States' foreign relations, charges of land frauds in Texas, medical diploma "mills" and many other subjects.

On the house side the shipping board, the bureau of engraving and printing, prohibition and many other such subjects were inquired into.

Reports on the oil investigation have been submitted, but on most of the others findings have yet to be made public.

IF SICK TODAY! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

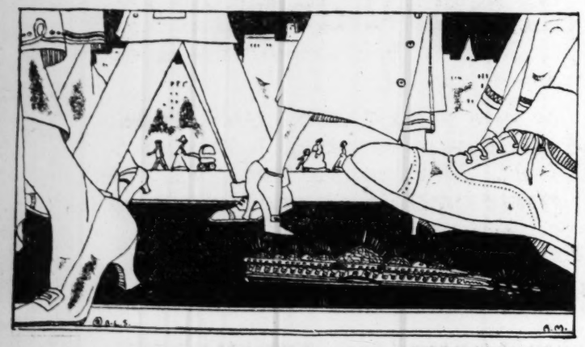

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to buy a bottle for a few cents and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel just go back to the store and get your money back.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your thirty feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused by a torpid liver as quickly as a dose of vile, nauseating calomel, besides it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones, often causing rheumatism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it cannot salivate. Give it to the children because it doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver. Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work. —(adv.)

It Happens Every Day

Thoughts of a Lost Diamond Pin—

"This is terrible—being stuck away in some strange man's pocket. It's dark and close in here and I'm half covered with smelly tobacco. Awful!

"I'll never get over this experience—lying in the dust on a street corner and having that policeman step on me and bend my back almost double! Oh dear!

"I don't suppose I'll ever see my owner again. She must be crying her eyes out over losing me. She was very fond of me. Oh, I'm miserable!

"There, that's better. He's just pulled me out into the fresh air again. What's that? He has The Constitution in his other hand. He says I must be the pin, all right—that he might as well take me around there right away. What's he talking about?

"Now I know what's up! I feel like a new pin already. I'm going home to my owner! She advertised for me in the Lost and Found column of The Constitution.

"I might have known that!"

Decatur School Girl Is Winner In Essay Contest

Rosalthe Sanders, 17, senior in Decatur High school, is winner of the high school essay prize offered by Mrs. Albert Thornton for the best essay on the Atlanta Art association exhibition. Mabel Stephens, 11, student of Oakhurst school, and Marvin Sledd, 11, student in Glenwood school, won the two prizes offered for essays by grade school students.

"The Works of Art I Liked Best, and Why," was the topic provided for the contest. Essays were judged by Miss Ruth Northen and Mrs. Henry Todd, representing the Art association, and James A. Hollomon, of The Constitution, representing the Writers' club. Essays in each class were judged both for literary merit and knowledge of art shown. The three prizes, each of $10, were given by Mrs. Thornton to stimulate interest in work of local artists on the part of school children. The contest was open to high and grade school students in all schools in Atlanta and suburbs.

COMMENCEMENT HELD AT BRENAU COLLEGE

Monday morning marked the last number of the program for the Brenau college commencement season of 1924. Dr. H. J. Pearce delivered the annual graduating address and gave a scholarly talk on "Where the Blue Begins." After the annual address the degrees were conferred by Dr. T. J. Simmons to the following young ladies: Misses Carolyn Allen, Ellen Asbury, Martha Bell, Ethel Bowers, Amy Burbage, Franke Byers, Rachel Deryder, Ruth Dickerson, Frances Farrell, Kathleen Gaines, Hilda Goldberger, Sara Hanahan, Susie Pearl Hill, Ruth Houston, Verda Jarrell, Carolyn Martin, Carolyn Newton, Elizabeth Parker, Polly Powell, Grace Stovall, Hettie Whitfield, Catherine Wilkerson, Aline Eden, Myrtis Fails, Iris Lendrum, Margaret Murphree, Olive Wills, Mary Bailey, Emet Garner, Lucile Horton, Elizabeth Pekor, Eleanor Reid, Mavis Scott, Evelyn Sparks, Mildred Strickland, Grace Everest, Marion Griffin, Virginia Hodges, Mary Lou Bell, Aline Dickerson.

The annual alumnae meeting which was held Saturday morning in the assembly hall proved most interesting. Mrs. William Carlisle presided, with Mrs. Latimer Rudolph acting as recording secretary in the absence of the secretary. The discussion of plans for raising a sum toward the endowment fund met with much enthusiasm. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

Mrs. Williams Owens, Atlanta, president; Mrs. Hayne Palmour, vice president, Gainesville; Mrs. P. E. B. Robertson, treasurer, Gainesville, and Miss Nelle Reece as recording and corresponding secretary, Gainesville.

Particularly lovely was the annual alumnae banquet which was given on Saturday in the Brenau dining room. Small tables were placed around the sides of the large dining hall, and in the center was the beautifully decorated speaker's table. The college colors were carried out in the shaded gold lights and soft glow from gold candles. The almond cups were also in gold with black ribbon bows. The center of each table held a basket of sweet peas.

At the speaker's table were seated Mrs. William Owens, of Atlanta, toastmistress; Mrs. Karl Brittain, Atlanta; Mrs. Omar Elder, Atlanta; Miss Ruth Carr Benson, Atlanta; Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Pearce, Col. and Mrs. H. H. Perry, Misses Mavis Scott, Sara Hanahan, Elizabeth Webb, Katherine Dozier, Grace Everset, Ione Parkinson, Eleanor Reid, Dr. T. J. Simmons.

TWO NEW CARUSO RECORDS FEATURE VICTOR RELEASE

Something of mingled regret and pleasure strikes one at hearing two new Victor records by Caruso; regret that the great tenor no longer can still be heard through records such as these. His latest are two Neapolitan songs that vividly recall the great voice, tragic, melodious and magnificently sombre. "Scordame" (Forget Me) is full of melody. "Senza Nisciuno" (Forsaken) is almost Beethoven in its harmonies.

The fitness of things is fulfilled by Orville Harrold's record of "On the Banks of the Wabash." Indiana is the tenor's birthplace, and this now world-known melody by Paul Dresser has been selected by the Hoosiers for their official song. On the other side is "Way Down in Old Indiana," by the same author.

Everything Rachmaninoff does is worth special hearing, and his two latest records are Chopin's "Mazurko in C Sharp Minor" and Henselt's "Were I a Bird."

Giannini Dusolina sings two records this week, two lovely Italian songs. They are "In Mezo a Mar" (Out Seawards and "Fa la Nana Bambin" (Rock-a-bye, Baby Mine).

The newest dance music is Whiteman's contribution, "Spain," a tango fox trot, and "Carmen" fragments. "Mr. Radio Man" is on the other side.

The Virginians run true in "Bringin' Home the Bacon." It is "post-jazz" throughout, and so is "Shine" on the other side, worth studying if you like to analyze, but particularly worth dancing.

Atlanta Veterans Express Thanks For Reunion Trip

BY JOHN H. HEWLETT.

The special Pullman which last Monday carried 25 Confederate veterans of the Old Soldiers' Home to the reunion in Memphis returned to Atlanta Saturday with its cargo of beloved remnants of Lee's army.

The reunion is over.

As is their annual custom, many of the veterans visited The Constitution on their return and expressed appreciation of the kindnesses shown them while they were on their trip. They adopted resolutions thanking railroad companies, various organizations and the many individuals who made possible the trip and who contributed to their comfort. G. M. Green, who came from Sumter county two years ago to live in the home, was one of the first to visit The Constitution and later was delegated to express the thanks of his comrades.

It was raining when they left last Monday. But on their return Saturday the sun was shining and the skies were clear. One of them said it was nature's mockery. For when they departed, even the depressing influence of low clouds which released sheets of rain and drenched them as they went to the station did not dampen their enthusiasm. They laughed and hummed the battle songs of the lost cause. They had lived to attend another reunion and they were in joyful spirits as they climbed aboard the train.

But death played havoc with their enthusiasms and the influence of nature was lost in sorrow. They had left one of their number in Memphis. They were in different spirits. He was an old man and could not walk as fast as his aged comrades. He tried to maintain the gate, but his weary feet were uncertain. He slipped and fell to the pavement, sustaining injuries from which he died soon afterwards. He was E. F. Small, 78, hero of the Virginia armies and a member of the Old Soldiers' Home circle for many years. He will be brought to Atlanta for burial.

The aged men who year after year have lived with and loved Comrade Small shed tears as they spoke of the incident. "He was a good man", they said, "and will be missed."

His death brings other speculations. Each wonders if he will live through another year to attend another reunion. They walk more carefully, perhaps, to avoid the fate of their aged comrade; that they will be spared to go to "just one more reunion."

the lack of emotion in carrying out the details are substantiation of this contention.

State attorneys in an effort to hang McDowell have built their case on the belief that the boy had cunningly planned to obtain for himself $6,000 in life insurance of his parents and that he conceived and executed the dual killings in a merciless quest for money. The state will introduce experts in an effort to prove the "prodigy" is sane despite his mental quirks.

Several of the legal problems dealing with insanity of intellectuals which promise to play important parts in the trial of Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold in the Chicago case will be issues of prime importance in the McDowell trial, and attorneys for both the state and defense point out that there are several aspects of the two sensational cases which are almost identical.

You can try everything under the sun,—you'll find only one answer, more cell-power in your blood! The tremendous results, produced by an increase in red-blood-cells is one of the A. B. They mean freedom forever from pimples, from the blackhead pest, from boils, from eczema and skin eruptions, from rheumatic impurities, from that tired, exhausted, run-down feeling. Red-blood-cells are the most important thing in the world to each of us. S. S. S. will build them for you. S. S. BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

Now She Can Walk

"I'm Happy," Says Peterson

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big-hearted rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment.

"Read this letter by Mrs. Albert Southcott. It seems like a miracle but it is true, every word of it.

"Is it any wonder I am happy!"

Dear Sirs:

"I was a sufferer from an old running sore and ulcer. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars' worth I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6 1-2 inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's Ointment.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Lyndonville, N. Y. Price 35c.—(adv.)

of relation of the cost of the postal service and revenue derived therefrom. The time has arrived to consider putting the postal service on a sound basis so far as expenditures and revenues are concerned.

"It is apparent that the matter of increasing the salaries of postal employees should be considered in connection with the ways and means; the postal revenues may be correspondingly increased, not apart therefrom. This report will be vailable when the congress convenes in December, and this matter can then be considered.

"This bill adds approximately $68,000,000 to the annual expenditures of the government," Mr. Coolidge said. "It makes no provision for raising this amount as postal revenue. The money must come from the pockets of the taxpayers. To the extent that we create further obligations which must be met from the moneys derived from taxation to that extent do we reduce the possibility of further reduction in taxes. Before such obligations are created it should be conclusively shown that they are essential in the best interests of the nation.

Extravagance Must Stop.

"Government extravagance must stop. The people of the nation are paying all that it is possible for them to pay. I have taken my position in relation to government economy, which I have stated and restated until it is well known. I feel that that position ought to be consistent. I do not see how I can approve the large increase in expenditure of this kind, except on the plea of urgent necessity. It may be that some adjustments would be justified, but an organized effort by a great body of public employees to secure indiscriminate increase in compensation should have the most searching scrutiny. The needs of the public, the ability of the people to pay must have some consideration."

The president called attention to three adjustments in postal salaries since 1918, and added that since then the cost of living had decreased rather than increased. He submitted figures showing that the lowest average of the salaries of postal employees in the field service is nearly $200, more than the average for employees in the government departments in Washington, and presented the results of a post-office department survey which found "that in all cases of employees of a similar character the average salaries paid by business institutions throughout the country were much lower than those paid in the postal service."

Mention was made of the long list of persons awaiting opportunity to obtain employment in the postal service with the statement that with the exception of large cities and indusrial communities, there had been no difficulty experienced in maintaining lists of eligibles to fill vacancies.

POLITICAL STAGE SET FOR MEETING

that the senator disowns it; for Secretary Hoover, despite the fact that he also turns in the other direction; for Charles G. Dawes, of Chicago, despite the fact that the general's boom was suddenly overshadowed by Lowden's, and finally a boom for Dr. Marion Leroy Burton president of the University of Michigan, who is going to make the speech placing President Coolidge in nomination.

Strong Points of Candidates.

Lowden's backers continue to push their claim to first prominence on the ground that he would be agreeable to President Coolidge and add strength to the ticket in the agricultural west; Hoover's friends point out that he certainly is one of the acceptable ones; Borah's friends argue the ticket needs him to appeal to those who follow the so-called school of progressive thought in the party; the friends of General Dawes point to his record as a business man, soldier and go-getter, and Dr. Burton's friends say that when the convention sees him and hears him, it will be so captivated that it will settle the vice presidential nomination without looking further.

Lowden's boom is still first in the running and it is subject, of course, to the risks of blowouts, engine trouble and static before it goes over. Nobody attempts to guarantee what the maneuvering and milling around will bring forth, but the Lowden managers declare that barring unforeseen accidents the nomination is his. Being one of those acceptable to the president, they argue, why look further?

Committee Officers Thanked.

There was a demonstration of party harmony today and an expression of gratitude to the officers of the national committee who are leaving the battle field. Before it finished with its contest work, the committee, by rising vote, adopted a resolution of thanks and appreciation to John T. Adams, chairman; George B. Lockwood, secretary, and Fred W. Upham, treasurer, all of whom are retiring.

The contest deliberations of the committee could not be concluded without another fight over the color line. G. T. Taylor and Wayman Wilkerson, of Memphis, Tenn., were seated as delegates from the tenth Tennessee district over J. M. Johnson and H. O. True, because it developed that the faction represented by Johnson had proposed to exclude negroes from participation in the party convention.

An attempt by former Governor Warmouth, of Louisiana, to present a protest that the state was not entitled to a delegation in the national convention because no republican party really existed there, failed without a hearing. Notice was given that the decisions in the delegate contests from Georgia, Mississippi and Texas would be carried before the credentials committee for review with the prospect that the scrimonious scenes might be reenacted.

Keynoter Burton Arrives.

Representative Theodore E. Burton, keynoter and temporary chairman of the convention, arrived early today and held several conferences at headquarters. If he brought any word from President Coolidge, it was not disclosed. Those who talked with him said he had not. Albert J. Beveridge, of Indiana, sent word he was arriving Sunday. Richmond Pearson Hobson, of Merrimac fame, visited headquarters and submitted for the platform a plank pledging the party to government action with other nations to suppress the trade in narcotics.

Gradually the delegates are beginning to trickle in, the convention decorations are beginning to appear on the streets, the air is taking on a touch of the convention snap. But there is a general absence of that exhiloration which comes with a contest. There is no mass of milling, perspiring delegates and visitors, because as yet there is no mass of either, and those who are here are clinging to their overcoats or wishing they had brought them. A straw hat is almost as conspicuous as a red-winged blackbird. There are no bands nor ballyhoos blaring for contesting candidates, there are na pretty ladies pinning buttons on delegates. National Committeeman Mulvihill, of Mississippi, who was unseated in the contest fight, is carrying a fan marked "Keep Cool With Coolidge," but he had use for it only while his contest was going on.

Committee Guests at Dinner.

Tonight members of the national committee were guests at a dinner with the Cleveland men who brought the convention here. Tomorrow will scarcely be a day of rest, but meetings and formal deliberations will be suspended. There will be, of course, many private conferences and the object of most of them will be to crystallize sentiment on a vice presidential candidate.

Charles B. Warren, American ambassador to Mexico, and chairman of the resolutions committee, will be on the ground tomorrow ready to begin the work of picking up loose ends and planks and building a platform. C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge, will be here Monday.

Further recognition to women of the party was given today when William M. Butler announced that Mrs. Elizabeth P. Martin, of Philadelphia, a delegate-at-large from Pennsylvania, and an assistant national committeewoman, had been selected to head the committee on permanent organization. It will be the first time a woman has held the chairmanship of one of the great working committees of a republican national convention.

OLD SUFFRAGISTS MOURN PASSING OF MRS. UPTON.

BY MAXINE DAVIS.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 7.—Old line suffragists are mourning the passing of Harriet Taylor Upton as a national leader of republican women. She is retiring as vice chairman of the republican national committee to run for congress from Ohio. Her retirement from the national committee marks the end of the influence on national politics of the theories of the energetic women who carried the suffrage fight to its conclusion.

With Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, recommended new vice chairman of the executive committee of the republican national committee, comes a new era of new figures and ideals of activity.

Suffragist In Early Days.

In the pre-suffrage days, Mrs. Upton was among the women who evolved the idea of non-partisan lobbying. The plan upon which suffrage was won was the method by which women brought pressure to bear upon the legislators of both parties. It was not until after they were granted the franchise that they professed any political faith.

When the suffrage amendment was granted, the League of Women Voters, headed by such leading suffragists as Maud Wood Park and Carrie Chapman Catt, grew out of the American Suffrage association and began preaching politics from a non-partisan angle. Other great women's organizations began taking a non-partisan interest in politics.

Mrs. Upton had worked before bright hats glowed through the haze of cigar smoke at party caucuses. Mrs. Hert, wife of a member of the republican inner circle, was an efficient and attentive hostess at her husband's dinner parties. Her active interest in public affairs was confined to educational matters, a heritage from her school teacher days. She did not belong to women's clubs nor did she take part in any exclusively feminine movement.

While Mrs. Upton was haranguing the lords of creation and learning her politics from personal experience, Mrs. Hert was taking lessons from the devious discussions of ways and means of practical politics among her husband's friends.

Consequently, she brings to office a political outlook which more closely resembles that of the men. It is questioned whether she will look for much assistance or influence from the great non-partisan clubs, especially as she is not a believer in the so-called "women's interests," unless she can be convinced that they are the interests of the men as well, and consequently incorporated into the party policies.

VICTORIES That Build Firestone LEADERSHIP

Firestone Leads on Speedway With Five Record Breakers

When the race driver selects his tires he does so realizing that his life and chances for success depend upon them. It is significant that all of the ten money winners in the Indianapolis race were Firestone shod. Firestone, using gum-dipping and other special processes, has developeed tires to such a high degree of efficiency that at Indianapolis, May 30th, the following drivers broke the world's record for 500 miles over this brick track, making many rounds at over 100 miles per hour.

Never before were tires put to such gruelling service, where it was necessary for every ounce of rubber and every fibre of fabric to work in perfect unison with every other part.

The Mark of Quality

Leadership in Every Day Service

Millions of motorists are profiting by the lengthened service of Firestone tires. Scores of unsolicited testimonials, from every part of the country, lay emphasis on the long mileage Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords are delivering—which builds leadership in service, safety and economy.

Cab and Bus Line Leadership

Taxicab and bus line operators must of necessity select the tire that will give them the best and most economical service. The largest taxicab companies in the five largest cities in the United States use Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords exclusively, building for us leadership in taxicab service. One fleet alone, the Yellow Cab Co. of Chicago, uses over one half million tire miles per day. This affords Firestone tire experts a great, practical laboratory for rapid and thorough tests of every refinement they develop.

Pioneering Built Leadership in Truck Tires

Firestone for years has been first to develop tires and rims complete which would meet the heavy trucking loads, great strains and demand for traction. By originating and carrying forward the Ship by Truck movement, and establishing Ship by Truck bureaus in all large cities, Firestone helped to speed up highway transportation and reduce costs.

Balloon Tire Leadership

Firestone's latest and major contribution to motoring is the low air pressure or Balloon tire. This, the original full-size Balloon, was made practical by the special Firestone Gum-Dipping process, insulating every fibre of each cord, adding great strength and stamina. The Balloon Gum-Dipped Cord was tested for millions of miles before being offered to the public. Firestone has also simplified the application of full-size Balloon tires to your car now equipped with high pressure tires by designing a special unit consisting of tires, tubes, rims and spokes. This provides a complete assembly, designed for your car, and applied by any dealer at a very low cost.

Stockholder Employees and Specialized Tire Plants

Every Firestone employee is a common stockholder whose entire efforts are concentrated on one thing—the building of better tires, giving the greatest service and economy to the car owner. Such concentration makes every man an expert in his work, developing the best chemists and engineers, who have the backing of unlimited resources and who are actuated by a spirit of pioneering and a determination to continue to add to Firestone leadership.

Leadership Against British Rubber Restriction Act

Attacking the unsound and uneconomic character of the British Rubber Restriction Act limiting the exportation of rubber from the great plantations of the Far East, Firestone was the one large tire manufacturer to take up the cause for the car owner. Soon after the agitation was started for America to produce rubber under its own control, the cost of this important raw material was reduced and the prices of tires were brought back to a normal level.

Firestone's activity led the government to investigate the practicability of growing rubber under American protection. Today there is every indication that American capital will soon begin an independent and unrestricted production of crude rubber.

Jealous Wife Shoots Rival For Husband's Love

BARBER - HUSBAND RETURNS TO WORK AS BULLETS FLY

Alleged Eternal Triangle Affair Causes Mrs. Gertrude White To Shoot Mrs. Violet Gasden.

PRINCIPALS IN AFFRAY FREED IN $500 BONDS

Victim Proclaims Love for White—"She Has Been Trying To Win My Husband," Says Wife.

Tearing aside the veil of convention imposed by society, two women vented their hatred of each other on South Broad street late Saturday afternoon. Inspired by love for the same barber the pair abandoned womanly wile and guile, reverting to the primitive in their struggle for man. One was wife and the other sweetheart; one sought to retain, the other to take away.

Tongues, fists, pocketbooks, and a revolver figured in the strife—which only aroused in the objective of the tussle a desire to be back at his regular job of shaving his customers.

Principals Enter Ring.

O. L. White, of 132 Pulliam street, barber, was engaged in conversation with Mrs. Violet Gasden, of 26 East Alexander street, in front of 67 South Broad street Saturday afternoon. Mrs. White, wife of the barber, at work as a saleslady in a nearby department store saw the meeting. Promptly she left her counter and sallied forth to do battle for her mate.

"This is my husband you are talking to, you know," said Mrs. White to Mrs. Gadsden.

"I don't care if it is, I'll talk to him whenever I want to," was Mrs. Gadsden's terse reply.

Hatred flashed from two pairs of feminine eyes.

Mrs. White reached her hand into her bosom.

Mrs. Gasden came into a hasty clinch.

They roughed it, exchanging rights and lefts in the mixup.

White Returns To Chair.

"Go ahead and fight it out, girls," said the gallant White as he marched back to his chair in the shop.

The fighters broke away, Mrs. Gasden scoring light left and right scratches to the face as they came apart.

Mrs. White's hand flashed to her bosom and out again, a spurt of College Youths Trample Graves In 4-Day Orgy

Bucknell Pupils Hold Reign of Terror in Town of Lewisburg, Pa.

Williamsport, Pa., June 7.—The local police department tonight was asked by the chief of police of Lewisburg to send officers to help subdue 200 or more youths, said to be students of Bucknell university, who have been on a rampage in the borough since Wednesday night, it is alleged.

"Students here are shooting off cannon crackers, carbide cannon and dynamite in the main street," Chief of Police Earl Miller, of Lewisburg, declared. "A number of small fires have been started in automobiles, dresses have been burned off of women on the streets and a number of children have been injured.

"The students entered the veterans' memorial cemetery and trampled down the flags there. Then they tried to roll away the boulder dedicated to the soldier dead of this town. They smashed all the windows in front of a house in which a woman was lying dead and pulled a wagon filled with burning boxes down the main street. They also hurled water on the burgess, H. O. Miller, and threatened to throw me into the river."

Chief Miller declared the state police said they could not give him aid and that he had "gone down on his knees" to the college authorities but that the trouble continued.

The Williamsport police department, because several men were ill and others were on special duty, was unable to send aid.

American Fliers Reach Hongkong On World Flight

Aviators Favored With Perfect Weather—Average Almost 100 Miles Hour.

Hongkong, June 8.—The American army around-the-world fliers arrived here at 12:30 this afternoon from Amoy. The aviators made the 300-mile flight from Amoy in three hours and 15 minutes. The next leg of the journey, as planned, is a 500-mile hop to Haiphong, French Indo-China. Weather conditions today were perfect.

The American aviators reached Amoy from Shanghai at 4:30 p. m. Saturday. All three planes, their pilots and mechanicians were in good condition after the 500-mile trip, which was completed in nine hours and forty-five minutes.

Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith, commander of the expedition, said the fliers had been favored with very good weather and made an excellent trip from Shanghai, this being the second good day they had run into while flying since they left America.

FRENCH AVIATOR REACHES JAPAN.

Tokio, June 8.—Captain Pelletier d'Oisy, the French aviator flying from Paris to Tokio, arrived at Senoshima (Hiroshima) at 10:30 this morning from Taiku, Korea. D'Oisy had made two previous attempts to cross the Korean straits from Korea to Japan, but was prevented by fog and storms.

$300,000 'FOUND' FOR CITY SCHOOLS BY FINANCE BOARD

Money Obtained From Anticipating Water Funds, Traffic Fines, and Other Sources.

An additional $300,000 for schools has been "found" by the finance committee of council and will be included in the June finance sheet to be submitted to council in adjourned session Tuesday, it was announced Saturday night by Alderman J. R. Bachman at the end of more than three weeks of close study of city revenue and expenses.

The traffic war now being waged by the police department was drawn on for $8,000 more money in recorder's court fines, the increased water rate, voted by council Thursday, was figured in for $150,000 more than had been anticipated, public improvements were slashed for $135,000 and economies in the water department were estimated at $7,000 under the figure fixed in January, making up the $300,000 total.

No New City Stockade.

Only one major public improvement was entirely abandoned for the year. That was the new city stockade which it had been planned to buid in order to remove city prisoners from the present building opposite the site of

Woman Is Rival Of McCoy in Race For Most Mates

Mrs. Whall, 70, Has Just Buried Her 7th Husband in Portsmouth.

London, June 7.—Meet Mr. Kid McCoy, Mrs. Whall, Kid, shake hands with Mrs. Jane Rebecca Whall, of Portsmouth.

Mrs. Whall has just buried her seventh. Now at 70 years of age, she says she is off matrimony for life. In the few days since the burial of her last husband, she has already had to turn down a would-be No. 8.

"Never again," she says, "even though I cannot stand a lonely life. I am miserable. My married life has been one long romance, broken by grief at losing my husbands."

There has been only one untoward incident in Mrs. Whall's married life or lives. Her sixth turned out to be a bigamist, she being bigamee. So she only wears six wedding rings—four on the left hand and two on the right.

Mrs. Whall's husbands have been spread over more years than Kid McCoy's wives, but she had three within the last six years. She has never been divorced.

"Angel of Broadway" Returns to Atlanta, Bringing New Kind of Religious Message to Her Old Home

Rheba Crawford, former Atlanta Salvation Army lassie. On the left she is shown as she appears in repose, and on the right, a favorite pose when emphasizing some point in an address at one of her meetings.

Rheba Crawford Unable To Give Name To Describe Kind of Service She Holds.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Rheba Crawford, who opens a series of meetings at the auditorium today, doesn't know, exactly, to what category of public speaker she belongs.

She arrived in Atlanta late Friday night and on Saturday devoted her day to perfecting the final details for her meetings.

They are not revivals—she says she isn't a revivalist. So it was gently suggested that maybe she was an evangelist. No, that wasn't it, she said. Then she stuck. She didn't know what kind of a word to use in describing the work she does and finally, in desperation, she said "Perhaps you people in Atlanta can think of the right name for the thing I am trying to do, after you have heard me do it."

Two Meetings Today.

So there we let the matter rest. Whatever it is she "does," she is going to "do it" twice today. Once at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the auditorium, when her subject will be "Some Day I'm Going to Murder the Bugler." The second time will again be at the auditorium, at 8 o'clock at night, on the subject "What Think Ye of Christ."

Rheba, as all Atlanta knows, was christened the "Angel of Broadway" by New York. That was after she had proved so popular, as a speaker at Salvation Army street meetings, held on Gotham's great white way, that the police tried to stop her meetings because the crowds blocked traffic. Rheba, however, then a member of the Salvation Army, fought the police to a standstill and held inviolate the right of that magnificent organization to hold its services on the streets. For the Salvation Army, you know, is peculiar among religious organizations, in that it takes literally the Biblical instruction to seek its guests, at the spiritual feast, "on the highways and byways."

Salvation Army Lassie.

Seven or eight years ago, Rheba Crawford was a Salvation Army lassie in Atlanta. At that time, her father, Brigadier Crawford, was in charge of Salvation Army work for the entire southeast. She was accepted here as the apotheosis of the ideal blue bonnet lassie.

Now she is back again, nationally famous. Since leaving Atlanta she has conducted her meetings—not revivals, remember—in cities all over the country. She has drawn crowds that have overtaxed the capacity of her halls in every city in which she has spoken. She has brought a message to the people that is evidently the kind of message for which they hunger. For they have heard her again and again and always returned for more.

Since her old Atlanta days; Rheba has married. Her husband is J. Harold Sommers, young newspaper publisher of St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. Sommers is with her in Atlanta and he, it is evident, fills in every particular the classification of a "regular fellow."

Atlanta will flock to hear her own daughter once again. She says that she has changed mightily since the days when she used to preach on the warm Sunday evenings, on Marietta street, with the blue clad figures of her comrades of "the army" around her and a close packed semi-circle of listeners standing in silence around.

Different Kind of Message.

Now, she says, she is bringing a different kind of a message. Still a message of religion, of course. But a religion that she feels, somehow, is different from the orthodox run of evangelists. The best she can do in describing it makes it seem as a sort of gospel of light and happiness based always, of course, on the New Testament. A sort of Pollyanna among teachers, as it were.

However, the chance is here for Atlanta to hear her and judge for themselves. Thousands flocked to hear her in Macon, where she has just closed a series of services. It is predicted that, before she has finished her Atlanta engagement, the auditorium will not be large enough to hold the crowds in this city who will want to hear her.

Campaign Gifts This Summer

SENATE COMMITTEE TO SCRUTINIZE EVERY CENT

Private as Average Gold Fish

Washington, June 7.—Contributions and expenditures in political campaigns will have as much privacy as the average gold-fish this summer as a committee of five senators, working unceasingly, scrutinizes every cent that goes in and every cent that goes out.

The senate has adopted without debate the LaFollette resolution providing for publicity in campaign finances. Senator Borah will head the special committee, which also includes Senator Jones, republican, of Washington; Shipstead, farmer-laborite, of Minnesota; Caraway, democrat, of Arkansas, and Bayard, democrat, of Delaware.

Sessions of the committee probably will not be held until the campaigns get well under way, however, as the exact manner in which the committee will function has not yet been outlined.

The committee, however, will have the power to survey the books of both republican and democratic national committees and require reports as to expenditures and receipts. La Follette put through the resolution chiefly as a restriction and it is not considered likely that the committee will subpoena witnesses or hold public hearings unless some unusual contributions or expenditures are brought to their attention.

At first, there was opposition to LaFollette's resolution by those who believed that such publicity would hinder the campaigns of both major parties, but it was apparent that it would react on both alike.

The committee will also have power to keep track of expenditures of senatorial candidates.

LaFollette did not procure passage of his resolution without a fight. Introduced Thursday, the committee on audit and control to which it was referred showed no signs of reporting it until he moved to discharge the committee Friday night.

Thereupon, the republican majority of the committee reported it out. It was passed without discussion or a record vote.

RICH FLORIDAN CLAIMS CHICAGOAN STOLE WIFE'S LOVE

Chicago, June 7.—John W. Cherry, wealthy West Palm Beach, Fla., realtor, filed suit here today for $50,000 damages for alienation of affections against Joseph A. CURE FOR CANCER IS DEPENDENT ON EDUCATION

Atlantic City, N. J., June 7.—The cure for cancer is dependent largely upon education of the public and education of the members of the medical profession, declared Dr. Joseph Colt Bloodgood, assistant professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins university, in an address Saturday before the New Jersey Medical society.

"When the medical profession discovers a cure for cancer, it will be more than willing to announce it," he said. "In the meantime, it is cruel that announcements should recur that a cure had been found."

Until a cure is found, the best method of combating the disease is education and early action, and doctors should become more versed in science's latest treatments, he said.

GEORGIA POLITICS BUCKLES ON ARMOR FOR BIENNIAL FRAY

Political Circus Stirs in Slumber as Date Approaches for Annual Session of State Legislature.

CANDIDATES SLOW TO ENTER CONTESTS

Anti-Klan Forces Lining Up Likely Candidates Upon Whom To Pin Hopes in September.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

After a session of unprecedented quietude Georgia's political circus is stirring in its sleep and the blare of the campaign orator, the scream of the embattled legislator and the raucous cries of the vote-stalker will, in a very few weeks, once again be heard throughout the length and breadth of the commonwealth

The center of attraction will be the state capitol, when members of the general asssembly gather on June 25—a brief two and one-half weeks distant—to wrestle once again with the lawmaking problems and legislative mazes in the house and senate. Even now, the two chambers are being scrubbed and scoured, dusted and polished, for the coming of solons.

Second only in attraction, however, to the performances in the main legislative tent, will be the campaigns which are to be waged in this election year. Mumblings and rumblings have been heard that indicate a number of interesting races for the different state house positions, as well as for places on the state's congressional delegation and in the U. S. senate. One senator from this state is seeking re-election this year. However, just who will form the chief opposition for some of the more important places is not known yet, although various factions are rumored to be eagerly seeking for some likely candidate to whom they can pin their hopes and indorsement.

Only Four Entered.

Mrs. Bessie Anderson, secretary of the state democratic executive committee, announced Saturday that only four candidates have paid entrance fees. Three of these are present incumbents seeking reelection and the fourth is a candidate for the place on the public service commission now held by Commissioner James D. Price.

A. J. Woodruff, member of the legislature from DeKalb county, is the opponent to Commissioner Price and reports received from over the state indicate that Mr. Woodruff is going to prove a dangerous competitor.

He is making a state-wide campaign and is basing his claims to the office on his years of practical experience as a shipper, in connection with his business, the Woodruff Machinery com-

SCHOOL FAILURES ARE CUT IN HALF

Cost of Educating Each Pupil Reduced From $45.15 to $44 in Year, Says Superintendent.

Failures in school this year were cut in half and the cost of educating each pupil was reduced from $45.15 to $44, Superintendent Willis A. Sutton stated Saturday after receiving commencement reports from all branches of the department.

Only 8 per cent of all pupils in the system failed in one or more subjects he stated. Last year 17 per cent had failed, the year before 22, and in the year before that 24.

Causes for Reduction.

The reduction in failures he attributed to inauguration of junior high schools, which sharply reduced failures in seventh and eighth grades; to the school health program, which he said has kept the pupils in a higher degree of efficiency throughout the year; to the attendance drive which has reduced the number of absences and amount of lost time; to more scientific grouping of pupils so that each class was composed of pupils of approximately the same ability to learn; to adjustment classes in which backward pupils who were about to fail received special coaching, and to a higher quality of teaching throughout the system.

The claimed reduction in per pupil cost was attributed to opening new bond issue school buildings with class rooms larger than the old buildings, enabling each teacher to instruct more pupils, and to measures of economy practiced wherever possible in the system.

Average Number of Pupils.

Dr. Sutton stated that Frank Weldon, of the Taxpayers' league, had been misinformed as to the average number of pupils to each teacher. The average in the white schools is 36, he said, instead of 31 as Mr. Weldon told the charter revision committee

Board Will Pass On Opportunity School Tuesday

Majority of Members Said To Oppose Abolition of Institution.

Final decision on the proposal to abolish the Atlanta Opportunity school is expected at the regular meeting of the board of education Tuesday, it was announced by board members Saturday. Advocates of suspending the school will urge this step as a measure of economy to help the department come within funds appropriated for the system this year. A majority of the board is said to be in favor of keeping it open.

Purchase of portable school buildings also will be considered. Superintendent Willis A. Sutton said that he would ask the board to arrange for purchase of 73 portable class room units. Of that number 14 would be used at Bass Junior High school, 11 at Brown Junior High, and 16 each at O'Keefe and Smith Junior High schools; 10 at Tech High, four at Boys' High and two in elementary schools.

Enrollment Increases.

The superintendent said that increase in enrollment, especially at the junior high schools, from which no pupils were graduated this year, would make additional class room space nec-

LEOPOLD BRANDED AS MASTER MIND OF BLOODY PLOT

Loeb Accused of Cowardice and Double-Cross by Companion in Adventure of Death.

TYPEWRITER FOUND IN MUD OF LAGOON

Confession of Loeb Reveals Calmness of Slayers After Crime—Played Cards With Relatives.

BY H. H. ROBERTSON.

Chicago, June 7.—Partners in crime, Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, Jr., have become deadly enemies in jail.

When Loeb made his original confession of the murder of 13-year-old Robert Franks, which has just been made public, he accused Leopold of the actual slaying. Leopold, in his confession, said Loeb had struck the fatal blow, and for awhile, there was a definite estrangement.

Then the attorneys heading the so-called $15,000,000 defense got to the boys and from that time both Loeb and Leopold, apparently reconciled, refused to answer any further questions, declaring that they would remain silent on the advice of counsel.

Feud Flames Again.

But Loeb's confession was made public Saturday and Leopold staged another outburst. The feud, apparently, has broken out all over again.

"I would not have been capable of participating in the killing of Robert Franks had it not been for the suggestion and stimulus of Nathan Leopold, Jr.," declared Loeb. "I offer no excuse, but had it not been for the suggestion of Leopold I never would have taken part in the crime."

"It's a lie," shouted Leopold, informed in his cell of the details of his comrade's confession. "Dick is lying. He is a coward, a weakling and a double-crosser."

Leopold Turns His Back.

A few minutes later the two young dilettante murderers passed each other during a recreation period. Neither spoke. Loeb started toward Leopold as if to speak to him, but when the later turned away, Richard hurried to the other side of the prison yard.

Leopold's signed confession, given out by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe following the indictment of the "bloody boys" Wednesday night, said that it was he who drove the automobile in which the Franks boy was

ALL FARM RELIEF FELL WITH GAVEL

Angry Western Senators Flay Republican Organization for Failure of Aid.

Washington, June 7.—Although supporters of farm relief legislation carried the fight to the very closing moments of congress, the session adjourned without enacting any law for direct aid to farmers.

Realizing during the past few days that hopes of obtaining permanent legislation were impossible, the farm bloc centered on the Bursum bill providing for an export bounty of 35 cents a bushel on wheat and wheat products as an emergency measure.

Senator Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, took up the cudgels in favor of the bill with the assurance of house members that if it passed the senate it would go through the house. After being repeatedly blocked by the parliamentary situation, Senator Norbeck made his last effort to bring it to a vote with less than four hours of the session remaining.

He sought to attach it to a house bill as a rider and submitted such a motion. Opposition from both sides arose and time was rapidly consumed with speeches. Senator Norbeck interrupted frequently with appeals to allow a vote but without result.

Thirty minutes before adjournment, Senator Norbeck arose and rebuked the senate for "failure" to come to the aid of the farmers and charged that "subterfuges" were being used to block a vote.

Senator Overman, democrat, North Carolina, declared it was "too late to take up a rider of this importance" and Senator Owen, democrat, Oklahoma, accused the republican party of refusing to aid the farmers and being responsible for the formation of the farmer-labor party.

BLIND GIVE ANNUAL CONCERT ON TUESDAY

The third annual concert of the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind will be given Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Eggleston hall. An admission of 50 cents will be charged, and the proceeds will be applied towards furthering the work of the association.

When the association was formed three years ago, for the purpose of advancing the welfare of blind people of Georgia, the large number of blind persons in the state who were exceptionally accomplished musicians gave rise to the suggestion that an annual concert put on by the association could be utilized, not only to provide funds to carry on the work of the association, but provide a rare entertainment for the public, and a convincing demonstration of the capabilities of the blind. Two concerts have been given thus far, each proving a marked success, both from the standpoint of performance and of attendance.

The concert Tuesday evening promises to be the most brilliant yet undertaken. It will be under the direction of Professor E. H. McNiel, director of music of the Georgia academy for the blind, and chairman of the concert committee of the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind. Among the participants will be Misses Mary Williams, Emily McIntire, Belle McClatchey, Lillian Swinford, Madeline Lightfoot, Ruby Waldrip, Maggie Audrey Gay, and E. H. McNiel, W. H. Childs, Ralph Richardson, Banner Jones and Paul Donehoo.

Woman Blocks Police Efforts To Take Picture

Police Saturday were attempting to establish the identity of Mrs. Marguerite Clarke, arrested here Friday with her husband, L. Clarke, and G. Lee, a Japanese, for investigation of their alleged implication in the theft of goods valued at more than $3,000 from Atlanta department stores, as Mrs. Gertrude Orcutt, known to police of at least two cities—St. Paul and Kansas City.

Mrs. Clarke refused to allow detectives to record her finger prints and take her picture, even though Bertillon measurements of both Clarke and Lee already had been obtained. When all attempts to take her picture failed, Mrs. Clarke was returned to her cell.

A photograph found in Mrs. Clarke's trunk showed a picture of her and an older woman, and writing on the back of the photograph states that the picture is that of Mrs. Gertrude Orcutt and mother, of 1514 Summitt avenue, St. Paul, Minn. A string of pearl beads also was found in the trunk, with a certificate from Charles P. Scott, Kansas City jeweler, stating that he had cleaned the pearls for Mrs. G. Orcutt, of the Antonette apartments, Kansas City, Mo.

Police are operating on the theory that the trio are well-known snatch thieves who have operated throughout the country under various aliases, and communications have been sent by Chief of Police E. L. Jett to police departments of all large cities of the country.

The prisoners deny any implication in the thefts, but have refused to attempt any explanation of the valuable goods, $1,948 worth of which have been identifed by department store employees as having been stolen. The goods were found in the prisoners' rooms at the time of the arrests.

$300,000 "FOUND" FOR CITY SCHOOLS

the new Girls' High school which is to open in January. The $25,000 appropriation for the new stockade was thrown into the school fund.

Widening of the corner of Edgewood and Pryor, for which $25,000 had been appropriated in January, was cut $20,000, leaving $5,000 as an "earnest of good faith" on the part of the city to supplement sums which it is intended to secure from property owners. Alderman Bachman said he believed the $5,000 would be enough to insure a start on the improvement this year. The building on the southwest corner is to be cut back to straighten the street.

Widening Funds Cut.

Forrest avenue widening was cut from $44,000 to $30,000, most of which has been spent.

Peters street widening was cut from $40,000 to $25,000, of which $10,000 has been spent.

Installation of automatic sewer flush tanks, intended to effect marked savings in payrolls, was abandoned and $10,000 appropriated for them was turned into the school fund.

Water main funds were cut $12,500, leaving a total of $25,000 for the year, of which $10,000 has been spent.

Sewer repair funds were cut $15,000, leaving $25,000, most of which has been spent.

Fair street widening was cut $6,000, leaving only $1,000 for preliminary work.

Other smaller amounts were cut from the improvement funds of all the city departments to a total of $16,000.

New Hospital Assured.

The building of a contagious disease hospital to house all social disease patients now being treated at the stockade, other contagious diseases and a new psychopathic ward was assured when the committee left the $25,000 appropriation for it. The county has matched the city's money with another $25,000. Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer said that the $50,000 would be enough for a first unit of the building. It will replace a group of negro shanties and one substantial 12-room residence that have been used in the past.

A $20,000 appropriation for McDonough road bridge, said to be the keystone in a financial arrangement with county, state and railroads for a $65,000 structure, was not disturbed, insuring erection of the new bridge during this year and the early part of 1925.

The full amount of the $37,500 Madison avenue extension fund had been expended before the committee went to work with the pruning knife and could not be touched.

Fund Not Touched.

The $27,000 appropriated for preliminary work and a nest egg for the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts was not disturbed.

Alderman Bachman stated that he believed the finance committee would lend unanimous support to the new finance sheet when it is presented for passage Tuesday. Many of the cuts were made regretfully and many will force abandonment of improvements that are considered to be almost imperative, but the cuts were decided on as "doing the least possible harm to the most possible people" and were accepted as the lesser evils of many with which the committee was confronted.

The $300,000 will serve to keep schools open through September and October. The finance committee is counting on popular approval in September of a one-mill emergency tax to tide schools through November and December.

essary in order to seat all pupils this fall.

Professor Sutton estimated that enrollment would be 48,825 in September, nearly 5,000 more than in September of last year.

The increase, he said, would be partly due to increased population and partly to the fewer number of pupils who will drop out in the seventh and eighth grades.

Inauguration of junior high schools, he said, had cut the number who leave school in those grades from 1,400 last year to 243 this year.

September Predictions.

Total enrollment in September this year, he said, will be 38,000 in elementary grades, 7,500 in junior high grades, and 3,275 in senior high schools, with 1,100 at Tech High, 875 at Girls' High, 850 at Commercial High, and 450 at Boys' High.

These figures will be submitted to the board at its Tuesday session to support the request for additional class room space.

The board will not take any action toward adjusting its budget to include the additional money voted by council Thursday for schools. The new budget will be made after the money is actually in hand.

pany, of Winder and Atlanta. Mr. Woodruff asserts that shippers of the state ought to be represented directly on the commission and claims that his residence in DeKalb county will enable him to give his entire time to the work of the commission.

United States Senator William J. Harris Saturday paid his entrance fee of $250 in the race to succeed himself. Others who have paid the fee are Secretary of State S. Guyt McLendon and Pension Commissioner C. E. McGregor.

The date for entries closes on June 21, as set by a special committee of the state executive committee.

One Fulton Candidate.

The first candidate in Fulton county to announce for the state legislature is Channing Cope, young Atlanta business man, who made his formal entry into the county race on Saturday. It is not known how many of the present representatives from Fulton, if any, will seek reelection. The present delegation is composed of Miss Bessie Kempton, John Y. Smith and J. O. Wood. Mr. Smith has been mentioned as a possible candidate for congress from the fifth district against William D. Upshaw, present congressman, and Mr. Wood has also been mentioned as a possible candidate for mayor of Atlanta though neither has as yet made any definite announcement.

Miss Kempton has likewise not made known her intentions but political rumor has persisted in placing her as a candidate for the state senate from the 35th district, comprising Fulton, Henry and Clayton counties. Walter C. Hendrix, prominent Atlanta attorney, has already announced his candidacy for this place. It is customary for each of the three counties to furnish the senator, in rotation, and this year it will be Fulton county's time.

Gubernatorial Race.

The only active candidate yet in the field for the governorship, aside from Governor Clifford Walker, who is seeking reelection, is Herschel H. Elders, of Reidsville, state legislator from Tattnall county. Others have been mentioned as possible candidates but no formal announcements have yet been made. Those whose names have been mentioned in connection with the place of chief state executive include Dr. L. G. Hardeman, of Commerce, Ga.; Render Terrell, George H. Carswell, of Irvinton, president of the state senate; former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, Jesse Mercer and many others.

The "21 Club," a political organization which, it is understood, was organized to oppose the political activities of the Ku Klux Klan, will select candidates for many of the offices at a meeting of its steering committee to be held in Macon next Tuesday. On Wednesday a meeting of the entire club will be held in Atlanta to ratify and make public the names of the candidates selected.

J. J. Brown, state commissioner of agriculture, is seeking reelection. The only opposition which has yet developed openly against him is that of Charles E. Stewart, of Atkinson county, who is an avowed candidate for the place. Representative Stewart led the fight on the department in the legislature last summer, which resulted in an investigation. Upon the failure of Mr. Stewart to offer sufficient evidence before the investigationg committee in support of charges he had made against Mr. Brown on the floor of the house, the investigation ended in complete exoneration for the department and Commissioner Brown's administration.

Lines To Be Drawn.

Anyway, the time is fast approaching when the lines for the year's political activities must be finally drawn and set. Entries for the races for office close June 21. The legislature meets June 25. The primaries are in September and, after that date the flurry of the favorite Georgia sport should be over.

Proposed Legislation.

One of the most important pieces of before the assembly this summer is before the asembly this summer is the plan for a state-wide bond issue of $70,000,000 for the building of a complete state system of concrete highways. Sentiment in favor of the bond issue, already strong, is rapidly assuming overwhelming proportions. Everyone admits the need for such a system of permanent hard-surfaced roads, and the fact that the plans do not involve any added taxation burden on the state has won thousands of supporters in all sections.

Other legislative matters of primary interest, which have received the indorsement of many leaders in both houses are the bills providing for biennial sessions of the legislature, for a reduction in the numerical strength of both houses, for four-year terms for the governor and other state house officers—with the provision that the governor shall not succeed himself in office—and for a drastic revision in the tax system of the state.

Many other important bills, either left over from last year's sessions, or to be introduced in new bills, are scheduled with the probable result that the coming session will be one of the hardest working and most important in recent years.

Some Dissatisfaction.

One possible investigation of a state department is looming. This, if it comes, will be of the newly created state department of revenue. Much dissatisfaction has been expressed by many of the legislators concerning results achieved by this department since it began operations at the beginning of this year. It is pointed out that the estimated revenue from this department, before it was created, was high in the millions, whereas results to date indicate that the total collections for the first year will probably not exceed half a million.

The duties of the department are the collection of delinquent special and occupational taxes and enforcement of the new cigar and cigarette stamp tax law. This law, however, has been attacked as unconstitutional and the final decision in the suit has not yet been handed down by the supreme court. Supporters of the department claim that this situation largely accounts for the paucity in collections under this law to date.

Representative J. Herman Milner, of Dodge county, author of the cigar and cigarette tax law, has expressed much disappointment in the revenue secured and has intimated that he will ask for an investigation of the conduct of the department soon after the assembly convenes.

BLIND GIVE ANNUAL CONCERT ON TUESDAY

The third annual concert of the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind will be given Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Eggleston hall. An admission of 50 cents will be charged, and the proceeds will be applied towards furthering the work of the association.

When the association was formed three years ago, for the purpose of advancing the welfare of blind people of Georgia, the large number of blind persons in the state who were exceptionally accomplished musicians gave rise to the suggestion that an annual concert put on by the association could be utilized, not only to provide funds to carry on the work of the association, but provide a rare entertainment for the public, and a convincing demonstration of the capabilities of the blind. Two concerts have been given thus far, each proving a marked success, both from the standpoint of performance and of attendance.

The concert Tuesday evening promises to be the most brilliant yet undertaken. It will be under the direction of Professor E. H. McNiel, director of music of the Georgia academy for the blind, and chairman of the concert committee of the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind. Among the participants will be Misses Mary Williams, Emily McIntire, Belle McClatchey, Lillian Swinford, Madeline Lightfoot, Ruby Waldrip, Maggie Audrey Gay, and E. H. McNiel, W. H. Childs, Ralph Richardson, Banner Jones and Paul Donehoo.

Woman Blocks Police Efforts To Take Picture

Police Saturday were attempting to establish the identity of Mrs. Marguerite Clarke, arrested here Friday with her husband, L. Clarke, and G. Lee, a Japanese, for investigation of their alleged implication in the theft of goods valued at more than $3,000 from Atlanta department stores, as Mrs. Gertrude Orcutt, known to police of at least two cities—St. Paul and Kansas City.

Mrs. Clarke refused to allow detectives to record her finger prints and take her picture, even though Bertillon measurements of both Clarke and Lee already had been obtained. When all attempts to take her picture failed, Mrs. Clarke was returned to her cell.

A photograph found in Mrs. Clarke's trunk showed a picture of her and an older woman, and writing on the back of the photograph states that the picture is that of Mrs. Gertrude Orcutt and mother, of 1514 Summitt avenue, St. Paul, Minn. A string of pearl beads also was found in the trunk, with a certificate from Charles P. Scott, Kansas City jeweler, stating that he had cleaned the pearls for Mrs. G. Orcutt, of the Antonette apartments, Kansas City, Mo.

Police are operating on the theory that the trio are well-known snatch thieves who have operated throughout the country under various aliases, and communications have been sent by Chief of Police E. L. Jett to police departments of all large cities of the country.

The prisoners deny any implication in the thefts, but have refused to attempt any explanation of the valuable goods, $1,048 worth of which have been identifed by department store employees as having been stolen. The goods were found in the prisoners' rooms at the time of the arrests.

$300,000 "FOUND" FOR CITY SCHOOLS

the new Girls' High school which is to open in January. The $25,000 appropriation for the new stockade was thrown into the school fund.

Widening of the corner of Edgewood and Pryor, for which $25,000 had been appropriated in January, was cut $20,000, leaving $5,000 as an "earnest of good faith" on the part of the city to supplement sums which it is intended to secure from property owners. Alderman Bachman said he believed the $5,000 would be enough to insure a start on the improvement this year. The building on the southwest corner is to be cut back to straighten the street.

Widening Funds Cut.

Forrest avenue widening was cut from $44,000 to $30,000, most of which has been spent.

Peters street widening was cut from $40,000 to $25,000, of which $10,000 has been spent.

Installation of automatic sewer flush tanks, intended to effect marked savings in payrolls, was abandoned and $10,000 appropriated for them was turned into the school fund.

Water main funds were cut $12,500, leaving a total of $25,000 for the year, of which $10,000 has been spent.

Sewer repair funds were cut $15,000, leaving $25,000, most of which has been spent.

Fair street widening was cut $6,000, leaving only $1,000 for preliminary work.

Other smaller amounts were cut from the improvement funds of all the city departments to a total of $16,000.

New Hospital Assured.

The building of a contagious disease hospital to house all social disease patients now being treated at the stockade, other contagious diseases and a new psychopathic ward was assured when the committee left the $25,000 appropriation for it. The county has matched the city's money with another $25,000. Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer said that the $50,000 would be enough for a first unit of the building. It will replace a group of negro shanties and one substantial 12-room residence that have been used in the past.

A $20,000 appropriation for McDonough road bridge, said to be the keystone in a financial arrangement with county, state and railroads for a $65,000 structure, was not disturbed, insuring erection of the new bridge during this year and the early part of 1925.

The full amount of the $37,500 Madison avenue extension fund had been expended before the committee went to work with the pruning knife and could not be touched.

Fund Not Touched.

The $27,000 appropriated for preliminary work and a nest egg for the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts was not disturbed.

Alderman Bachman stated that he believed the finance committee would lend unanimous support to the new finance sheet when it is presented for passage Tuesday. Many of the cuts were made regretfully and many will force abandonment of improvements that are considered to be almost imperative, but the cuts were decided on as "doing the least possible harm to the most possible people" and were accepted as the lesser evils of many with which the committee was confronted.

The $300,000 will serve to keep schools open through September and October. The finance committee is counting on popular approval in September of a one-mill emergency tax to tide schools through November and December.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

:: :: CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH :: ::

Dixie Coaches Open Terminal Near Five Points

The Dixie Coach company, running a line of handsome passenger cars from Atlanta to Stone mountain, and to many of the Georgia cities, including Athens, Macon and others, has opened its up-town terminal at 69 Peachtree street, on the ground floor of the Flatiron building.

This transportation line, which has in view a most comprehensive development, is said to be planning not only to practically cover Georgia and other southern states with its lines, but that in the near future expects to open a through line de luxe, carrying passengers all the way from New York to Florida points via Atlanta. This development is expected to follow the improvement of highways in the south.

The busses operated by this concern are said to be the very last word in elegance and comfort, capable not only of making splendid time in comparison with railway trains, but are also able to afford such comforts as might be required by fairly long distance travelers.

Busses Seat 25 People.

The busses, seating something like 25 people, contain among other appointments, splendid lights, which make the interior of the cars light as day during the evening hours, smoking compartments, for the convenience of its male patrons, and highly luxurious seats, upholstered in leather with softest kind of springs.

For long distance service, such as the three-and-a-half-hour trip to Macon, these busses are said to be entirely comfortable, and with the extension of the routes, it is believed that other conveniences will be introduced.

The patronage of the Dixie busses is said to have experienced a steady increase since the initial car was run several months ago, and in view of their regularity and the speed they are said to make, it is believed that their popularity will continue to increase.

Especially attractive is the trip from Atlanta to Stone mountain, which is made twice daily by these high-class motor cars, and many people are taking advantage of this very pleasant method of making this interesting trip.

The up-town office of the line, and the offices of the company, which is under the direction of Captain W. G. Roper, is in the Flatiron building, just a few yards from Five Points. All busses arrive at and leave from this terminal.

Atlanta's Splendid New Residential Development

Map of Piedmont avenue development, a project involving practically $3,000,000 and which will open to home-builders a magnificent new district for the erection of high-class residences. In addition to the widening and paving of this street, making it a fine thoroughfare from the capitol steps to the Bulloch residence at Roswell, there are many improvements in progress as well as projected for this street. Many handsome subdivisions have been opened and a motor bus line is to be established in July to serve this section. The route of Piedmont avenue, through the new north side residence sections, Morningside, Mayfair and Piedmont Crest, is shown on the above map, which pictures the highway from Ansley Park to its junction with Peachtree road.

With many acres of highly valuable land taken in charge by the expert developers of residential property, and with landscapers and engineers working together to enhance the beauty and the many advantages of the splendid tract, a large area of the most attractive portion of Atlanta's north side has been made available for the erection of beautiful homes. This fine tract of property lies along the well-known Piedmont avenue, and has been parcelled out and subdivided by several of the leading real estate firms of the city.

Another feature that has added to the attractiveness of this fine section is the inauguration of a regular automobile transportation line that will begin operations about July 1, serving the people of this section with a regular and frequent schedule. The valuation of the developments in the Piedmont avenue district has been conservatively placed at nearly three millions.

Among the leading realty concerns of the city who have developed residential districts in this beautiful section, and the high type subdivisions made available by them, are as follows: The Salmon company, J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin Realty company are others.

Handsome Home Sites.

The handsome subdivisions along this avenue are as follows: Piedmont Crest, containing 65 beautiful residence sites; Morningside, a magnificent tract of more than 100 acres; Mayfair with many handsome lots, made attractive by nature and enhanced by the developers, and Piedmont Terrace.

In view of the many residence lots that have been and which are expected to be sold in this famous district, the Cross-Town Express, a new concern, will place in service a splendid line of motor cars to give transportation facilities to the many people who will doubtless build in this district. In addition to this the city of Atlatna and county of Fulton have arranged for the expenditure of an immense sum of money in widening, regrading and paving. In fact, the plans that are said to be on foot for this remarkably beautiful residential section are expected to place it upon a parity with the famous Peachtree street as a residential section. Beginning at the Capitol steps the avenue, which is to be improved by widening and paving, will extend practically to Roswell, made famous by the Bulloch residence, of Roosevelt memory. The work of regrading and widening Piedmont avenue is to be done by the county, and it will without doubt stimulate the activity of real estate along the route of this thoroughfare.

Piedmont Crest, the handsome subdivision that is being handled by the Salmon company, and which is a part of the two-and-a-half-million dollar development on this street, is now being beautified by workmen under expert landscapers and artists. Street improvements and civic developments are being made, placing it in readiness for the big sale that is to be conducted by the Salmon company June 12, when every lot in the 65 handsome home sites is expected to be hold at a good price. A large and enthusiastic crowd of interested people will doubtless be drawn to this unusual sale.

Morningside Valuable.

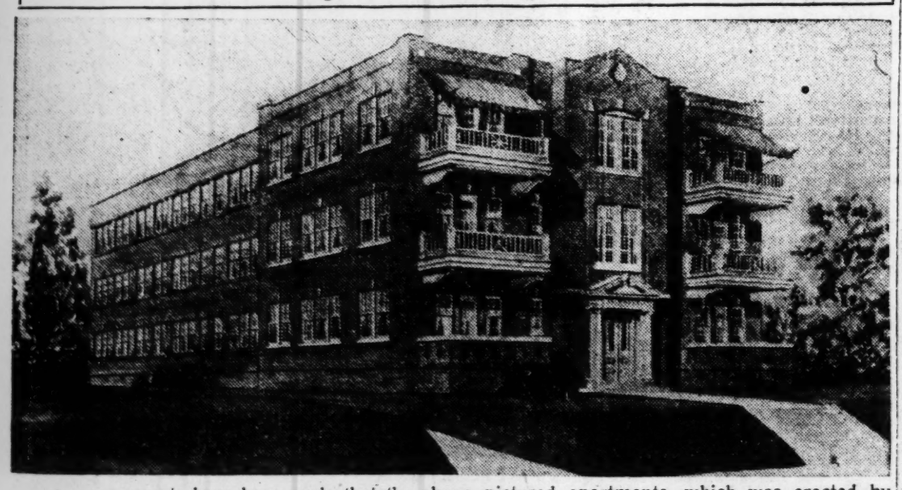

At Morningside, where something over a million dollars is being expended in improvements and enhancement, natural beauties and advantages, there are more than 100 acres of highly attractive residence sites, practically a million dollars' worth of which have been sold through this well-known agency, which maintains a large staff of salesmen under E. F. Luna.

Mayfair, another handsome residential subdivision on Piedmont avenue, has many attractive features, including its graceful topography and its many handsome forest trees and natural shrubbery.

Piedmont Terrace, just north of the Southern railway crossing, with a large number of choice residence sites, is being placed in readiness for the sale of lots to prospective home builders.

Taken all together, it has been stated, the developments now in progress and proposed make up one of the largest and most valuable projects that has been made recently in this city, where millions of dollars has recently been expended upon homes and home sites. Piedmont avenue, paralleling Peachtree street, also bids fair to rival if not surpass that famous thoroughfare. The above cut shows the improvements and developments along Piedmont avenue.

"DON'T BLAME CHARLIE," SAYS PASCHAL.

Offering his clients choice selections among the thousands of highly valuable parcels of real estate in this city, and giving them to understand that if they fail to take advantage of the golden opportunities he is offering them, he is in no wise responsible for their failure to get rich in Atlanta dirt, Charles M. Paschal, well-known real estate man, has adopted as a regular slogan of his daily business life, "don't blame charlie."

Mr. Paschal is one of the best known realty men of Atlanta, and his firm is said to carry a large listing of very choice parcels, of which he is at all times ready to offer his many clients. Not only is Mr. Paschal proven his popularity in the real estate business world, but he recently gave a specimen of his power to win voters for a candidate friend, as witness the race for tax collector of Fulton county, when Charles Paschal was campaign manager for the incumbent, who was returned by a large majority over a large field.

DETROITER ATTRACTED TO GEORGIA BY PEACHES.

Brought to his attention through the great variety and excellence of her peaches, the state of Georgia has become the home of a well-known citizen of Detroit, Mich., and her capital city the scene of his business activities. In giving his reasons for removing from the midwestern state, which is also said to produce several kinds of very fine peaches, as well as popular priced automobiles, Dick Hawkins, of the sales staff of the John J. Thompson company, says that Tyrus Raymond Cobb was the first "Georgia Peach" that came under his notice. Following the great baseball king to his Georgia home, however, Mr. Hawkins found that there are other "peaches" of various kinds produced in this state of the par excellent variety.

"I thought we Detroiters had the best and only Georgia peach," said Mr. Hawkins, "when we copped Ty Cobb, but after landing in the state I found that in addition to the 'Elbertas,' the 'Governor Hoggs,' Georgia Belles' and other varieties that hang in beautiful profusion on the trees, there are more luscious peaches of another variety in this state than there are Fords in Michigan. I've seen more pretty girls since coming to Atlanta than I believed were in the world."

Mr. Hawkins has decided to make Atlanta his permanent home.

Henry Grady Hotel Is Erected in Record Time

Progress picture of the 13-story Henry Grady hotel, which is being built at the most rapid rate, perhaps, of any building of its character in the south. The builders, Gude & company, of Atlanta, started work on the hotel in March, 1924, and the roof went on June 6. The progress of the building has been at the rate of two floors a week, establishing a record, it is declared. Gude & company expect to complete the Henry Grady in time for Thanksgiving dinner, or four months ahead of the contract time limit, which is January 8, 1925.

A construction feat that bids fair to stand for some time is believed to have been accomplished by Gude & Co., well-known Atlanta building concern, which has just placed the roof on the new Henry Grady hotel in what is said to be record tmie for that type of structure. The Henry Grady, which is to cost something more than a million and a quarter dollars, and stand thirteen stories high at the corner of Cain and Peachtree streets was begun in March of this year. With a concentration of efforts and team work that is looked upon as remarkable, the concrete and seel frame of this big structure has risen steadily at the rate of two floors a week. The building received its roof on June 6, less than four months after the foundation slab was laid.

The framework on the Henry Grady is far ahead of the schedule set by the contract time limit. The task of placing the exterior finish of the walls has already been taken up and three floors finished. The outside work on the walls is expected to require three weeks to complete, which is at the rate of four or five floors a week. This job will constitute another record, it was explained.

Placing the interior partitions, Mr. McDonald says, will require two weeks' additional time, after which details of the interior finish and equipment will begin. The entire job will be ready, it was said, by the second week in November, in time for a Thanksgiving dinner in the splendid new hotel, which will be almost four months ahead of the time limit set for the big job.

In explaining the details of the big building feat, A. McDonald, of the Gude company, said that this record surpassed the quick construction of 101 Marietta street, a building of practically the same type and size, the former structure having been erected at the rate of one floor a week.

McDonald Explains Record.

"The footings or foundation slab," said Mr. McDonald, "were started on an early date in March, this for a thirteen-story, two-basement building. The first floor slab was poured April 10. The roof went onto the building June 6. This record," continued Mr. McDonald, "was accomplished in spite of the large amount of excavation for the foundations and two basements, which involved the unexpected removal of 1,500 cubic yards of solid granite. The dimensions of the building, through the first four floors, are 143 by 115 square feet, and from the fourth floor 143 by 74 square feet. The building to the roof stands 150 feet high."

The fine record made by Gude & Co. on the Henry Grady was attributed to the splendid teamwork displayed by the staffs of both the Gude company, builders, and G. Lloyd Preacher & Co., designers and engineers for the handsome structure. On the job at all times for the architects, it was stated, was E. Scofield, well-known engineer, who is said to have been ready at all time to aid in the solution of any problem that arose. Mr. Scofield's work was in line with that of Superintendent Frank Waldrop, of the Gude company, who also remained on the work as much as possible, taking care of every situation that confronted the workmen.

The Henry Grady hotel, which is drawing so rapidly to completion, will be one of the most modern hostelries in the southern states. It is being erected by the Henry Grady Hotel company, composed of H. R. and C. R. Cannon and J. R. de Jarnette, who operate now a chain of popular commercial hotels in Atlanta and other southern cities.

Atlanta House Finances Hotel In Kansas City

Two new real estate mortgage bond issues are announced by G. L. Miller and company, local bond house, amounting to almost a million dollars on two new structures being erected in Kansas City, Mo. The individual issues are for $695,000 on the Clark Estate Office and Medical Arts building, and for $275,000 on the Hotel Tattersball. Both issues bear 7 per cent interest and are dated May 15.

The two structures are situated on the same block on Broadway, between Thirty-Third and Thirty-Fourth streets, and are owned by the Clark Estate company, which is composed of one of the oldest families in Kansas City and one that has been prominently identified with the development of the city. The hotel is now completed and in operation, but extensive improvements will be made. The office building, which is to be 12 stories in height, will be constructed immediately.

These two bond issues mark the entrance of the noted Atlanta bond house into the Kansas City field, although G. L. Miller and company has already done considerable financing in St. Louis, where one of its largest offices is maintained.

Local Builders Optimistic Over Future Outlook

The following optimistic statement regarding the outlook in the building world of Atlanta was printed in the current bulletin of The Atlanta Builders' Exchange:

From present indications 1924 will be one year that building will not be disturbed by the approach of the national election, as in previous years.

The business that is coming into Atlanta from outside cities, together with our local projects, should be sufficent to keep everybody busy who caters to commercial building, right through the year.

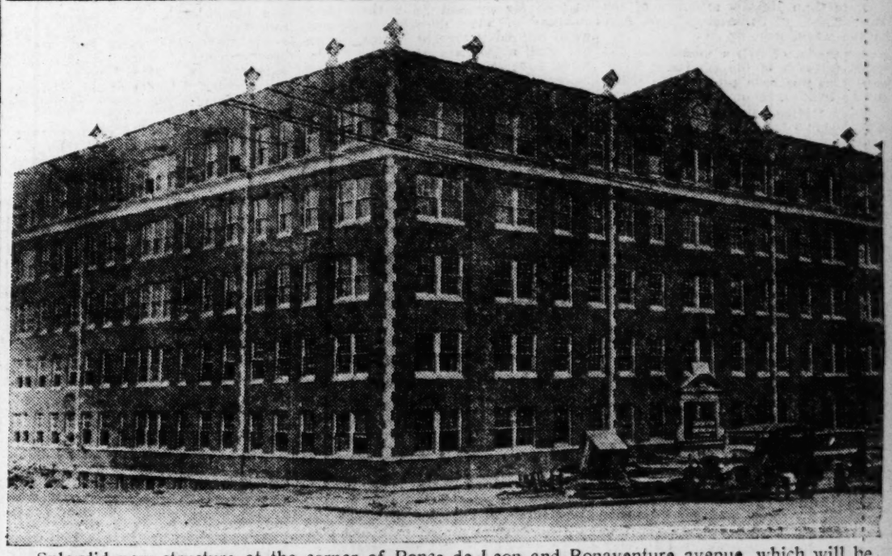

Our list of plans on file this week shows a steady flow of projects, and new plans expected during the next ten days. Most of them are out-of-town jobs, and should be good business for our members who figure this class of work.

There are many reasons why business should be good in the south this year, regardless of the fact that this is a political year. One reason we could mention is low construction cost compared to other cities; another, the high price of cotton, etc.

WIGGINS BUYS NEW CHANDLER AUTOMOBILE.

Declaring his business, which has been stimulated to a large extent through The Constitution classified advertisements, has grown to such an extent that he felt justified in investing some of his surplus in a new automobile, W. C. Wiggins, of Georgia Ware company, bought a handsome new Chandler during the past week. Mr. Wiggins gives credit to the new classified system of The Constitution for much of the increased activity his firm is said to have experienced.

Beautiful Bonaventure Arms Apartment Complete

Splendid new structure at the corner of Ponce de Leon and Bonaventure avenue, which will be ready in a few days for occupancy. This fine apartment, erected by J. L. Morrison, Atlanta capitalist, at a cost of more than half a million dollars, is one of the most modern and elegant among the many large apartments of the city. The Grant-Jeter company are exclusive agents for the Bonaventure Arms.

Announcement has been given out by the Grant-Jeter company, exclusive agents for this and many other high class Atlanta apartments, that the handsome Bonaventure Arms apartments, corner of Ponce de Leon and Bonaventure avenues, has been completed and is now in readiness for prospective patrons.

The Bonaventure Arms, costing something more than $600,000, was erected by the Shelverton company, well-known local contractors, for J. L. Morrison, Atlanta capitalist and business man. The building, standing in one of the most attractive residential sections of the city, is said to be practically ideal in its situation for the business and professional man who wishes to have the advantages of a quiet elegant location, yet in close proximity to the business center. Ponce de Leon, the thoroughfare upon which the new apartment stands, is one of the most famous of Atlanta's residential streets, and is in direct communication with the center of Atlanta.

The arrangement and equipment of the Bonaventure is said to be such as to provide homes of the most attractive sort for people who wish for the highest type of appointments and service. In addition to the many modern conveniences and luxuries that have been built into the structure under the direction of the engineers and architects designing it, the patrons of the Bonaventure will have the advantage of the well-known hotel service inaugurated in Atlanta by the Grant-Jeter company, an arrangement that provides every type of domestic service without the annoyances and responsibilities of maintaining a staff of private servants. A large dining room has also kitchens and breakfast rooms for those who desire such appointments.

All-Hour Elevators.

Elevators running at all hours, private delivery of packages, maids and messengers, are also features of the hotel service.

Each of the handsome apartments, ranging from one to four rooms in size, is equipped with everything that is needed to make home life complete, and in addition to these provisions the designers of the building have paid particular attention to th eartistic effect of the interior, preserving the atmosphere of home in every way and enhancing the beauty of the apartments.

Among the features of the several one-room bachelor apartments, as well as the larger units, are Murphy in-door beds, which may be retired to their receptacles during the day, providing additional space for residents. Other features found only in this apartment building are carpeted floors for each apartment room, with high class linoleum for kitchens, hallways and baths. The bath and toilet installations are said to be of the most approved type.

This apartment is equipped and appointed in the most thoroughly modern way, and it is said to be one of the most elegant structures of its kind to be found in the city.

Exclusive renting of the building has been given to the well-known Grant-Jeter company, and books for the apartments will be found in the office of that concern, ground floor of the Grant building.

A play, written by the pupils of high six, portraying the course of study in the junior high, was given by the high six class and little Miss Mary Norris, Gladys Crawford and J. P. Wall, Jr., violin pupils of Miss Mary Douglass, rendered two selections.

The reports of the officers and committees were splendid and a resume of the year's activities by the principal, Miss Emma Wesley, showed that the year has been quite successful. The ceremony was performed in the living room, which had been profusely decorated with Dorothy Perkins roses and ferns. Only a small circle of relatives and intimate friends were present and the Rev. Irby Henderson, of the College Park Methodist church, officiated.

The bride, who is a lovely brunette, was simply gowned in a three-piece costume of blue tricotine combined with printed georgette crepe, with hat and accessories to match. She wore a corsage of bride's roses and valley lilies. She is a graduate of Cox college and a member of the younger social set of College Park. Miss Ellen Kener is her sister. Her brothers are Joe and Otto Kener.

Mr. Timms is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Timms, of College Park. He succeeded his father several years ago when he retired from the Timms Jewelry company and has a wide circle of friends in the business world.

Mr. and Mrs. Timms left immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip to Washington, New York and other points of interest. They will be at home after July 1 at College Park.

The spacious rooms were beautifully decorated in red and white, the school's colors.

Novelty dances, rendered by Messrs. Clarence Miller and Leonard P. Warren, and other dances were featured during the evening. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Seigal Harmony Boys.

State Program Chairman Issues Suggestions

Mrs. Arthur Tufts, of Atlanta, state program chairman for the Georgia Parent-Teacher association, has issued the following suggestions:

Some parent-teacher associations have found that it is best to have summer meetings, as there is much work that can be done during the months when the children have so much leisure time.

The true spirit of the parent-teacher association is to enthusiastically support or set if necessary the highest standards in a community and to cooperate with some of the 35 organizations represented by the Community Chest and voiced by the Georgia Parent-Teacher association official paper, "Home, School and Community," as not to do work that can be better done by trained workers.

As state chairman of programs, I wish to urge each parent-teacher association president to appoint a program chairman who will, with the aid of her committee, prepare a tentative program for the coming year. Please get from me one of my books of suggestive programs for parent-teacher associations.

Study my year's outline and especially the June suggestions.

I wish every primary, high school and church parent-teacher association president and program chairman to have one of these books, as I have tried to express in it the true spirit of the parent-teacher association as I have caught it. I have pointed out the way to storehouses of helpful material.

I trust that every mother will read some of the books suggested in the October and the March programs.

Then no doubt each one will ponder the questions: What kind of child am I sending to school? From what kind of home am I sending him and to what kind of school? How can I improve all three of these?

Please send to your council or to your district program chairman your year's program and at least one detailed program.

Retiring President Of State P.-T. A. Issues Message

Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, retiring president of the Georgia Congress of Mothers and State Parent-Teacher Associations, issues the following farewell message to the members of the P.-T. A.:

"All records of office have been turned over to the new administration. This marks the end of the old and as we place our standards into the keeping of the new administration, we, of the old, would take this opoprtunity to say 'Hail and farewell.'

"Whatever success we have achieved has been achieved because we have been bound together by our common interest—the little child. Your retiring president cannot in cold words express what is in her heart. You have been so splendid always; patient with all mistakes, loyal in thought and word, and untiring in your efforts to render service to your own school, community and to your state. Together we have caught a bigger vision of parent-teacher work and we have come to know and recognize 'the child in our midst.'

"The school and the home, through P.-T. A., join hands in trying to rightly form the child rather than reform him. To this end our health centers and growing pre-school circles are really 'service stations' rather than repair stations, putting forward always the obligations of parenthood. All child welfare work is God's work. There is none higher. We are just laboring in His garden—the garden of life.

"And now, to the administration: We wish for you all the joy that has been ours, and more; we have a strong faith in you and know that you will lead us onward and upward to a higher goal. Yet with splendid leadership and most faithful of followers there must come moments of discouragement, when doubts and fears creep in. May I point you to that wonderful leader of old, who was able to inspire his people with these words:

"'Be strong; be of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.'"

Health Center To Be Held.

The Baby Health Center for Hill Street school will be held Wednesday, June 11, at 2 p. m. A prize will be given later and this is the last meeting that babies can be entered for this prize. Dr. Hoppe will be in charge.

College Park P.-T. A. Joint Meeting.

The College Park pre-school circle and the College Park Parent-Teacher association will hold a joint meeting Tuesday afternoon, June 10, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. B. H. Sullivan, 707 N. Main street.

After a short business session when a resume of the year's work of each organization will be given and plans for the new year discussed, an informal reception will be given in honor of the newly elected officers of the Parent-Teacher association.

Elks' Club To Have Dance.

Wayne Allen, chairman of the Elks' dance committee, calls attention of every Elk to the dance on Tuesday evening, June 10, at the Elks' home, 40 East Ellis street.

This dance is given in honor of the Elks' patrol and will be sponsored by the patrol.

Atlanta's Minor Citizens

What Does It Mean To Educate a Child?

BY MARY W. POSTELL.

(This is the thirteenth of a series of articles dealing with the work of the Atlanta public schools. The series is sponsored by the Atlanta Public School Teachers' association, and the articles are written by members of the teaching staff and other citizens interested in education.)

BY MARY W. POSTELL.

What does it mean to educate a child? Frankly, that question is too big for me. The more I turn it over in my mind the more profound it becomes. For hundreds of years the ablest educators have been trying to answer that question. Put all of their answers together and still the answer is incomplete. How impossible, then, for me to answer it. However, it is a question that must be faced by all right-thinking men and women, and faced in an open-minded and unprejudiced manner. It is a problem that takes on new significance every day.

There are so many things to think about in connection with the education of a child. First the child himself—what he is, his native stock of instincts, capacities, interests, etc. In other words, the start that nature gives him. Then we must think of the environment in which he lives, and of life today, with all of its changes and complexities. Next, we have to think of the general trend of life, and where we are headed.

In addition to the above we must think of the common stock of knowledge and experiences that have come out of the past, and which will aid us in the solution of present and future problems. All these things, and more, must be taken into consideration before we may approach the problem of educating a child.

"Are We Democratic?"

We live in the greatest democracy in the world. We claim that we are democratic. Are we? Ever since we proclaimed our immortal Declaration of Independence we have prided ourselves in the belief that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. As noble as is the above sentiment it is nothing but words unless we vitalize this sentiment by adequate education.

If we believe that all men are created equal we must see to it that there is equality of opportunity, and opportunity for all, not for just a few.

If we really believe that each individual has a right to life we must be sure that he knows how to live, and that as far as science has shown us how, to liberate him from the shackles of pain and disease. The very first step in education should be education for physical fitness.

Problems of nutrition and exercise, the establishing of proper physical habits, the correction of physical defects—these things are vital. Strange that we just take for granted the most vital things in the world, and wake up with a shock when some tragedy happens. Many a child of rich parents has gone to an early death for lack of proper food.

Many a child grows up, struggles along, miserable and inefficient because of neglect of some physical defect. Still others have lives blighted through ignorance of some of the most fundamental facts that pertain to life and human welfare. We have been satisfied with mere existence. What we must strive for is full, rich, exuberant life—life on which moral and intellectual fitness depends.

We believe in liberty, but have we set our children free? Are we preparing them to live in the greatest democracy in the world? We know that democracy can strive only in atmosphere of freedom, but it must be an enlightened freedom. It must be freedom based on knowledge, understanding and good-will. It must be a freedom based on self-respect, self-control, and self-direction. Along with rights and privileges must be the desire and ability to serve, and to participate in matters that pertain to the common good.

The keynote of our American life is social democracy, but our scheme of education has not kept pace with our ideals. Liberty is still confused with license and ignorance and prejudice are barriers to the full realization of education borrowed from our ideals. We are still enslaved by outworn theories of education borrowed from our European ancestor, inadequate and absolutely undesirable in a modern democracy. So few people really think how significant these things are. They just blindly follow along, doing things as they have been in the habit of doing them, and fail to see the handicapps that are being put on our children.

We still have with us people who would limit the opportunities of our boys and girls to the rudiments the so-called three "Rs." That is a very good plan for an autocracy where it is desirable to perpetuate class distinction and class privilege, but in a democracy it should be a liberal education for all the people. A free people must be educated.

Appreciative Workers.

In our scheme of education we must recognize the fact that individuals differ and that each must be trained to develop the best that is in him. Each must be encouraged and prepared to render service according to his special ability. We must see to it that snobbishness of purely academic standards is replaced by a real appreciation of the workers of the world. We must appreciate the fact that all work is noble if the worker be noble. Under wise guidance each individual must be made acquainted with the world of work and must have freedom of choice, so that he may apply himself wholeheartedly to his work, and realize the joy that comes through well done.

Every human being can be a success at something. As educators, it is our problem to help each boy and each girl to find out what that something is and then prepare him to do it.

Even a subnormal child, unless an institutional case, may be so trained that he may find his work and do it well. I have in mind a feeble-minded boy of 18 who drifted about the streets, wayward and unhappy. He was found, taught things that he could learn, and placed in a position where he now makes a living and is happy and self-respecting, because he has found his work. His job is to push a little cart through a large building and collect articles at certain stations. The whole problem is to make fits out of misfits.

Emotions Important.

One of the most neglected fields of education is the education of the emotions. We are living in a wonderful world today. It will be still more wonderful tomorrow. Applied science has eliberated man from much of the drudgery of life. Man has much more leisure than formerly. In the near future he will have still more. What is he going to do with it? Education must provide for the free time. It is in his free time that man makes his greatest contributions, or commits his greatest crimes. Education must provide a worthy outlet for the emotions.

The human spirit is ever striving to express itself. Properly stimulated and guided the creative genius in man finds expression in art, science and literature. When proper motives are lacking the emotions run riot and misery and crime are the results.

Not only through art, science or literature, but he has the right to be so educated that he may hear the message that the master musician sends to us in some great symphony; he must must be taught how to see what the artist has put into his picture; he must be led to understand and appreciate the meaning of a masterpiece of literature; he must be led to see and love God's great universe of law and beauty, and to thrill with the joy of living.

Higher Ideals Vital.

We are just beginning to realize what may be accomplished through education. Germany and Japan have taught the world a wonderful lesson. With higher ideals and worthier purposes and the opportunities offered in our America, who shall set the limit on what may be accomplished through education? It seems strange that we seem indifferent to our opportunities and responsibilities. Is it because the glare of the American dollar has blinded us, and that we do not see and appreciate the real values of life?

If we would clearly define the obtives of American education and set ourselves steadfastly to the task we could remake our world in one generation. It is only through education that our children will come into the heritage proclaimed by the founders of our country. It is only through education that our children may be free, and enjoy the responsibilities and privileges of living in a great democracy.

State President Sends Message To Members

Mrs. Fred Wessels, of Savannah, incoming president of the State Parent-Teacher association, has addressed the following message to the members of the association:

"'All things must change,
To something new, to something strange.'

"So sings our poet, Longfellow. Our Georgia branch has, after two years, again changed 'to something new' that, I hope, will not long remain 'something strange' to you!

"As your vice president, I delighted to serve you, and as your president I still continue to serve.

"The Georgia branch consists of every member of every affiliated P.-T. A. in the state, and not merely of its newly elected and appointed officers and chairmen. The growth and progress of our organization rests in your hands as well as theirs. We are interdependent, each necessary to the other, and, when working in unison, forming a perfect whole.

"We are also the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, because there again we are a vital part, and the national grows in proportion to our faith in parent-teacher aims and purposes, and the loyalty with which we support our state work.

"The national now reports a membership of more than 650,000, extending into forty-seven states in the union.

"It is seldom that an incoming president has the opportunity of announcing in her first message such a momentous change to her associates as I have to announce to you.

"At the national convention recently held in St. Paul, Minn., the constitution and by-laws were revised. The length of the name, 'National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations,' had become cumbersome, and was no longer expressive of our true membership; so, after much serious discussion, the convention decided to change the name of the body to 'The National Congress of Parents and Teachers.'

Mrs. Jones Complimented.

"I have also the pleasure of informing you that Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, who has done such splendid work for Georgia as our president, has been elected national chairman of illiteracy by the national board of managers.

"At the recent state convention in Savannah Mrs. Jones was elected honorary president of the Georgia branch for two years, in recognition of her unselfish service and devotion to our cause.

"At present I am too new a president to say anything about work accomplished, but in my next messages I hope to have a few words about the things that you and I together will accomplish during the coming year."

Westminster P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Parent-Teacher association of Westminster Presbyterian church held a meeting Wednesday, June 4, at the church, Mrs. R. M. McFarland, the president, presiding.

Dr. Blanch Loveridge addressed the association, choosing "Harmony" as her subject. An interesting point brought out was that a child could not be well trained in a home where an inharmonious atmosphere prevailed, and that lack of harmony is the incipient cause of almost all business failures.

Mrs. J. W. Caldwell gave a short talk on the advantage of a vacation Bible school.

The next meeting will be held in the evening, and the fathers given an opportunity to attend.

Missionary Society. Meets in Covington.

The regular monthly meeting of the Covington Woman's Missionary society, of the First Methodist church was held at the parsonage Monday afternoon, June 2.

Seventh District G.F.W.C. Will Be Guest of Calhoun Woman's Club

The Calhoun's Woman's club held its regular May meeting at the club house with President Mrs. Ernest Neal in the chair.

Reviewing the year's work, the achievements should prove an inspiration of lasting value. Officers and members beautifully co-operating thus bringing a symmetrical enlargement and prosecution of every phase of club endeavor. Results justified the effort as evidenced by annual reports of chairmen.

A delegation of members attended the seventh district meet at Rockmart. Mrs. Ernest Neal as chairman of the seventh district committee on "Time and Place" read the invitation from Calhoun Woman's club inviting the seventh district to hold its meeting in 1925 at Calhoun. The invitation was accepted and the Calhoun Woman's club will be hostess.

Annual Reports of Chairmen.

Flag day was observed June 4th. Boy Scouts and Bluebird girls participating, each going through flag drills, pledges, creeds, etc. Citizenship day celebrated July 4 with club and city as hostess and host for county meet in patriotic demonstration. Club drew other organizations into public armistic exercises. Registration and voting has been stressed. Resolutions passed on the death of Woodrow Wilson. Observed Robert E. Lee's birthday, his portrait hung in club room. $60 raised from poppy sale.

Rest room kept comfortable and attractive was open every day during the year, except January 7, the cultured and refined club hostess always in attendance, rendered sweet service and information to 7,500 visitors coming from 85 towns and cities in 23 states and one foreign country.

Library containing more than 1,000 well chosen books open to public daily from 8 to 5 o'clock. Child welfare committee was active in sanitary campaign. Funds on hand, $12.

Five dollar prize given rural school, furnishing native flowering trees for arbor day planting. Twenty-five dollars donated for domestic science scholarship to rural school girl. Elaborate luncheon prepared and served to 150 rural school teachers and students and contesting pupils at county school meet April 4.

Two hundred trees planted Arbor day in the five city parks. New park made. National garden week and national music week were combined and observed, beginning with a floral party in which flower songs in costume were sung, other music of best quality rendered. Many shrubs and flowers have been planted; $5 offered for prettiest lawn in city. Sponsored cotton mill two illustrated lectures by specialist on tuberculosis and cancer. Also lecture by local physician on prevention and treatment of "common colds." Cooperated with the state in distributing cancer literature throughout the country.

High-class music furnished at all regular and special club meetings cultivating taste and helping to develope talent among our members and throughout the community. Trained 25 children in operetta which was a success to the club artistically and financially. Together with a representative body of civitans and other prominent citizens Calhoun Woman's club made a strong effort to secure government postoffice building for Calhoun, through Senator Harris and Congressman Lee.

Quarterly Appropriation.

Our town and county realizing the club's worth to the community, makes each a quarterly appropriation to supplement the club funds for maintainance of rest room. The Calhoun Times, our county newspaper, has been helpful and appreciative at all times in our every effort.

Club rooms has been decorated with fresh flowers appropriate to each of the twelve monthly meetings and all special club occasions. Floral tributes of love and sympathy sent to families of bereaved members. Reports of all meetings and other club activities have been published in county and state papers. Twenty-five dollars has been raised and spent on clubhouse. Club compiled local history, of authentic Cherokee Indian lore, and furnished Dr. W. R. L. Smith with booklet of same, for his Indian history.

Funds on hand for erecting monument to World war heroes of Gordon county. Fifty dollars worth of Christmas seals sold to aid in stamping out tuberculosis.

Established at clubhouse, as a public benefit to county women, "a woman's exchange." During December about $100 was taken in by our club hostess and distributed to women for their handiwork. Forty-two dollars was raised for expenses of delegates to state and county meets. We were represented at both by delegates. Nearly $400 on hand for purchase of new piano. Perhaps the biggest and most far reaching of anything yet undertaken by the club, is the endeavor to cooperate with the 51 schools of the county in which 51 club women will each sponsor a school and form committees in each school locality to work under direction of tachers and county superintendent.

A sinking fund of one-fifth of the income during this administration has been formed and placed in the bank as a nucleous for a new club house. Grandmother's day is annually enjoyed by entertaining these honored guests who are 70 years or more. Ten were present this year. The club's twenty-second anniversary was celebrated by a colonial party in which members and their husbands were present in costume. Tallulah maintainance $10 was given. Tallulah endowment fund, our pledge has been paid in full. Ella White fund, our pledge has been paid in full. University room at Athens, $125 paid three years ago. National headquarters at Washington, D. C., $10. We have administered to local charity.

Officers Elected.

After the reports were made Mrs. Ernest Neal made a talk expressing appreviation of love and mutual confidence exhibited in her staff of officers and the entire membership of the club, for the club year just ended.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. G. B. Erwin; first vice president, Mrs. Ernest Neal; second vice president, Mrs. John Littlefield; third vice president, Mrs. T. W. Harbin; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Oscar Lewis; recording secretary, Mrs. Z. T. Jackson; treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Harlan; auditor, Mrs. A. B. David (honorary member).

Under the administration of Mrs. Ernest Neal the Calhoun's Woman's club enjoyed a most successful 12 months of activity during the club year, which came to a close Thursday of last week. The Woman's club has long been a major factor in civic affairs in Calhoun, and in the past year was especially active. No doubt the new administration will carry on the work in the same vigorous manner as was done by the officers for the year just ended.

Retiring President Gives Report on Brunswick Club

Mrs. T. W. Mallard, of Brunswick, retiring president of the Brunswick Woman's club, made the following report at the expiration of her term of office at the meeting held last week.

She said: "As usual, our outstanding achievement this year has been our work along educational lines. The series of meetings held by the educational department have been instructive as well as most interesting. Musical numbers rendered at these meetings—and also at each business meeting—have added greatly to our enjoyment.

"Our yearly contribution of $45 has been made to Tallulah Falls school—$20 to maintenance fund and $25 to endowment fund. To student aid fund we also gave $20.

"A scholarship to the short course at agricultural college, Athens, has been given to some deserving girl from this county each summer for several years. An artist's concert was sponsored in January for its educational value to the community. We have had several interesting speakers as our guests, one of whom was our district president, Mrs. D. D. Smith, of Valdosta.

"The Brunswick Woman's club has done much community service and welfare work during the past year, having assisted in the Salvation Army drive, Y. W. C. A. drive, Red Cross drive, tuberculosis seal sale and had tag day for city hospital in observance of 'National Hospital day,' May 12. We are planning to sponsor a historical pageant in connection with the opening of the St. Simons highway in June. Needy families have been assisted at Christmas and other times, jail visited, and much other work done by welfare committee. Home economics department assisted home demonstration agent in putting on Glynn county agricultural fair. Our civic department has been active in adding to the beauty of our city—a number of trees and plants having been planted and cared for, among other important work.

"Poppies were sold on Armistice day by our committee on friendly relations with ex-service men—raising thereby the sum of $111. Of this amount $50 was given to the local post of the American Legion; $50 was sent to United States Red Cross hospital No. 62, for disabled veterans, located at Augusta.

"Eighty-five books were given to the children's department of the public library last year. This year we have given 33, making a total of 118. Not quite what we were requested to give, but an appreciable number.

"An invaluable accomplishment of this organization was sending a tubercular patient to Alto sanitarium for six months. This young girl has recently returned home, pronounced cured. It is a matter of deep regret that our tuberculosis fund is now exhausted.

The Redpath chautauqua was again sponsored and a satisfactory amount realized for the club, $311.77, though, from the standpoint of its value to the community, it would be worth while if nothing above the guarantee were raised.

The last payment on our pledge of $100 to General Federation home, Washington, D. C., has been made. With the exception of the Atlanta Woman's club, the Brunswick club made the largest contribution of any club in the state to this cause.

"Not quite a year ago we purchased a lot, adjoining the lot which we already owned, for which we paid cash. The club now has a lot with a frontage of 100 feet and a depth of 90 feet. Upon this property may we at no distant date erect a handsome clubhouse.

Mrs. Jones Announces Scholarship To Tallulah Falls

A perpetual scholarship to the Tallulah Falls Industrial school, in the name of the Donna Cappie Lewis Stone, was announced by Mrs. Bolling Jones, chairman of scholarships, at the meeting of the trustees of the school held Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club.

This school is the only one of its kind in existence owned by a State Federation of Woman's Clubs. It is a craft school where Georgia girls and boys from the mountain district can obtain an education, and is maintained by the State Federation.

Name Gift Scholarship.

This name gift scholarship of $2,000, was made by Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Stone. Aside from its educational advantage it carries an unusual amount of sentiment, in that it is given in the name of their lovely young daughter, Miss Donna Stone, and Mrs. Stone's mother.

Miss Stone is very cultured and has been highly educated. She attended school at Baylor college, in Texas, afterward going to Gunston Hall in Washington. She was also a student at Cornell university and last year was enrolled at the Leland Powers School of Expression in Boston. She is a beautiful young woman, possessing an attractive personality and many other charming characteristics. She is deeply interested that some young girl have the opportunity of receiving an education, and has a natural sympathy for the girl who hungers for the chance to benefit herself educationally. She has had all the advantages of the modern girl, and has a decided trend toward music and education. It is quite fitting that some other young girl less fortunate in material things than is Miss Stone, benefit from the generosity of her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Stone are active in the membership of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, and take leading parts in the religious program of the church.

Mrs. Ottley Presides.

Mrs. John K. Ottler, president of the Tallulah Falls trustee, presided at the business meeting. Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the state federation, was also in attendance, and the scholarship donated by Mr. and Mrs. Stone was accepted and highly valued by the board of trustees. The other officers include Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, of Savannah, vice president; Mrs. W. C. Martin, of Dalton, second vice president; Mrs. Price Gilbert, secretary, and Mrs. T. T. Stevens, treasurer.

G. F. W. C. Will Support U. S. Flag Campaign.

A few weeks ago a man in Atlanta was seen wiping the oil from his car with a United States flag. This act caused a vigorous protest from an onlooker at the time and the publicity given that incident has led the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to undertake, through that organization, and in cooperation with other civic bodies, particularly the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce, a campaign of education to bring about greater respect for the flag.

Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, director for Georgia of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has procured a leaflet from the national Americanism commission of the American Legion, entitled, "Flag of the United States, the Living Symbol of Our Great Republic —How to Display It—How to Respect It." Mrs. Inman is causing this leaflet to be sent to every club in the Georgia federation, and it will be brought before these bodies through the citizenship committees of the clubs. Local schools are also being furnished with the leaflet, and the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce, through its large membership, is aiding the club women in this campaign.

June 14 is national Flag day. Throughout the country that day will be dedicated to the flag of our country. Mrs. Inman hopes Georgia will take a leading part in this observance.

East Point Woman's Club.

At the last business meeting of the club, yearly reports were read by chairmen from each department of the work. Mrs. W. S. Cox was elected to the second vice presidency; Mrs. R. W. Harmon was elected recording secretary, and Mrs. Van Marden was re-elected, treasurer.

Mrs. G. C. Christian will serve as president until the club elects some one to fill that office. Mrs. Christian has worked untiringly during her administration and the club regrets deeply that she cannot serve during the incoming year.

The club and the parent-teacher associations will sponsor the Radcliff chautauqua, beginning June 10 and lasting through the 12th. The proceeds will be used for the clubhouse building fund and the beautifying of the school grounds.

The chautauqua will be held in a tent on the triangle of Forest avenue and North Church street. The entertainment will consist of music, high-class lectures, story-telling, etc. The public is cordially invited to co-operate with these worthy organizations and help to make the chautauqua a financial success.

Community Service Chairman Outlines Division Program

Mrs. George A. Johns, chairman of division of community service for the state federation.

Mrs. George A. Johns, chairman of the division of community service for the state federation, has sent to the various chairmen in her division an interesting program which outlines the work for each month. In May she urged the establishing of community centers, stressed Harmon foundation plan for playgrounds, May-day games, athletics, plans for flower show in the fall, Better Homes week, May 11, 18.

June—Organize juniors for summer sports, begin community sings, swimming pools, tennis courts, big picnic to boost plans for summer recreation, continue to stress Harmon foundation plan.

July—Sane celebration of Fourth of July, pageant at big gathering; stress proper use and respect for flag and patriotic songs, urge organization of bands and orchestras through schools.

August—Better community spirit, fishing expeditions, statewide Community-day celebration. Plan for colored people.

September—Sports for boys and girls with "grown-ups" behind them. Do real community service by helping unfortunates secure books, glasses, clothing or any necessary articles for school. Line parents up behind the teachers; it is the best community spirit in the world.

October—Show genuine spirit of service toward the schools and make them the center of activity and interest. Flower show (fancy work might be combined with it). Big gathering to foster winter sports. Public forum to discuss neighborhood needs and ambitions.

November—Armistice day celebration. Free service of newspapers to bring together those who have services to sell or give and those who need those services.

December—Carol singing, community Christmas trees, fostering true Christmas spirit.

Community Service.

Mrs. Johns declares that the greatest word in the world, considering the welfare of the masses is service. The greatest consideration of all after the home is the community. Put the two together and you have the greatest asset for a perfect haven and the true Christian spirit of neighborliness.

Though we often hear the remark that the world is now one small community since automobiles and telephones have reduced distances to a minimum, still there never was a time in the history of the world when the true spirit of community service was needed as much as it is today. The world is advancing at a swift pace; the people are crowding into each day two or three times as much living as they did only a few years ago, and in the mad rush neighbors and true neighborliness are being forgotten.

There must be a return to the old principle of "love of humanity" instead of wasting time and life in useless frivolities. There is a real necessity for a genuine community spirit to bring together the rural communities and the towns with a purpose and desire to further the interests of both and to tighten the bands of good fellowship which is necessary for a well-rounded county and state. One and all must be made to realize that they cannot build a high wall of selfishness around their own particular pleasures and advantages, but that they must meet on the common ground of the common good. This is the meaning of "community." Know the people of your community and county.

It Works as Leaven.

The only real use for the community service division is to help to bring about this condition, to help the people to help themselves and thus to help the whole. It works as leaven; a little will leaven the whole, and once the idea gets a start it will multiply naturally and rapidly, for man was not made to live alone. There is nothing so contagious as a spirit of good fellowship and this is at the bottom of community service.

"A great many people know how to work and many work well, but there are extremely few who can play at all, and fewer still who know the genuine sort of play that is just as necessary for the health and to a well-rounded character as deep thinking. As it is important to organize and direct the industry of our county and state, just so it is important—doubly so—to organize and direct recreation. Recreation is the re-creation of mind and body under the stimulus of scientific, organized, supervised play.

"Work with the "grown-ups" and play with them."

Griffin Woman's Club Closes Year's Report.

The Griffin Woman's club closed the year with a record achievement, of which any club might be justly proud. Since this is an organization whose sole purpose is community progress and personal development for broader service, the club rendered to the public the account of the trust. The Woman's club should be regarded as one of the best educational institutions in the city. The committees on education, child welfare, civis, health, citizenship, music and literature have been actively alert and instrumental in serving the community in various ways. The financial report shows interest and strength: scholarship, $200; clubhouse, $130; kitchen contest, $30; Tallulah Falls school, $25; students aid, $10; home economics, $5; various dues, $7; making a total of $688.98, with a balance on hand of $75.48.

State Chairman Of Kindergarten Issues Letter

Miss Eduma Wood, state chairman of kindergartens, issues the following letter from Charles W. Elliot, of the National Kindergarten association in New York city.

He says: "I am sure that the fundamental ideas of the kindergarten are just what are needed in all grades of the school. The best principle and practice of the kindergarten is that the children should be happy while they learn and that they learn better when happy. The motive of the kindergarten, 'Joy in doing,' should be the motive in all education, and the inspiring motive of all human life. I believe that kindergartens should be a regular part of every urban public school system.

"The National Kindergarten association of New York has recently called my attention to their estimate that in the United States only one child in nine now has the privilege of kindergarten training.

"I earnestly hope that parents and educators will unite in an effort to secure the advantages of sound training for more of the nation's little ones at the habit-forming time of life. England has set us a good example by authorizing the expenditure of public money on the education of children as young as two years of age. Petitions presented to school boards at this time might receive favorable consideration in many communities."

Mrs. Hodges Heads Eighth District As President

Mrs. Walter L. Hodges, of Hartwell, was elected to succeed Mrs. Lena Felker Jones, as president of the eighth district, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, at the convention held May 30 in Lavonia.

Mrs. Hodges is a very brilliant and charming woman. She is recognized as one of Georgia's most prominent and active women identified with the highest type of club work. She has served as vice president of the eighth district and it anti-narcotic chairman of the federation.

Mrs. Hodges will carry on the great work of the district which has been so greatly advanced under the leadership of the retiring president, Mrs. Lewis.

Miss Clairo Ray Entertains Convention.

The outstanding feature of the eighth district Federation of Women's Club's meeting, which met in Lavonia on May 29 and 30, was the buffet supper at which Miss Clairo Ray, the president of the Lavonia Woman's club, entertained Thursday evening from 7 to 8:30 o'clock, honoring the guests of the convention, local club members and their husbands and friends.

The lower floor of the beautiful home was thrown together for the occasion and the elegance of simplicity dominated throughout. Quanities of garden flowers in pink toned to red were used to carry out the color scheme.

The guests were received at the door by Mrs. Swift Gilmer and Mrs. B. F. Cheek. The following composed the receiving line: Miss Clairo Ray, president of the Lavonia Woman's club; Mrs. Ella F. Brantley, of Blackshear, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Z. I. Fitspatrick, of Madison, ex-president of Georgia Federation; Mrs. Lena F. Lewis, of Monroe, president of eighth district; Mrs. W. L. Hodges, of Hartwell, first vice president of eighth district; Mrs. Joseph Vason, of Madison, recording secretary of eighth district; Mrs. J. L. McGarity, of Monroe, corresponding secretary of eighth district; Mrs. K. S. Anderson, of Madison, treasurer of eighth district, and Mrs. D. T. Barnes, of Canon, president of Franklin county federation.

The most delightful feature of the evening was the music furnished by Mrs. May Cornog Crawford on the violin and Miss Robie Haley accompanist. The following young people served the supper: Misses Sarah Maret, Mamie Isbell, Eloise Burton, Berthine Osborne, Bernice Wilder and Annie Fay Sewell. The punch bowls were presided over by Mrs. Ligon Maret, Mrs. James McDaniel and Mrs. Dewey Pulliam.

Others assisting in entertaining were Miss Miriam Harrison, of Carnesville; Miss Lois Fisher, Mrs. H. H. Bonner, Mrs. E. H. Holland and Mrs. E. R. McMurry. About 200 guests from over the district and community enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Ray.

Hartwell Woman's Club Works on Scholarship.

The Hartwell Woman's club is bringing to a close one of the most successful years of its history. Perhaps the most notable work of the year was done on the Joel McMullan scholarship fund, which was begun by the club last year, and the most notable feature was the vote to remove the limit to membership in the club.

Among those who will attend the eighth district meeting in Lavonia are Mrs. M. L. Hodges, Mrs. A. C. Skelton, Mrs. T. S. Matheson, Mrs. G. C. Hays and Mrs. R. E. Matheson.

The officers for the year 1924-25 have been chosen as follows: President, Mrs. A. C. Skelton; vice president, Mrs. R. E. Matheson; second vice president, Mrs. B. C. Alford; recording secretary, Mrs. G. C. Hays; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. W. Thornton; treasurer, Mrs. S. R. Patton, and press reporter, Mrs. Steve Skelton.

Mrs. Winter Gives Her Report For 1920-1924 Administration

Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, of Minneapolis, Minn., retiring president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, gave her report for the 1920-1924 administration to the seventeenth biennial convention at the opening of the business session in Los Angeles, Cal., on June 4. She said:

The past is valuable to us only as it portends something bigger than itself and suggests the next steps.

This president, about to die, is going to spare the delegates a list of speeches she has made, of the journeys she has taken, of the letters she has written, of the myriad contacts she has had with other organizations, and of her mistakes which would take the greatest space of all. There have been board and executive committee meetings, trips to Washington to consult about headquarters, visits to states and districts and clubs, magazine and newspaper articles galore. If you had to listen to the long tale, it might either put you to sleep or move you to tears of sympathy, but in either case you would promptly forget it. The bulk of it lies in these two notebooks which will pass on to your next president and presently be buried in files where some curious archaeologist may some day exhume it.

Let these few moments be just a summing up of the energies of the past four years with our face toward the future.

When the present administration came into office, this organization, like all the world, was facing a transformed order of things, and the question was could we so readjust both our machinery and our outlook, our methods and our point of view, that we could continue to be a living, growing thing. Only the organism that is capable of using the sweep of the times as a swimmer uses the current is going to keep its head above the waters. How match our great traditions to another onward move. There had been heroic work done to create this great federation and to keep it alive during the disruptive years of the war and the after war years were troublesome ones. Our organization problem, like the problem of the whole world, was how to become both more democratic and more intelligent, how enlarge our machinery to include many more workers and at the some time deepen the zeal of those many.

The first move of this administration, the day after the close of the Des Moines convention, was to call the state presidents into its board meeting for a frank discussion of policies and methods. The result was a reorganization in our departments of work with an attempt to simplify them and to use names that would be a little more in accordance with the interests of the times. Going even deeper into our policies was a right about face in one significant particular. We had been growing more and more uncomfortably aware of the anomoly in having some clubs hold membership directly in the federation and others hold membership only through their states. There had been various abortive attempts to shut off direct membership and to do what was called the logical thing of holding only through the state, but the delegate body would never vote an amendment disenfranchising itself. This administration decided that instead of saying "keep out" it would say "come in"—that it was equally logical to invite every club to direct membership. The result has been hardly short of incredible—that in four years the movement has swept into membership over three thousand new clubs raising our direct list from about two thousand to almost five thousand, and that fourteen states have amended their constitutions so as to bring every club that is a member of the state also into general membership. The impetus of this new movement means vastly more than added members. With it goes a vision of what our coordinated energies mean, a linking of us east and west and south and north that strengthens every fiber of our organization.

General Federation Magazine.

That first meeting of the state presidents with the board brought out one fact that had to be reckoned with immediately, the fact that only ten of the state presidents were willing to give active support to the continuance of our general federation magazine, while twenty-five definitely stated that they would do no more of the canvassing of subscriptions that would be necessary to carry it on. Under these circumstances, there was nothing for your administration officers to do but to set in motion agencies for winding up the affairs of the magazine, and to substitute as an experiment, the free news bulletin which has now for more than three years been carrying in simple, but compact space the news of the club world to every club that holds direct membership as well as to officers and one thousand newspapers. The satisfaction has been all but universay. But the chair realizes that the success of the news has been largely a piece of good fortune in the willing sacrifice of time and money made by professional newspaper woman who knows the game both from the point of view of news and the point of view of the profession of the printer.

And still we gaze and still the wonder bredds,
That one small News can hold so much as Lessie Read's.

The rising currents of club life and the leap in numbers and the enormous growth in women's interests in every phase of public affairs inevitably made the federation feel more than ever its own inadequacy in handling the mere business of club organizations. For years one faithful and devoted woman, Mary I. Wood, had given her time and love far up in New Hampshire to clubwomen all over the country. There came the struggle under Mr. Cowles to enlarge that bureau of information to a real headquarters in Washington, but the tumult of war times and inadequate funds had held it back. We could hardly hold up our heads among the great organizations of the country without some more adequate place which should hold us unified while administrations came and went. So grew the movement toward headquarters. The purchase of the lovely home in Washington, the setting up of its machinery for the service of clubwomen, its printing and multigraphing outfit, its addressograph, which keeps one girl busy changing names and addresses because you will keep electing new officers at all kinds of miscellaneous times.

Paralleling those movements must be added two very important developments for linking up the new and old and pouring fresh currents of life into our veins: the first, insuring the continuity of our efforts by getting more and more young people into our organizations which resulted in creating the committee on junior memberships; and, second, the equally important right about face in our own attitude toward our job that has lifted it out of the amateur stage and made us realize the club work was not a catch-as-catch-can affair, nor to be administered by rule of thumb but that we needed to school ourselves in the best ways of doing our work to make ourselves efficient. This means the training school of the club institute.

So you may forget the details but please remember these four years as having made these definite contributions to federation life.

1. The closer relation to state officers to each other and to the general federation.
2. The increase in number of clubs in direct membership from two thousand to five thousand.
3. The movement toward universal membership made actual in fourteen states.
4. The reorganization of department work.
5. The democracy of the free news bulletin.
6. The purchase and equipping of headquarters.
7. Junior membership organization and club institutes.

But none of these things is the end yet. They are all beginnings—promises of new interrelation of the millions of us one with another and for the means of serving that interrelation. The president of today can only hope that the future is going to carry all those half accomplishments to heights beyond her dreams and her all too inadequate abilities.

In addition to our millions of affiliated members, there are about 1,700,000 women in clubs all over our states. Probably not more than seven hundred thousand of them hold direct membership in the General Federation. Every one of them ought to hold such membership not so much for what she can get for her ten cents but for what she can give. You know your president never knew ten cents was a vast sum until she heard it discussed by trembling clubs.

Raise Endowment Fund.

Last year, there was an alluring proposition laid before your board of directors by one of the best friends that club work has, a proposal to put on a nation wide campaign to raise an endowment fund of $5,000,000 for the General Federation. Why? Because we are so pitifully hampered in the things we want to do; because we could not, for example, take over the Better Homes movement but had to let a separate organization come into existence to perpetuate it; because we could not put on Garden Week or a dozen great and dramatic services that require large sums but that ought to be put where they belong and under direct management of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. We had to go out and beg help from magazines and newspapers, from individuals and even organizations to have even a small share in them. So the $5,000,000 dangled alluringly before our administrative eyes. This president lay awake nights to think about it, but was gradually forced to a conclusion about this organization which she has learned to love as she loves her life blood. A huge sum at the center—suppose it could be raised—means a centralized power. It tends to draw around itself an atmosphere of dictatorship and might even tempt to office an arrogant type of woman whom God forbid should ever conduct the affairs of this General Federation. This administration has longed for a greater and ever greater democracy and a greater individual responsibility. And what of the far off woman who is giving her ten cents. Would it seem to her worth while to match it with millions? The ideal Federation is an organization in which we shall all share alike. So your president opposed ever proposing to you the raising of this great endowment. But note when she says we all share, the emphasis is on share. We must each feel the responsibility not as a burden but as a mighty privilege to be a part of the consolidated womanhood of the greatest organization of women in the world. Our individual small gift of money must be given, but it must be matched by the gift of our spirit. Your president hopes that you are not going to fail her trust and make it better to have measured our success in terms of a central authority and power backed by money. You must put over this universal membership to make that money yours, ours, not some far off "theirs."

For every year with our growth in numbers, with our awakening and greater civic consciousness, the demands upon us grow. Possibilities loom upon us suddenly for great acomplishments, and if we hesitate or turn away, they seek other agencies and warmer hearts.

Our contacts with other organizations are almost bewildering. The president confesses that she has sometimes to ask her secretary, "What am I on that organization?" so numerous are the places on boards, advisory or official with which she is tied up. Yet for every one accepted fifty are declined and the daily decisions which must be faced with incoming mail give one a constant sensation of walking a tight rope. The stronger and greater we are, the more other people want to use us. When it comes to future policies, there will be something to say about this question.

But those contacts with things that are going on all over the country reflect back in a renewed confidence in the vital forces and in our own dominating influence, our potency if we choose to avail ourselves of our chances for greatness.

So the administration of 1920 to 1924 bequeaths to 1924 to 1926, a problem rather than an accomplishment, but a problem with a mighty hope. We have been only a push-off. May 1924 to 1926 fly where we have plodded.

CHIEF-CEMETERY ISSUES STUDIED

Decision in the injunction petition of fourteen members of city council to prevent the police committee of that body from electing a chief of police will be handed down Monday morning, Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, announced Saturday at conclusion of the hearing.

Judge Thomas took the case under advisement because of the numerous authorities involved, which he will look over Sunday, he said. Judge Thomas is also expected to hand down his decision in the injunction suit to prevent establishment of the proposed Oak Grove cemetery Monday. Both cases, he said, would involve considerable work before he reached a conclusion.

In the police injunction case, the court stated the real question at issue was whether either the city council or its police committee has the power to elect a chief of police before the appeal of the deposed chief, James L. Beavers, is disposed of by the courts. If he decides that either has this power, he will then have to determine in which body the elective power is vested.

At the concluding session of the hearing Saturday an affidavit by E. H. Inman, chairman of the police committee, was introduced deposing that the mayor and three members of the committee met on June 3, the day following the vote by council to withdraw the committee's elective power, and offered the job to Deputy Sheriff W. M. Mayo, who declined it.

The affidavit stated that Mr. Inman next called a meeting for the following day when E. L Jett was to be nominated, which course was frustrated by the temporary restraining order of the superior court granted by Judge G H Howard. This order was granted pending the hearing had before Judge Thomas

A copy of Chief Beavers' appeal from the decision of the committee ousting him also was introduced in evidence

Dinner To Mark 89th Birthday Of Mrs. Felton

In honor of her distinguished service and of her attainment of a seat in the United States senate, a dinner will be tendered to Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton Monday night at the Atlanta Woman's club on Peachtree street by a number of her friends. The occasion celebrates Mrs. Felton's 89th birthday, which will be next Tuesday.

Mrs. Felton will spend Tuesday in Cartersville, her home, where special exercises in her honor will be held.

The Atlanta occasion which will be informal will include short talks by former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, who appointed Mrs. Felton to the senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Thomas E. Watson; Governor Clifford L. Walker and Mayor Walter A. Sims. The wives of the three speakers, close friends of Mrs. Felton, will be present. Mrs. Felton will deliver a short talk.

Mrs. Felton ranks among Georgia's most distinguished women, having been active in journalistic and political life for more than half a century. Her "Memoirs of Georgia Politics," published in 1911, is considered an original source on its subject, having been written out of the author's personal experience and knowledge.

Upon the death of Senator Watson in September, 1922, Governor Hardwick appointed Mrs. Felton to represent Georgia in his stead. The appointment was considered honorary only, as congress was not in session. When in November Judge Walter F. George, of the supreme court of Georgia, was elected to succeed Senator Watson, he graciously consented for Mrs. Felton to be seated at the ensuing session, before taking his seat. She was seated and addressed the senate, marking an epoch in the political advancement of women.

Freeman Considers Race For DeKalb Legislator

Left, ex-United States Senator Mrs. W. H. Felton; right, R. J. Freeman, of DeKalb county. Mrs. Felton, who will be 89 years old Tuesday, was born in DeKalb. In sitting for her picture at The Constitution office Friday, she said: "I must wear my hat, I haven't had my hair dressed today, and you know I always like to look primp." Mr. Freeman was born within a few miles of the place where Mrs. Felton was born. The two met in Atlanta Friday and Mrs. Felton told him things about his great-grandfather that he never had heard of.

R. J. Freeman, former road commissioner of DeKalb county, has announced that he will probably become a candidate for representative of the county at the approaching primary.

He was in Atlanta Friday and by chance met Mrs. William H. Felton, ex-United States senator, and it developed in conversation that the two were born within a few miles of each other in DeKalb county. Mrs. Felton in 1835 at Belmont, 10 miles south of Decatur, and Mr. Freeman between Belmont and Decatur. Mrs. Felton will be 89 years old next Tuesday.

"Sonny," she said, talking to Mr. Freeman, "I knew your great grandfather, in fact I have known your family all my life."

Favors Budget System.

Mr. Freeman states that he is in favor of a budget system for DeKalb county as well as for the state, and he thinks the county should have a purchasing agent, and that it should seek closer cooperation with state and federal authorities in the matter of good roads.

He thinks Georgia has too many counties, that there should be fewer legislative sessions, less taxes, less expense and less politics.

He thinks the interest of the state would be better served if some of the smaller counties were merged, and that there should be a reduction in the number of representatives.

"I am opposed to annual sessions of the legislature," said he. "I think it would be better if they should meet biennially, and better still if quadrennially. We should repeal obsolete and dead laws.

"State and county primaries should be held on the same date just as regular elections are and they should be four years apart.

"I favor free school books up to the fifth grade.

Interested in Highways.

"I am tremendously interested in good roads as I have spent most of my life building and maintaining highways. Our present road law should be amended so that, like North Carolina, the state should lay out and develop a complete system of highways covering all Georgia. The present hit-and-miss system is incomplete and is a monstrosity due to nothing but cheap politics. Without a statewide system, we cannot connect the good roads that have been completed by progressive counties, nor will we ever have a highway system that will be worth while.

"Under the existing system, many counties of the state are piddling on side roads, neglecting the main avenues just for the sake of some man getting a few votes. The state is wasting more than a million dollars a year this way.

"The old saying that the 'strength of a chain is measured by its weakest link' is true in this instance.

"I will, within the next few days, announce my decision as to becoming a candidate to represent DeKalb county."

Leader in Florida Campaign Prominently Connected Here

John Wellborn Martin, who is far in the lead in the race for governor of Florida, and who is believed to be practically assured of nomination, is well known in Atlanta and has many relatives here.

He is a nephew of Edmund W. Martin, prominent Atlantan; a first cousin of H. Warner Martin, vice president of the Atlanta and Lowry National bank; first cousin of Major Frank H. Martin, who served with distinction during the world war; and a first cousin of Mrs. Willie Martin Hurt, all of Atlanta. He is also a cousin on his maternal side of ex-Governor John M. Slaton, and on his paternal side of Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution.

He is a grandson of Colonel John Marshall Martin, of Ocala, Fla., and his grandfather on his maternal side was the late James B. Owens, of Marion county, Fla., who was Confederate States senator from Florida during the Civil war.

Mr. Martin is about 42 years old and is a native of Florida. He has been three times elected mayor of Jacksonville by overwhelming majorities. He is a lawyer of great ability, energy and boldness and is popular throughout the state. He is a man of large stature, of handsome and striking appearance.

JOHN W. MARTIN.

Distinguished Family.

His father was John Marshall Martin, Jr., late of Jacksonville, a brother of Edmund W. Martin, of Atlanta.

His grandfather, Colonel John Marshall Martin, was captain of the Marion Light Artillery company and went with General Bragg on his raid into Kentucky during the civil war. At the battle of Richmond, Ky., he was ordered to take position with his company on the crest of an open hill; his company had to wheel into position and begun firing on the enemy, after the command of its captain, "Forward into battery, left oblique march." It was a beautiful wheel and movement. Soon the enemy's sharpshooters begun playing on the battery, inflicting a terrible wound on Captain Martin behind his ear. He fell from a magnificent gray horse he was riding, but not until he had given the command which credited his company with the victory of that battle. For the captain's gallantry in that battle, he was elected to the Confederate congress. He remained there one term, only long enough to regain his health. When wounded he lay between life and death for many weeks. After regaining his health he was elected colonel of the Ninth Florida regiment, and remained with General Lee, commanding his regiment until the surrender.

Martin Leader.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 7.—John W. Martin is leading Sidney J. Catts by a wide margin for second choice votes cast in the democratic primary last Tuesday, it is shown by a tabulation here today of available figures from six counties, including Duval and Hillsborough, both of which Martin carried over Catts.

The combined first and second choice votes for the six counties show that Martin has a total of 17,473 compared to 11,950 for the former governor. This gives Martin a majority of 5,523. The figures show that in the six counties Martin gained 4,475 second choice votes to 2,784 for Catts.

As a result of the second choice votes, Putnam county changed from Catts to Martin.

The combined first and second choice votes show the following:

	Martin	Catts
Marion	1,685	891
Pasco	768	704
Putnam	893	783
St. Lucie	1,164	354
Duval	7,212	4,682
Totals	17,473	11,950

Father of Babe Tells to Police History of Birth

Mrs. Bass Must File Regular Adoption Papers for Baby Rae.

Mrs. C. C. Bass, 911 Peachtree street, may keep the infant Rae, mysteriously found in a clothes basket on her doorstep Friday night, but if she does, it will be after going through regular adoption proceedings, and with the consent of at least one of the six-weeks-old girl's parents.

For the father, 21 years old and a student of a North Carolina university, was arrested Saturday by police, explained the circumstances which prompted him to abandon the babe, and indicated he would place no obstacles in Mrs. Bass' path if she desired to adopt the youngster.

However, the father admitted that the note which he left in the baby's improvised cradle and which told of the death of the child's mother and the father's futile attempt to find means of supporting mother and infant, was a fabrication.

Baby at Hospital.

When Mrs. Bass was notified of the young father's arrest, she grudgingly brought the infant to police station, and after a protest, turned the child over to officers. Pending final disposition of the case, the baby has been turned over to nurses at Grady hospital, and is now the hospital pet.

According to the story told police by the child's father, he and his young wife, who is also a student at the North Carolina institution, were married against the wishes of the bride's father. Not wishing to anger him further by knowledge of the impending event, the couple came to Atlanta, and the child was born here six weeks ago. The mother later returned to her father's Carolina plantation, and her husband expected to join her there as soon as he had made satisfactory disposition of the baby.

Following his wife's departure, the motherless infant became more and more a burden on his inexperienced hands, and as his limited funds had been expended on the trip and for necessary expenses attending the child's birth, he grew desperate. Having no friends to confide in, and no one in whose care he could give the baby, he finally decided to leave the child on the steps of the Bass home.

Take Good Care of Baby.

"Mrs. Bass had been described to me as a kind-hearted, motherly sort of woman, and I was sure that she would take good care of our baby," he told police.

The man's arrest was more or less of a coincident, as clothes worn by the baby were identified by a young woman who now resides at the Bass home, but who lived at the same address as the man and his wife at the time of the baby's birth.

Bull Leadership Badly Needed In Stock Market, Declares Platt

BY C. H. PLATT.

New York, June 7.—(Special to The Constitution)—In spite the better news that developed during the past week, the market was not able to make much progress in the advance which started when the president signed the tax bill. There was concentrated selling by professionals in a few stocks and it looks as if the bear forces are going to make a fight to stop any advances that get under way. If there should be any new addition to the short side of importance, however, it is likely that a sharp squeeze would be put through. There are several big pools being formed in various stocks and it looks as if powerful interests are ready to take the constructive side of the market. Until they give the shorts some severe punishment, it is not likely that the obstructive tactics that have been used during the week will be stopped.

There are many of the professionals who are still very bearish on business and on securities and they are hopeful of bringing about some new unsettlement of the market. In the next week there are several factors which may have a definite market influence one way or another as they develop. The first is an expected sharp decline in the May report of U. S. Steel unfilled tonnages, which might be used as a new excuse to sell the market. The other is the convening of the republican convention, which may produce some news that will have a favorable influence on stocks. While the little traders in stocks are doing hardly anything, some of them cautiously buying but either selling out on the first fair profits or else taking a small loss if there is a turn against them, some big accumulation has gone on recently. Much of this has been for a long pull, with the buyers indifferent to the present possibilities for gains or losses, but expecting that there will be much higher markets before the year is over.

Investment Demand.

There has also been a rather large amount of investment buying, in the higher-grade issues. In several specialties and a few of the leading stocks, pools have formed with a view of promoting much higher prices as soon as there is a prospect for getting a public following. These things have brought about some sharp rises in a few stocks, but as a whole the market has not yet shown that it is out of a strictly trading area in which several advances and reactions may be expected before there is a definite change. Some of the people who have been bearish on stocks for many months have recently changed to the bull side and are advising the purchase of carefully-selected issues. Unless something new arises of an unfavorable nature, it is believed that whenever the market does get out of its present trading area it will go to much higher levels, although this may be stretched over a long period.

There are a number of careful observers of conditions who believe that several years of good business will develop out of the present dullness, and that this will result in several years of rising prices for securities. There is no doubt about the generally healthy position of business at this time. After one of the most sudden and swiftest slumps that has ever been seen, starting from great activity in many lines of industry in February and going to extreme dullness before the middle of April, there have been few disasters and makers of goods have managed to curtail their production so that no important accumulations in leading lines took place. The position of inventories, of credit and of working capital has been maintained at a high pitch in most trades.

Little Unemployment.

Very little unemployment has taken place, and there has not been a severe decline in purchasing power in most places. Therefore, it might be said that business is all ready for a real revival and merely needs the right kind of backing to bring this about. The signing of the tax bill is a step in that direction. There are other factors pending or partly developed that are favorable to business, and the only thing that is feared to prevent a revival is that some political disturbance may arise out of the presidential campaigns, as might be feared in a vigorous and radical third party movement.

There is one thing that is still lacking in the stock market that will have to be supplied before there can be any real recoveries in prices. This is bull leadership. For over a year there has been good leadership on the bear side, but none on the constructive side. The big men of great wealth who have been the leaders of former bull markets in the past have apparently been out of trading since the early part of 1923.

Money has continued almost "ridiculously" easy, with plenty of call money offered at 3 per cent and under and some of it obtainable at lower figures privately. Time loans have been lower and there is plenty of it offered at concessions. Banks are having difficulty in using their surplus funds and in many cases are reported to have been placing them in short-term investments. This buying has competed with that of private investors and as a result the bond market has been pretty well cleared out of short term issues.

Foreign exchange has been generally weak, with French francs getting down to under 5 cents as a result of the political uncertainty in France. The hesitancy which has developed abroad towards the Dawes plan is one of several factors which have caused an easier trend in foreign exchange in recent weeks. It looks as if the Dawes plan will be put into force eventually, but as though this action will be postponed for several months.

New Bonds Absorbed.

New bond offerings were readily absorbed and the New York city issue was sold at a higher figure than had been generally expected. There has been an enormous sum of money available for the bond market in the past three or four months because of the slowing up in business. Instances are related where corporations have invested millions of their idle money that would normally be used for working capital in their business.

The views of the securities markets, of bankers and of business men towards the new tax law are generally favorable. It is regarded as better than what existed before, and there are many signs that the strongest pressure will be brought on the next congress to give further tax relief. Business men are planning to force that issue into the congressional elections in the fall and to make it clear that there is an overwhelming sentiment among business leaders for as much tax reduction as is consistent with the financial position of the government.

Petroleum conditions have been hard hit by the prolonged period of wet and cold weather in such a large part of the country. This resulted, previous to the present month, in a great accumulation of gasoline in the hands of refiners and marketers and this in turn caused a backing up of takings of crude oil. In recent weeks there has been a greater demand for gasoline than the new supply, but this has not made heavy inroads on the stored surplus. The result has been a steady trend downward in oil stocks as a result of scattered liquidation. Little rallies have occurred and it looks as if the buying has been of better quality than the selling. Some big interests have accumulated the oil stocks during recessions, but they have bought from the long-pull viewpoint.

Weather conditions have also hit the clothing trades hard and the textile and leather industries have suffered as a consequence. There has not been any undue piling up of goods as a result, as the average manufacturer has curtailed production in keeping with whatever demand has been met with at the time.

Car Industry Hit.

The motor car business also met with adversity in part from the weather, although it was also hard hit by the sudden decline in business confidence due to political developments. There are indications that the motor industry is now in better shape and that larger sales of cars will take place during the next three months than the last three is now generally expected in this trade.

Copper metal has been quiet and prices soft. There is everything in the statistical position of the metal to make for higher prices, but there has been a steady accumulation of floating supply which has kept the market weak. Copper trade interests kept their optimism, but the several recoveries which they have predicted have not materialized, so that there is a skeptical feeling over their prophecy that a real recovery in copper will start this month.

The steel business is dull, although here and there a minor improvement is noted. Stocks of steel in the hands of consumers are low and so it is quite probable that some improvement will develop in the industry during this month.

Cotton had a sharp advance as a result of the poor condition of the new crop reported by the government. Then there was a sharp decline, for various speculative interests either took profits where they had bought prior to the advance or else new short selling appeared. There has been very poor mill demand for some time and exports have been smaller. The statistical outlook is still strong and there are plenty of bullish opinions to be heard on the July position and also on the new crop months.

New York, June 7.—Prospects for unsettled weather in the south led to rallies from an early decline in the cotton market today, but after selling up from 25.94 to 26.15 for October prices eased again under realizing. October closed at 25.98, wih the general market closing steady at a net advance of five points on July, but 5 to 11 points net lower on new crop positions.

The market opened steady at a decline of 1 to 10 points under commission house liquidation and some selling for southern account. There was very little demand at the start and prices worked off to 28.27 for July and 25.23 for December in early trading, making net declines of about 9 to 13 points. The comparatively light offerings were well enough taken at these figures to steady the market. Rallies followed th eforecasts for showers over the south between today and Monday morning. July advanced to 28.50 and December to 25.40, making net gains of 8 to 12 points, but later fluctuations were irregular with the close showing reactions of 5 to 15 points from the best.

Owing to the holiday there were no cables from Liverpool, and trading here was quiet.

NARROW AFFAIRS AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, June 7.—The cotton market was a narrow affair today with light trading and a moderate range of fluctuations. July was the only position to develop any real strength. Opening 8 points up it advanced to 32 points above the previous close, and although there was a recession later, it closed two points net higher for the day. October opened 3 points up and later advanced 9 points more but eased off rapidly in the late trading to 25.12. The other new crop months followed the same course as October and all showed net losses for the day of 7 to 11 points.

It was a weather market, although July was supported to a considerable extent by a good demand for spots and some shrinkage in th ecertified stock. The market opened fairly steady in the absence of news from Liverpool, that market closing on Saturdays during the summer months, and new crop months rallied about 12 points when the weather map showed cloudiness and fair rains in the central and eastern portions of the belt. The map showed a rather serious storm disturbance over Colorado with indications it would move into the belt, bringing rains over Sunday and probably cooler wather. The official forecast promised general showers for the entire belt.

After some covering by nervous shorts, the market eased off again in the final half hour, losing all the gain and more besides on the new crop positions which eventually closed about 50 cents a bale net lower for the day. Some advices from Texas claimed that the crop was looking better as a result of several days of fair weather and higher temperatures. Reports from the cotton goods markets were rather unfavorable.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, June 7.—The railroads again showed more strength than the rest of the list, Erie being a feature. There has been persistent absorption of this stock for some days past. A pool was active in M. K. and T. preferred. In spite of the rally in today's market, sentiment on the floor remains unchanged. The cut in the price of oil by the Magnolia Petroleum company has so far not been followed by other companies, nor has the price of gasoline come down. Hopes are therefore felt that perhaps this cut may not spread to other fields.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, June 7.—Unsettlement in the oils and sugars has created an atmosphere of doubt in the minds of the average speculator added to which we are beginning to receive bearish estimates on the steel tonnage report to be published next Tuesday. Some of the estimates run as high as 600,000 tons decrease. Of course the decline in the various products has been the cause of many cancellations of orders that have been on the books, otherwise the decrease should not run above 400,000 tons. Professional traders who are nearly all bearish again are counting on this report to still further weaken the market and until it is seen how the market takes the news it will be hard to form any opinion as to the course of the general market.

Cotton Letters.

POST & FLAGG.

New York, June 7.—The market has been quiet and without feature, though showing a somewhat steadier tone on scattered covering for over the week-end as a precaution against possible unfavorable weather conditions. Textile trade remains quiescent though some of the leading trade reviews exhibit a hopeful tone as to the future. There appears nothing in sight at the moment, however, to serve as an important stimulant to demand and the market is waiting on developments in what many consider to be now a distinctly improved technical position.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, June 7.—Competent observers who have been over a good part of Texas and Oklahome recently say it will take a good many more days of good weather to enable them to get their cotton out of the grass and finish replanting.

The market still acts oversold and should respond easily to any more unfavorable weather.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, June 7.—There is very little speculative feeling and unless the weather again turns bad we are inclined to expect a somewhat easier market in sympathy with the depression existing in other lines of business.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, June 7.—The predictions are for a trifle unsettled weather, but at present there is no forecast of heavy rains or anything of that sort, so it may be we are in for a further spell of good weather, in which case the market would continue to ease somewhat. However, we do not look for the market to decline but merely hold off until another bad spell sets in. Liverpool futures are due Monday: July, 16.98; October, 15.30.

New York, June 7.—Bond trading today lapsed into summer dullness, with the market manifesting a firm undertone. Sustained strength of Liberty bonds was the principal feature, the fourth 4 1-4s mounting to a new high price for the year at 101.14 before the end of the two-hour trading session.

Activities in other sections of the list were centered principally in speculative railroad mortgages. Rock Island issues strengthened materially and Missouri Pacific and Chicago & Eastern Illinois liens extended recent gains. Norfolk & Western convertible sixes, however, were affected by the action of the company's stock and yielded about 2 points.

Price changes in the industrial group were insignificant, except for a loss of about 2 points in Wilson first sixes, which again approached the year's low level.

The volume of municipal financing this week set a new record for the year, offerings totaling about $95,000,000 out of an aggregate of about $120,000,000 for all new bond issues. Ready absorption of these bonds aided materially in improving investment sentiment. Bond traders look for further improvement within the next fortnight, anticipating that the June 15 reinvestment demand will be given additional impetus by the reduction in payments on that date.

Financial Bureau Organized in Atlanta

One of the first established bureaus of information on stocks, bonds, cotton and grain was inaugurated recently in Atlanta with the formation of the Individual Information bureau with offices in the Haas-Howell building. The new company was formed by Otis Bass, well known in financial circles in Atlanta, and has shown a steady growth in the last few weeks.

The company issues each day for the information of the trade a bulletin giving the latest expert opinions on the various classes of stocks, such as steels, industrials, oil, rails, etc. Information on grain and particularly cotton is included in the service.

Mr. Bass on the formation of the new company emphasized the fact that it represented no stock or cotton house and executed no orders for stocks, securities and commodities.

Toal stock sales 336,460.

New York, June 7.—Moderate recovery took place in stock prices today as renewed buying of railroad issues checked an early decline, induced short covering and promoted a spirited rally in the final few minutes of trading. Activity was restricted in the brief Saturday trading session, sales totaling little more than 300,000 shares.

With the momentum of yesterday's decline carried over to the opening of the market, speculative operations were confined almost entirely to the selling side of the first hour. Encouraged by the fact that their drive against the oils disclosed little support, traders uncovered other weak spots, including independent steels, motor and accessory shares and several public utility leaders.

Prices snapped back vigorously in the second hour, but before the decline was arrested, new low records for the year were established by a dozen industrials, including Bethlehem, Republic, Cosden, Skelly, Texas company, Phillips Petroleum, Tidewater, American Sugar preferred, Cuyamel Fruit and South Porto Rican sugar.

Active bidding for the rail issues provided the impetus for the second hour's advance. Southern Railway crossed 59 to a new 1924 top price and the Erie's and "Katy" preferred were in demand. New buying on an active scale also came into the public utility group, enabling American Water Works to get within a few points of its recent high. Philadelphia company and International Telephone both reached new 1924 peak prices.

The better action of these shares imparted a firmer tone to industrials. Retracing ground previously lost, Bethlehem, Gulf States, Steel, Du Pont, General Electric, Coca-Cola, Congoleum, Stewart Warner and Famous Players mounted in the final dealings, 1 to 11-2 points above the previous closing prices. Scattered short covering of oil shares was induced by optimistic statements from leaders in the industry, predicting good 1924 profits for big producing and refining companies.

Foreign exchanges were steady, with the volume of trading restricted by the London holidays and the normal week-end slackening of activity. French francs were slightly lower at 5.09c and sterling receded fractionally to below $4.31. The Japanese yen also moved lower.

AUTO ACCIDENTS CUT DOWN TO 3

80 Arrests Made, However, During Saturday for Various Infractions of Traffic Law.

Saturday night furnished one of the best examples of the control which police have over the traffic situation, when only three minor accidents were recorded at police headquarters. Those injured were Miss Elizabeth Camp, of Chattahoochee, Ga.; Elmer Lewis, 14, of 25 Humphries street, and Charley Rich Jones, negro boy.

Police records show that during the four weeks of the drive, 1,097 arrests were made for traffic violations, 563 on charges of violating traffic ordinances, 323 for speeding, 165 for reckless driving, and 41 for operating an automobile while intoxicated. Fines imposed on guilty drivers totaled $11,932.

Twenty-five cases were tried in recorder's court Saturday, 19 drivers were fined for violating traffic ordinances, three for reckless driving, two for speeding, while one was dismissed. Total fines amounted to $241.

Continuance of police war on traffic violators in residential sections showed results Saturday when 53 of the 80 arrested for violations of traffic ordinances were arrested in West End by Motorcycle Officers Betsill and Denton, charged with not using their dimmers. A total of 110 arrests were made during the day for breeking traffic laws, 80 drivers being charged with violating traffic ordinances, 18 with speeding, nine with reckless driving and three with operating an automobile while intoxicated.

Only Slightly Hurt.

Miss Camp suffered an injured leg when struck by an automobile driven by A. E. Childers, 670 Highland avenue, as she was crossing Forsyth at Walton streets. He stopped immediately and offered to take the woman to a hospital, but she was not seriously injured, and did not require medical aid.

The Lewis boy was hurt when the steering knuckle of the automobile in which he was riding, and which was driven by S. O. Bedford, of 44 Rogers avenue, broke, causing Bedford to lose control of the car, which mounted the curbing and crashed into a brick wall at Forsyth and Castleberry streets. The boy was cut about the face and neck, and was treated at Grady hospital.

When his foot slipped as he attempted to swing onto the rear end of a large truck, the negro boy was thrown to the street, suffering severe bruises and cuts. The accident happened at Central avenue and Mitchell street.

Those fined Saturday in recorder's court were:

Bell Ends Round.

Nothing daunted by the peck in her shoulder, the wounded woman came into another clinch, roughing it with her uncrippled right. A second shot was neatly sidestepped as bystanders interfered and pried them apart, taking possession of the gun. H. O. Rosser, 948 East Fair street, who witnessed the entire affray, forced Mrs. White into a nearby store where she was held until arrival of Call Officers Goode and Bullard.

Mrs. Gasden was taken to Grady hospital, where her wound was dressed and pronounced not serious. As the bandages were being applied by doctors she blared her defiance to a Constitution reporter.

"I love White and don't care who knows it," she said. "I'm going to have him, too. Don't forget that."

Tells Why She Shot.

At the police station Mrs. White voiced the same sentiment in different words.

"That woman," said Mrs. White referring to Mrs. Gasden, "that woman has been trying to win my husband away from me for a long time and when I saw them together it drove me crazy. I determined to put a stop to it but had no intention of shooting her. I intended to have a long talk with her in the presence of my husband. But when she hit me in the face with her pocketbook, it was too much. I became so enraged I didn't know what I was doing and then I shot her."

White Is Silent.

White, the object of this embattled affection by two women, was taken in custody later at the barber shop where he is employed. White, Mrs. White, and Mrs. Gasden were all booked on charges of disorderly conduct. Mrs. White faces an additional charge of assault with a deadly weapon, and Mrs. Gasden one of breaking parole. White had no statement to make about the fight. All were released under $500 bonds.

Police say that Mrs. Gasden had been placed under probation several months ago, and ordered to have nothing to do with White. However, since that time, she has been found with White by police called by Mrs. White, but was released when she promised to obey the court order and have nothing more to do with White, it is stated.

LEOPOLD BRANDED AS MASTER MIND

kidnaped, but that it was Loeb who struck him over the head with a chisel—the blow believed to have ended Franks' life.

With the appearance of Loeb's sworn confession, however, the report that Loeb had blamed the chisel blow on Leopold was confirmed.

Point Is Important.

Crowe, who is determined to send the young men to the gallows, said that the point of difference in the two confessions was very important.

"While both young men are guilty of murder," said Crowe, "it will be very important for us to ascertain which of the two dealt the blow which ended Robert Franks' life."

Meanwhile, Clarence Darrow, head counsel for the defense retained by fathers of the two boys, was preparing a case of insanity by which he hoped to save them from the gallows. Despite a formal statement issued by the fathers, declaring they would make "no attempt to defeat justice," Darrow's work went on at high speed. Scores of prospective witnesses for the defense were called in today for consultation.

Deny Girl Participated.

Reports that Germaine Reinhard, 18-year-old sweetheart of young Loeb, was believed by authorities to have taken part in writing of the famous $10,000 "ransom letter" to Robert Franks' father were vigorously denied at the state's attorney's office.

Miss Reinhard's initials—G. K. R.—appeared at the bottom of the ransom letter, it was admitted.

Miss Reinhard was questioned several days ago, it was said, but not in connection with this matter. She was quizzed regarding Loeb's habits and was never suspected, taken into custody or held.

Typewriter Is Found.

The portable typewriter on which the $10,000 "ransom letter" was written was recovered Saturday from a lagoon in Jackson park, where the boys had thrown it. Divers found it after searching for one week. It was in two parts, the keyboard having been removed from the frame.

State's Attorney Crowe said finding of the typewriter added another important link in the evidence against the two young intellectuals.

Loeb's confession recited in dispassionate detail the attempt to kidnap and murder John Levinson, 11-year-old son of another Chicago millionaire. Leopold and Loeb drove from place to place throughout the south side in seach of young Levinson and when they missed him, decided to capture young Franks in his place.

Text of Confession.

"We watched the children as they left the Harvard school," the confession says. "We were about a block away and used field glasses to watch them.

"We did not think that he had gone home, so remained watching, but when, after quite a while, he did not show up, we came to the conclusion that he might have gone.

"I went to look for him in the alley, but did not see him.

"We then went to a corner lot where John Coleman and Walter Bearson were playing baseball. We watched them for a little while, then went down to see if Levinson had gone home, passed his house and found that he was not there or playing on the street.

"We returned down Lake Park avenue, passed the lot where the Coleman boy was playing, and went into Leopold's house to watch the children play, from one of the windows there.

Franks Chosen on Sight.

"We did not stay there long, but left and drove down Drexel to go past this lot where Levinson had been playing. All this time I was driving. We proceeded until we got a glimpse of Robert Franks. We turned down Forty-Eighth street and turned the car around, Leopold getting into the back seat.

"I drove the car then south on Ellis avenue, parallel to where young Franks was, stopped, and while remaining in my seat opened the front door and called to Franks that I would give him a ride home. He said no, he would just as soon walk, but I told him that I would like to talk to him about a tennis racquet, so he got into the car.

"We proceeded south. Leopold reached his arm around under Franks, grabbed his mouth and hit him on the head with the chisel. I believe he hit him several times. I don't know the exact number.

Stuffed Rag Down Throat.

"He began to bleed, but was not entirely unconscious. He was moaning. I proceeded further west and turned. I believe at Dorchester.

Q.—"What time was this?"

A.—"This was around 5 o'clock. I don't know the exact time. Leopold grabbed Franks and lifted him over the back of the front seat and threw him on the rug in the car. He then took one of the rags and gagged him by sticking it down his throat, I believe. We proceeded down Dorchester, and at Leopold's directions drove into the country. I think we drove out either Jeffery road or South Shore drive. I think it was Jeffery road. I am not acquainted with the district out there; and drove slowly at his direction. My excitement accounts for my not being able to tell any of the places where we drove.

Sought Deserted Roads.

"We drove until we were at a deserted road, which led off the main road somewhere near the Indiana line. We turned down this road for a short distance, and it ended in a blank. This Leopold knew, but wanted to take it because it was so deserted. We turned around, and Leopold seeing that Franks was unconscious, climbed into the front seat. Up to that time he had been watching him from the back seat. We had covered the body with the robe that we had brought along. The robe also belonged to Leopold. We then drove farther south on the main highway until we turned at a road which I believe leads to Gary.

"We went down this road a way and then turned off on another deserted road, leading north. We followed that for only a short distance, then turned down another deserted road leading west. We stopped the car, got out, removed young Franks' shoes, hid them in some bushes, and removing his pants and stockings, placed them in the car. We did this in order that we might be saved the trouble of wholly undressing him later on. We also left his belt buckle and belt with the pants, not in the same place, but very near there.

Stop to Get Lunch.

"We stopped at a little sandwich shop on the road and Leopold got out and purchased a couple of red hot sandwiches and two bottles of root beer. We then kept driving until it was fairly dusk. Then Leopold wanted to make a phone call.

"He made the call from a drug store situated on the northeast corner of one of the intersecting streets meeting this main highway, the name of which I do not know. The important thing is that I parked the car on this side street, facing west, parallel to the tracks. The driver's seat is on the left of the car; therefore, I was nearest to the drug store. He got out of the car, went to the drug store and made his phone call. In returning he came straight to the car, so that he hit the door that I was sitting at, rather than the door next to the vacant seat, and he said, 'Slip over and let me drive for a while,' which I did.

Drove to Culvert.

"He drove the car. We again proceeded down the thoroughfare, waiting for it to get dark.

"I remember we turned up one road which he said led to Indianapolis, and then back again, and finally he drove the car to a place where he knew, which was near this culvert. We both investigated the culvert on the previous journey out there some weeks before.

Q. "When you had planned it, you mean?"

A. "Yes. We dropped the body out of the car, took the body in the robe and carried it over to the culvert. Leopold carried the feet, I carried the head. We deposited the body near the culvert and undressed it completely. Our original scheme had been to etherize the boy to death."

Loeb made no excuses for his part in the crime but said he could not have committed it had it not been for the influence of Leopold.

Leopold Is Blamed.

"I offer no excuse, but I am fully convinced that neither the idea nor the act would have occurred to me had it not been for the suggestion and stimulus of Leopold. Futhermore, I don't believe that I would have been capable of having killed Franks."

Q. "Where did you pour the hydrochloric acid on him?"

A. "Right there. The scheme for etherizing him originated through Leopold, who evidently has some knowledge of such things, and who said that that would be the easiest way of putting him to death, and the least messy. This, however, we found unnecessary because the boy was quite dead when we took him there. We knew he was dead by the fact that rigor mortis had set in, and also by his eyes, and then when at that same time we poured this hydrochloric acid over him, we noticed not a single tremor in his body.

Carried Body for Block.

Leopold put on his hip boots and took off his coat in order to do this and took the body and stuck him head first—

Q. "Was it dark at this time?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "How far did you have to carry the body from the time you got off the machine until you dropped it down into or near the culvert?

A. I should say about a city block and a half. I don't know.

Q. "How did you carry it, in this blanket?"

A. "In the blanket, yes."

Q. "Well, then, you put the body right down into the culvert?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "And you poured this hydrochloric acid on it?

A. "Before we put it down in the culvert.

Q. "And then what did you do?"

Washed Hands at Culvert.

A. "And then I went to the opposite side of the culvert where the water runs out and where you can get at the water very easily, where I washed my hands which had become bloody there, carrying the body.

Q. "The head had bled very freely?"

A. "Yes, the head had bled quite freely. There was quite a bit of blood. The blanket or robe was saturated.

"We then left, taking the robe with us, also the clothing of young Franks. We started homeward, and Leopold stopped to call up his folks and to tell them that he would be detained. This, I should judge, was about 9 o'clock.

Stop at Drug Store.

"We then stopped at a drug store somewhere in the neighborhood, where I looked up the address of Jacob Franks and the phone number and at the same time Leopold printed the address on the envelope. We then proceeded toward home."

Q. "You drove out to Gary, didn't you, before you got to the culvert?"

A. "No, I don't think we ever entered Gary."

Q. "Well, near Gary?"

A. "Yes, near Gary."

Q. "But it was near Gary, though, when you stripped the boy of the shoes?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "And his pants and stockings?"

A. "Yes."

Called From Hammond.

Q. "In what vicinity were you when Leopold made that first call?"

A. "I think that we were in the town of Hammond."

Q. "Did you change at the wheel there?"

A. "That is where we alternated the drive."

Q. "And what did you do with the Underwood machine?"

A. "I am not sure whether we posted the letter before or after destroying Franks' clothing. However, what we did there was to go over to my house, where we burned the clothing in the furnace."

Q. "Did you burn the blanket with which you had the clothing wrapped?"

A. "No; the blanket was placed in a little hiding place near the greenhouse at my home. After having burned the clothing we got a pail of water, soap and brush and to the best of our ability in the dark, tried to wash off the blood stains.

Go to Leopold Home.

"The car was parked near the green-house. I think we mailed the ransom letter to Mr. Franks before we burned the clothing."

Q. "Where was it mailed?"

A. "Right opposite the Hyde Park postoffice."

Q. "When?"

A. "About 10 o'clock at the Hyde Park station. Immediately after having destroyed the clothes, washed the car and hid the blanket, we proceeded to the drug store on 47th street, where Leopold phoned Mrs. Franks, telling her her son had been kidnaped.

"We then parked the car just north of where Leopold lives and entered the Leopold home. Leopold took home his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Schwab.

Drank and Played Cards.

"I sat with Mr. Leopold, Sr., for a while. Leopold came back and we drank a little, played cards and then he took me home in his own car, which he had taken from the garage in order to take home his aunt and uncle."

Q. "What time was it?"

A. "About 10:30.

"On the way home we threw the chisel out of the car. The next morning Leopold came to my house around 11:30."

Q. "Was that the day you disposed of the other articles like the underwear?"

Used Overcoat Disguise.

A. "No, this was the next day after the crime. Leopold came over and I dressed and selected a black overcoat and hat of my father's to wear for the afternoon. I left them home and went out with Leopold, dressed as usually do. We went to the Cooper Carlton for lunch with Richard Rubel. Immediately after we went to my house. I changed my overcoat and cap for the black overcoat and hat of my father's.

"We went to Leopold's, and there I changed overcoats again, selecting an overcoat that was less conspicuous.

"We then took the rent-a-car Willys-Knight and drove out around to the garage where we attempted to wash out the blood stains with soap and water."

Q. "Was that at Leopold's garage?"

A. "Yes. Leopold's chauffeur came out and we told him we were washing out stains of wine."

Q. "You had reference to the blood stains?"

A. "Yes. Upon leaving Leopold's, we proceeded downtown in both the Willys-Knights, I driving the rent-a-car. We stopped and both of us went to the corner where there is a 'keep the city clean' box. We left a note in the box, telling Mr. Franks to go immediately to the Bogart-de-Rose drug store and wait for a phone call."

Change of Plan Forced.

"However, the letter did not stick with the stickers that we had, and fearing it might blow away, we decided to omit the letter from our calculations, and when we phoned Franks, instead of telling him to go to the box, we phoned his house and told him to go immediately to the drug store. We then proceeded downtown in both cars, parked Leopold's Willys-Knight and went to the Illinois Central station in the Rent-a-car. I purchased a ticket to Michigan City, wearing glasses to disguise myself; also the black hat and overcoat.

"At 2:30 o'clock the train which runs on the Michigan Central as far as Boston is made up. I went to the train, and left a note we had prepared in the box provided for telegraph blanks. This note instructed Mr. Franks to go to the back platform and to watch the east side of the track, wait until he had entirely passed the first large, red brick factory, with a water tower on top, with the word 'Champion' written on it. After he had passed this water tower, he was to count five quickly, and throw the package as far east as he could.

"While I was placing the letter on the train, Leopold was phoning the Yellow Cab company to send a cab to Franks, and also phoning Franks to go to the drug store.

"We jumped in our car and drove quickly to Sixty-seventh street and Stony Island, parking the car to the southwest corner of Sixty-seventh and Stony Island.

"We saw in the papers there that an unidentified nude boy had been found. . . .

"We debated what we should do. I wasn't very anxious to go on but Leopold persuaded me to.

"So he phoned Mr. Franks at the drug store.

"In finding he wasn't there we went to another drug store, where we again phoned the Bogart de Rose drug store, again finding Franks wasn't there.

Realized Game Was Up.

"We then realized that the body had been identified as that of Robert Franks, and that any further attempt to get the money would only result in failure.

"We therefore went to the Rent-a-Car place, and Leopold took in the car. I stayed outside. . . I returned home about 5 o'clock and was told of the Franks murder by our chauffeur.

"Nothing else transpired of importance until late Saturday night, when I met Leopold at a restaurant. He had his car, in which he placed his typewriter upon which the letters had been written.

"We took the typewriter out of the trunk, and I pried off the keys, just the very tips of the keys where the imprints would show.

Offers No Excuse.

"We took these keys in a little bunch and threw them off the bridge at Jackson park. Then we took the typewriter intact with keys and threw it off the bridge leading to the outer harbor. The robe was then taken from its hiding place. We went over to Leopold's garage and got gasoline, took the road out on South Shore drive, saturated the robe with gasoline and set fire to it.

"That is all I have to tell about the murder of Robert Franks."

Q.: "That statement that you have just made has been made of your own free will?"

A.: "Yes. I want to say that I offer no excuse, but that I am fully convinced that neither the idea nor the act would have occurred to me had it not been for the suggestion and stimulus of Leopold. Furthermore, I don't believe that I would have been capable of having killed Franks.

"This statement is made of my own volition."

J. M. HIGH COMPANY

Concrete Shaft 351-Ft. High Dedicated to Jefferson Davis

Failure of Confederacy Has Obscured Fine Qualities of Only President, Says Ky. Governor.

Fairview, Ky., June 7.—A gigantic concrete shaft, towering 351 feet into the air, was dedicated to the memory of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy three score years ago, and presented to the state of Kentucky here this afternoon.

The obelisk, with a Confederate flag flying high above the copper cap which crowns it, was closed to public inspection today because the interior has not been finished. Thousands of visitors, however, tramped about the twenty acres surrounding the Davis homestead, inspecting the exterior of the huge monument from every possible angle.

The stars and stripes and the stars and bars decked the sides of the obelisk, waving softly in a gentle breeze. An occasional low hanging fleecy cloud seemed to touch the pinnacle. Many persons prominently connected with forces of the north and south during the civil war traveled overland from Hopkinsville to the homestead near here for the occasion.

Superior to Lincoln.

"Today witnesses the culmination of all loving tributes in the dedication of a memorial which represents the mature thought of a steadfast and loyal people," said Dr. Dunbar Rowland, representing Mississippi, in his address on "Jefferson Davis, Constitutionalist." Davis, he added, was the equal of Abraham Lincoln in the "goodness of his heart and superior in culture and training for statesmanship."

The Confederacy's president, Dr. Roland said, "acted his part well, established a government complete in all its functions and upheld the principles of his government with courage and devotion."

Colonel R. J. McBryde, of Louisville, representing the Jefferson Davis Home association, presented the monument to the state.

"The failure of the Confederacy has more or less obscured the splendid qualities that belonged to this great man who, to the thoughtless world, was only a rebel," Governor W. J. Fields said in accepting the gift in behalf of the state.

Desired Peaceful Separation.

'Had the Confederacy been established his name would have been second only to that of Washington," the Kentucky executive continued. "Mr. Davis, in common with the Confederate leaders, desired a peaceful separation from the federal government. They did not desire war, but the problems and the difficulties confronting them admitted no other solution. Undoubtedly Jefferson Davis committed grave errors in his administration, but they were solely errors of judgment. Alike with his honor, his patriotism is unimpeached and unimpeachable. The Confederacy failed with him, but it could not have succeeded with any other."

Kentuckians united with the nation in erecting the memorial for Lincoln, Governor Fields pointed out, and "likewise united with the southland in erection of the Davis memorial." Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis the executive referred to as native Kentuckians—"the one the president of the Confederate government, and the other president of the federate government during the war between the states."

Major Jefferson Hayes-Davis, U. S. S., grandson of the southern president, was given a long ovation when he was presented to the visitors by General W. B. Haldeman, Louisville, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans.

Jobs for School Children Urged During Vacation

Appeal to employers and people generally in Atlanta to lend an attentive ear to applications of Atlanta school children for vacation employment, "to make them better citizens and keep them out of mischief," was issued by Superintendent Willis A. Sutton Saturday. He urged people in need of summer help to telephone Walnut 3820, the school employment service.

His statement follows:

"On yesterday the public schools released 52,000 children. Of this number there are more than 25,000 boys and girls who are old enough to perform some type of service. Of this 25,000 there are more than 10,000 high school students. Hundreds and even thousands of these boys and girls will be seeking for work. Every request for work is an effort on the part of the boy and girl to make a good citizen.

"Vacation time constitutes a very important element of a boy's and girl's education. Vacation time is also a business man's opportunity to find the right kind of help for years to come. The very brainiest and best of our future business men and women are among these thousands of boys and girls who are asking for work. It may be true that any new employee is somewhat of a liability. It is nevertheless also true that the embryo of the future executive or skilled workman is in the boy or girl of today.

"Every boy and girl who secures work has the opportunity to become a better citizen. I wish to appeal to the business men and business women of the city, to the housewives and to the people in general to give every opportunity possible to our boys and girls to earn a little money and to keep employed. There are lawns to cut. There are yards to be cleaned up. There are a thousand and one jobs in homes, in offices, in the manufacturing establishments and shops of Atlanta for which the owner or operator could afford to pay a small amount and which would give employment to hundreds of boys and girls who would otherwise be turned into the street to get into mischief.

"I fear the public has not realized the responsibility to keep the boyhood and girlhood of the city employed, therefore securing for them safety and prosperity. Therefore I appeal to Atlanta not to turn down the boys and girls who ask for work.

"Help us to help these boys and girls to find themselves and to become useful citizens."

TO THE GATEWAY PORTS of the WORLD

WHICH
—next winter?

NEXT WINTER can either bring you the prized human adventure . . . or, the ordinary human humdrum.

Which—will largely be decided by this summer. For now is the time to plan your cruise to the Gateway Ports of the World.

What an experience these cruises contain! Your great private yacht follows springtime 'round the world. It slips into Gateway Port after Gateway Port. You explore the lands of romance,—Spain, Egypt, Holy Land, India, Java, China, Japan,—and many more. You meet their peoples, shop their bazars, live their histories. Of such is life at its biggest.

On sea, you enjoy the luxury of a Canadian Pacific Empress; on shore, the best hotels, motor-cars, and trains. All arrangements are Canadian Pacific, that is, of highest standard. Canadian Pacific spans the world . . .

Cost? No more than comparable luxury at home. Time? Hardly more than an ordinary vacation

BUSINESS GREAT, ASSERT SALESMEN FOR EL PRODUCTO

For the past two weeks John B. Daniel, Inc., salesmen have been dressing windows of the druggists in Atlanta with new El Producto cigar displays. These displays are the snappiest that the G. H. P. Cigar company has ever designed. Joe Cobb, manager of the cigar department of John B. Daniel, Inc., states that sales for the first five months of 1924 have shown a substantial increase over the same period of 1923.

Ernest McCrary, of the city sales force, is calling on the trade once more after his two weeks' vacation spent in Asheville, N. C.

C. J. Terrell is spending his vacation in the west on the Shrine convention.

C. W. Rowland, western Georgia representative of John B. Daniel, Inc., has added several cities in Alabama to his territory in an effort to break all sales records for 1924.

WEST END CHURCH ENLARGING BUILDING

On account of rapidly growing attendance the West End Avenue Church of Christ has been compelled to enlarge its building. The main auditorium is being enlarged and three new Sunday school rooms are in course of construction. These buildings, however, are intended only to relieve present crowded conditions. The church later will erect a large, commodious building according to modern plans.

LOCAL FIXTURE CO. GETS BANK CONTRACT

The Atlanta Show Case company, one of the oldest and best established firms of its kind in the south, was recently awarded the contract for interior fixtures for the new Atlanta Commercial bank, to be erected at Bankhead and Marietta streets.

The designing of the interior of the banking rooms was by George Hamilton and the construction will be entirely under the supervision of the Atlanta Show Case company. The fixtures will be of marble, plate glass and bronze, the floor will be of marble and the ceiling of ornamental plaster.

This is one of a number of large contracts recently secured by the Atlanta Show Case company, whose business during the last few years has shown a remarkable growth. This concern has made installation of fixtures for banks and stores in every section of this country as well as a number of foreign countries, and their long experience in handling work of this kind causes their services to be widely sought by business houses.

Although one of Atlanta's youngest banking institutions, the Atlanta Commercial bank has shown a splendid growth since its organization in 1916 and the new building is the result of a need for larger quarters to facilitate the handling of a greater volume of business.

The bank was started with a capitalization of $25,000, and in 1920—four years later—this capital was increased to $50,000.

The bank's stockholders at a recent meeting voted to increase the stock to $100,000. The value per share in 1920 was $120 as against the par value of $100 when the institution was organized. The new stock will sell for $140 per share, which indicates the rapid enhancement caused by the bank's prosperous and growing condition. The stockholders also voted to inaugurate a trust department to begin functioning as soon as the business was moved into the new quarters. Legal details incident to the establishment of this department are now being worked out.

Indications of the successful manner in which this bank has been operated since its organization is the fact that it has paid a continuous quarterly dividend, almost since its organization, which has amounted to 8 per cent per annum. This showing ranks with many banking institutions of much larger capital.

SOUTHEAST SHIPPERS MEET HERE TUESDAY

Plans for the transportation to market centers of the United States of seasoned crops will form the principal discussions June 10 of the Southeast Shippers' Regional Advisory board meeting which will be held in Atlanta. Shippers of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee will be represented. Also that portion of New Orleans which lies east of the Mississippi river, which includes the New Orleans terminal, will be represented.

Meetings will be held at the Ansley hotel where a big banquet will be tendered on Tuesday night.

The approach of the heavy movement of the peach crop of Georgia and other southeastern states, together with the cotton, truck, melon crops and lumber and naval stores, will be discussed fully and necessary steps taken to provide sufficient equipment and quick means of getting the crops to the market.

The session will be attended generally by shippers in the territory mentioned, together with representatives of the railroads that traverse the region. The principal address will be made by James A. Emery, of Washington, general counsel of the National Manufacturers' association. His subject will be "Economic Questions and Political Answers."

Prominent Speakers.

Other speakers will be F. W. Sheafey, chairman of the railroad commission of South Carolina; Lincoln Green, assistant to the president of the Southern railway, and M. J. Gormley, chairman of car service division of the American railway association. A. G. T. Moore, of New Orleans, traffic manager of the Southern Pine association and chairman of the board which is meeting, will preside.

There are said to be no restrictions as to what may be brought before this board for discussion and action, as long as the subject pertains to service. The board does not deal with rates in any form.

The board itself is an association of railroad officials and shippers in an attempt to reach a common ground of understanding, eliminating much friction that has existed in the past.

Farmer, 50, Arrested On Kidnaping Charge, Is Released on Bond

Robert Mitchell, 50, Cobb county farmer, who was arrested Friday night on charges of assault and battery, pointing a revolver at another and threatening to kill, in connection with the alleged attempt to kidnap N. A. Keith, a blacksmith living on the Piedmont road, was released Saturday when he furnished bond of $1,000.

When he swore out the warrant against Mitchell, Keith claimed that he recognized Mitchell as one of the four men who Thursday night forced him from his house into an automobile. He told authorities that his struggles and cries for help frightened his assailants off and that he ran home and prevented a second entry of the men by establishing an armed guard behind locked doors. The alleged kidnaping is said to be a result of trouble between two families.

Popular Clothing Men Join Trivers Staff

O. C. GORDY.

LOUIS ADIGER.

Announcement is made by the Trivers Clothes organization of the addition to their local staff of Louis Adiger and O. C. Gordy, both experienced clothing men and each with a host of friends in the city. For many years Mr. Adiger has been located in this city as buyer and manager of one of the leading clothing concerns and his knowledge of clothes construction and proper fitting will prove of great value to all Trivers patrons. Mr. Gordy, as a salesman of ability and great clothing experience, has been connected with a local concern for the past eight years, and during this time numbered among his customers some of the best dressed men in Atlanta. Messrs. Adiger and Gordy extend an invitation to their friends and patrons to visit them at the new Trivers Clothes store.

New Regiment's Instructor Points Out Value of Guard

Apropos of the intensive campaign for recruits now being conducted by the 20th Infantry, new Atlanta national guard regiment, Captain R. B. Ennis, instructor, Saturday gave out a statement in which the value of the guard was briefly sketched, and offered reasons why it deserved the support of Atlantans.

Captain Ennis, of the regular army, is representative of the virile, forceful, energetic young staff officer of the present army. A West Pointer, with all the bearing of the true soldier, an insight into the practical side of maintaining an army, and thoroughly imbued with advantages of the military both from an educational and physical development point of view, Captain Ennis is proving of invaluable service to the young regiment.

Happily, as he pointed out Saturday, officers of the regiment "from Colonel Charles H. Cox on down" have had previous experience, most of them under fire in the late war. A large per cent of the men have seen regular army service. With this advantage, recruits are thrown into an atmosphere immediately after induction that enables them to quickly grasp the spirit and to become receptive to the training program.

Campaign Continues.

A number of recruiting headquarters are maintained by various organizations of the regiment at convenient points in the business section, that of Company H at the city hall. Captain Ray K. Smathers added a number of recruits to Company H Saturday, and Captain Wm. T. Comer, of Company D, who recently finished a course of special training at Camp Benning, is concentrating his efforts at present toward adding new men to his organization. Captain Comer completed a course at Camp Benning recently with first honors among a class of several score men, many of whom were of higher rank. He is one of the most valuable men in the new regiment.

Other companies are increasing efforts to secure maximum peace strength prior to leaving on August 17 for the annual camp on St. Simon's. This annual camp is a matter touched upon by Captain Ennis, who points out some of the advantages of this two weeks' vacation each year.

Ennis' Statement.

In Ennis' statement, in full, follows:

"'When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace.'—Luke 11:21.

"And, continuing in the proverbial style, when a wise man carrieth insurance, his business and home are safe. The very best insurance for a community is that which is obtained through the maintenance of National Guard units in the state. It is a guarantee against loss, public and personal, and it costs the individual practically nothing.

"The National Guard is also a constant source of income to the state. A dollar spent by the state for National Guard activities acts as a magnet which draws nearly $20 from the United States treasury for the same purpose. Therefore, if for no other reason, it is most attractive as a business proposition.

"Aside from these benefits, the National Guard is of inestimable value to the individual active member of the organization. He learns loyalty, discipline, self-reliance and self-protection; he comes to realize the benefits of healthy recreation and exercise—all of which tend to better citizenship. And while reaping this harvest, he reaps also good American dollars from the government for the time he devotes to the harvesting.

"Each summer the organization is sent to a seaside resort for two weeks' training in camp, where its members are paid guests. This is, in fact, a vacation that would be beyond the reach of many if taken at their own expense.

"Lucky, indeed, is the young man who is accepted for enlistment into the ranks of 'Atlanta's Own 20th Infantry.' Lucky, too, is Atlanta in having within her gates this gilt-edged insurance protection and sound financial asset."

DAYTON SCALE CO. MOVES ITS LOCATION

The Dayton Scale company, for a number of years located at 64 West Mitchell street, has moved its place of business to 103 Marietta street, having attractive new quarters on the ground floor of the "101 Marietta" building.

This concern manufactures and sells light scales for grocers and other dealers and also slicing machines, sausage mills, cheese cutters and bread slicers.

R. H. Wolfe, sales agent, who has been connected with the Dayton Scale company for a period of 14 years, is manager of the Atlanta branch.

Mr. Wolfe states that last month was the best month in the history of the business and the prospects are excellent for continued good business throughout the remainder of the year.

Prodigality.

A couple of old Yankees were discussing the doings of a certain youth.

"Do you think," asked Uncle Eph, "that the money young Silas made down in New York will last him long?"

"You bet it won't!" exclaimed the other old fellow. "He's goin' at an awful pace, I'm told. I was down in the general store the other night and young Silas was reported to me to be writing hundred-dollar checks and lighting his cigars with them."—Harper's Magazine.

A Place for Caution.

A judge of the frontier days operated a private bank incidental to his rather light duties on the bench. A stranger one day presented a check and was asked for identification. Letters, telegrams, key-ring tags, all proved insufficient.

"Why, judge," the man protested, "you have hung people on less identification than what I show!"

"That may be true," replied his honor, "but in money matters we must be careful."—North Dakota Banker.

Fifty-Fifty.

"My daughter has been accustomed to all the luxuries of life. Can you support her accordingly?"

"I'm not sure, sir; but I can guarantee to lower her present cost to you!"—North Dakota Banker.

The Kelvinator-Atlanta company is the name of a new Atlanta corporation, located at 141 Peachtree Arcade, and formed for the purpose of distributing the Kelvigator, a nationally-known refrigerating apparatus, in Atlanta territory.

According to Mr. Bell, sales manager, Kelvinator is indorsed by Good Housekeeping institute, the New York Tribune, Modern Priscilla, the investigating committee of architects and engineers, and is used by tens of thousands of the best homes in the country.

The Kelvinator is an electrically-operated freezing device, which furnishes cold storage, as well as ice in convenient cubes for household use Many of the machines have already been sold in Atlanta for residences, and recently a contract for $23,000 worth of the machines was closed for a new apartment house now under construction.

A factory representative will be in personal charge of the demonstration. Elaborate preparations have been made and it is expected that the demonstration will draw record crowds, according to a statement from C. A. Swift, president and owner of the Swift Furniture company.

YAARAB TEMPLE CARAVAN RETURNS FROM CONCLAVE

Member of the Yaarab Temple caravan arrived in Atlanta Friday night after having attended the Shrine conclave in Kansas City, the last session of which was held Thursday.

The local caravan fired the opening guns in the campaign for the election of Henry C. Heinz, of Atlanta, for a place in the imperial divan. Mr. Heinz was not a candidate for imperial outer guard this year and does not expect to be next year, but plans are being laid for his election at some future time.

Officials of Yaarab temple who were aboard the special car chartered by Asa G. Candler, Jr., were Charles A. Bowen, potentate; Wylie West, chief rabban; George E. Argard, recorder; Henry C. Heinz, imperial representative; Forrest Adair, imperial representative; Albert L. Dunn, imperial representative; W. G. Mealor, imperial representative; Asa G. Candler, Jr., chief of staff; J. O. Seamans, grand marshal; R. D. Bame, Dewald Cohen, F. E. Van der Veer, Harry J. Carr and Henry Green, the last five representing the uniformed organizations and staff.

WARM WEATHER WITH SHOWERS PREDICTED TODAY

Warm weather, with possible thunder showers, is the meteorological menu offered to Atlantans for Sunday. C. F. von Herrmann, prognostic-ator in chief for this vicinity, predicted a temperature around 90 degrees for mid afternoon on the Sabbath and said that the thunder showers may be expected to begin about midnight Saturday, lasting probably until after dark Sunday.

Generally unsettled weather is prevalent in practically all sections of the country, reports show.

Sutton Will Speak For 10,000 School Leaders at Meeting

Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, will speak for 10,000 school superintendents and assistants who are members of the superintendents' department of the National Educational association, when the association holds its convention in Washington, D. C., July 1-3.

One speaker from each department of the association will have a place on the opening program. Dr. Sutton is the first southern school superintendent selected to speak for the superintendents.

Several other Atlanta school executives will attend the convention, including Miss Jessie Muse, Girls' High principal, and Miss Mary Postell, assistant superintendent in charge of elementary schools.

Two Blaze Victims At Ford Plant Friday, Reported as Improved

B. C. Ivey and P. T. Martin, employees of the assembling department of the Ford Motor company plant at 465 Ponce de Leon avenue, who were burned about the face and hands Friday afternoon in a fire which damaged the plant to the extent of several hundred dollars, were reported as improved Saturday and were able to go to their homes.

The fire was caused when a vat of paint in the assembling department on the second floor was ignited by a torch carried too near the pits. Quick work on the part of firemen made the damage nominal.

POLICE COMBING CITY FOR MISSING CHILDREN

Police are combing the city for little Eloise Watts, of 648 East Glenn street, and Richard Green, of 255 Ormond street, who disappeared from their homes Friday.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Mary E. Watts, reported that the child left home Friday morning for the Georgia avenue school, but never arrived at the school, and has not returned since. In requesting the police department to institute a search for his son, R. L. Green stated that the boy went to Grant Park Friday afternoon with the intention of going swimming, but has not been heard from since.

SERIES OF ROBBERIES NETS LOOT OF $2,500

Loot valued at more than $2,500, and consisting mainly of jewelry, was stolen in a series of robberies Friday night and Satruday, according to reports made to police. The home of F. O. Watson, of 100 Elizabeth street, was entered by thieves Friday night, and many valuable articles taken. A complete check had not been made Saturday, and no estimate of the loss could be made The bandits gained entrance to the house by prying open a window screen, and the building had been ransacked from basement to attic before the robbery was discovered by Watson and his daughter, Miss Enid Watson, on their return home.

Two negroes Saturday morning entered the grocery store of Robert Spector, 446 Edgewood avenue, held up the proprietor, and escaped with $60 after a chase on Howell street, in which several pedestrians joined.

Others places robbed were:

The home of Sam Zaban, 725 Piedmont avenue, where $25 in cash and $1,000 worth of jewelry was taken.

The residence of J. D. Kent, 293 Lake avenue, where thieves stole jewelry valued at approximately $1,000.

The grocery store of J. C. Edwards, of 291 Peters street, at which the loot consisted of $31 in cash, a revolver and cigarettes.

The home of R. W. Simons, 835 Piedmont avenue, was entered and the house ransacked, but an incomplete check showed that nothing of value had been taken.

The residence of Mrs. M. A. Berger, of 173 Woodward avenue, where a diamond ring, $12 in cash and groceries from the pantry were taken.

Camp Fire Girls Will Spend Vacation At Camp Highland

"On to Highlands, the jolly Camp Fire girls are marching," is the song which rings in the heart of every Camp Fire girl in Atlanta as the hour for departure for Camp Highlands approaches. Highlands, the beautiful camp belonging to the Young Women's Christian association, which opened for the summer season on Saturday, June 7, will be the scene of great happiness when the Camp Fire girls of the city arrive on Monday, June 9, for their week of camp. The train that will carry the Camp Fire girls to this ideal spot which is to be theirs from June 9-16 through the wonderful cooperation of Miss Lucy Adams, camp director of the Y. W. C. A., will leave the Terminal station at 2:20 on the afternoon of June 9. All girls are requested to meet at the station at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Marvin Underwood will be there to look after them and to see that they are well cared for on the train. She will carry the official flag of Camp Fire and will be easily found in the crowd. Most of the girls will return Saturday, June 14, reaching Atlanta via Southern at 10:25; their parents are asked to meet them at the train. The week-end at camp will be devoted to the older Camp Fire girls who have won rank; they will return Monday, June 16. A program especially adapted for the older girls will be the feature of the last two days of camp.

Camp Fire Executive.

No trouble has been spared in making plans for the week at Highlands, and every girl who goes will be assured a grand and glorious time. Miss Mary Louise Wilson, camp fire executive, has planned three definite and distinct programs for camp, one for each age of girls. The younger girls will not be taxed with a program suitable only for more mature girls; neither will the older girls be tied down to a program adapted for the younger campers. Yet they will all learn the harmony of living together at camp, and will participate in various activities together, even while in the main following separate programs.

Camp equipment includes the following articles: Sheet, blanket, pillow slip, soap, two face towels, two bath towels, middies, bloomers or knickers, tennis racket, bathing suit, drinking cup. Girls who are thirteen or older are also asked to bring a poncho or sheet of oilcloth for overnight hikes, and a nail file, orange stick, hairpins, and a cheap case knife for use in handicraft work.

The Direct Opposite Of a Puzzle

Some newspapers run a puzzle department for the amusement of their readers, running the puzzles one day and publishing the answers the next.

In fact, some newspapers run two puzzle departments—as you will find if you consult their classified section. And they never publish the answers to the most important of these departments.

But the A-B-C Classified Section of The Constitution isn't built on the puzzle plan. You don't have to wander through a maze of words to find what you want among its offers. There's nothing puzzling about it at all!

The numerical guides and the alphabetical cataloguing of the opportunities in this section make it the direct opposite of a puzzle!

And the only answers it demands are those which its profitable offers call forth as the connecting link between the prosperity seeker and his opportunity.

Read this systematized list of opportunities today and every day!

The Cool, Calculating Man

He is unruffled by the prevalent high price trend. He is unannoyed by the seeming impossibility of saving money. He preserves his equanimity in the face of buying and selling difficulties—and habitually consults The Constitution's A-B-C Classified Section for the things he needs.

In the course of a year's time this section runs the gamut of human desires and necessities. If the cool, calculating man does not find what he desires today, unperturbed he reads this section again tomorrow.

Experience has taught him that classified advertisers are wont to name low prices. The cool, calculating man gets his heater or his adding machine from the A-B-C Classified Section at a bargain price.

And the "A-B-C," "1-2-3" arrangement of these ads makes the finding of offers as easy as making up your mind what ones you want.

Extension of Highland Avenue Car Line Is Now Under Way

THE county is now taking the old surface off Highland Avenue and along with this activity the power company proposes to install gas mains and tracks for their street railway for a distance of 4,000 feet. Cars will operate on a 10-minute schedule.

CAN you visualize? Transportation and gas are the two factors primarily necessary for the building of new and desirable sections. Next in importance is the roadbed. In Morningside and North Highlands, we have installed absolutely every modern convenience for you. Morningside Park will be served by passenger buses running on a 10-minute schedule—North Highlands by street cars on a 10-minute schedule—thus the purchaser is assured of transportation for all time.

YOU can buy a beautiful, heavily wooded, fully improved lot in North Highlands for $2,500—these lots carry a $6,000 building restriction, thus assuring your property of a steady appreciation for years to come as this section continues to grow.

MORNINGSIDE PARK has $10,000 building restrictions on Morningside Drive, (Quality Street) where desirable lots may be had for $2,750 to $4,000; Sherwood Road lots from $2,250 to $2,750, building restrictions $7,500; Cumberland Road and Cumberland Circle, lots from $1,750 to $2,500, building restrictions $6,000.

ALL improvements are either down or guaranteed in writing when you buy. Taxes for the year are paid by the present owner—the purchaser is not assessed one single penny for improvements.

WHY not come out into this truly delightful neighborhood and buy your lots now? You can easily be in your own home by September 1st.

DRIVE out today to Morningside — Morningside Drive to Highland Avenue—it seems that all Atlanta is coming to Morningside—count the new homes now under construction. Compare our street improvements with any in the city.

WHEN you are ready to make your selection, phone WAlnut 0636.

Perry Adair Leads Atlanta Golfers to Dixie Tourney

Champ Plays With Jones Today

Atlanta's hopes of returning the George W. Adair memorial cup, the Southern Golf association trophy, to the Gate City for the third consecutive year, left last night for Louisville, Ky., where Tuesday the 1924 renewal tournament of the southern championship will get under way.

Heading the score of Atlanta golfing stars was Perry Adair, present holder of the cup named for his father. His lieutenants for the trip are C. V. Rainwater and Tess Bradshaw, who are annual contestants for southern honors.

Adair won the cup last year in Birmingham after it had been held the first year by Bobby Jones, former national open golf champion, who was runner-up in the national open show just closed at Detroit.

There are two youngsters in the crowd of Atlantans en route to Louisville, who will attract considerable attention if they play up to the mark they have been making for the last few months on Atlanta courses. They are Cy Strickler, Jr., and Gene Cook. Strickler made a remarkably good show in the recent Georgia-Alabama tournament played at Druid Hills. Cook is playing a fast game at both West End and East Lake. He is said to have turned in a 71 recently at East Lake, after playing from the back tees.

Gene Black, Jr., Entered.

Eugene Black, Jr., is another member of the younger crowd going to Louisville this year, who will provide stiff competition and probably elimination for strong contenders for southern honors.

Others who were included in the list of passengers on the special car that left here Saturday evening for Louisville are: Tom Prescott, Richard Hickey, Chick Ridley, Charley Black, Jr., Lowry Arnold, Keith Conway, Ben Jones, Abe Adair, C. E. Freeman and S. L. Hurt.

As an appetizer for the tournament, Perry Adair and Bobby Jones will play together against two other golfers who have not yet been named, in a match set for this afternoon over the course of the Louisville Country club. Bobby will not compete in this tournament.

ADVANCE GUARD IN LOUISVILLE.

Louisville, Ky., June 7.—The advance guard of golf stars began to arrive tonight in preparation for the opening at the Louisville Country club Monday of the 1924 southern amateur championship tournament. An attendance of 300 was expected. Monday will be devoted to receiving and arranging entries and play in the qualifying round of eighteen holes will begin Tuesday.

Perry Adair, who won the championship at Birmingham last spring, will arrive Sunday, heading a delegation of twenty amateurs from Atlanta. Under a recent ruling of the Southern Golf association, Adair will not be compelled to play in the qualifying round. He is a fellow townsman of Bobby Jones. Jones will not play in the southern amateur this year, partly because of the strain of the recent national open, in which he was defeated by Cyril Walker.

Tennesseans Strong.

Although Georgia expects Adair to repeat, Tennessee's invaders, led by Frank Dyer, winner of the 1923 metropolitan amateur, are full of confidence.

From Alabama comes Glenn Crisman, the 19-year-old sensation of Montgomery, who was medalist at the 1923 event. He is paired with another stripling, Bobby Baugh, Jr., of Birmingham.

Kentucky pins her hopes on John Marshall, Jr., Chris Brinks, veteran of two southern tourneys and former conqueror of Adair, and Ted Ottman, present city champion of Louisville.

Frank Godchaux, runner-up to Adair last year, carries the hopes of Louisiana. Reputed the most powerful driver in all Dixie, the stalwart Vanderbilt graduate comes strongly backed.

There will be six flights with 96 qualifying. The lowest sixteen will comprise the championship flight and the remainder divided into five minor flights, with suitable trophies to the winners.

Coaching School Opens June 23

The University of Georgia summer coaching school will start June 23 and last until August 2. Classes will be held each day in class work and also in practical demonstration.

There will be classes in high school athletics as well as college athletics.

The football will be in charge of Herman J. Stegeman and Thomas. Stegeman and Thomas will handle the basketball, Hutsell and Stegeman will work in the track classes, Thomas and Stegeman will handle the baseball while Hutsell will handle all of the general athletics.

The summer school at Georgia has proven very popular in the past two summers and a much larger attendance is expected during the coming summer.

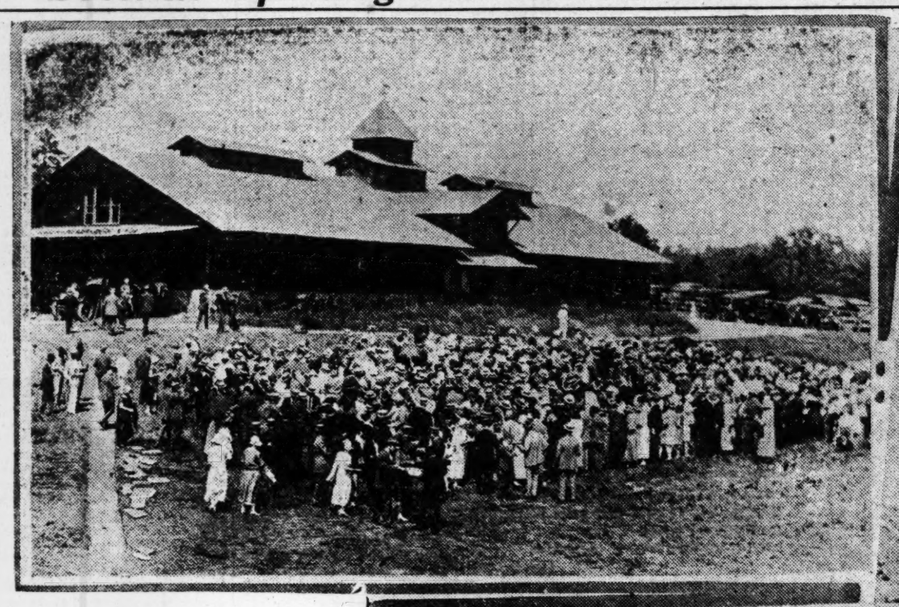

STRIKES OUT 29 MEN AND LOSES GAME, 1 TO 0.

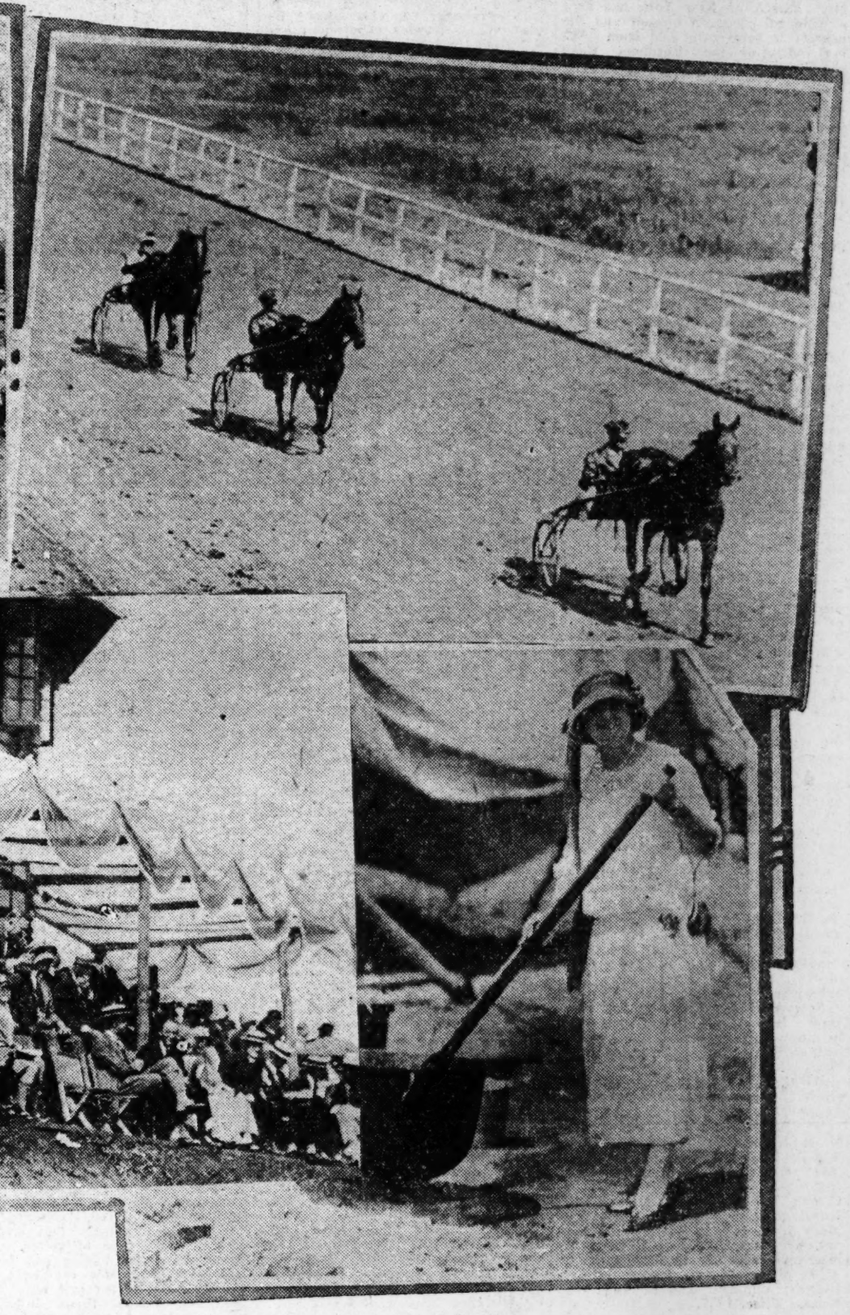

Providence, R. I., June 7.—In the longest baseball game ever played on Andrews field of Brown university, the Providence college team today defeated Brown, 1 to 0, by scoring in the twentieth inning. The game lasted four hours and five minutes. It was a pitchers' duel all the way between Elmer Duggan, of Brown, and Charlie Reynolds, of Providence college. Duggan struck out 29 men and allowed only five hits. Reynolds struck out 12 and allowed eight hits.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.

NEW RECORD MADE BY WOMEN

Briar Cliff Manor, N. Y., June 7.—Establishing a new American breast stroke record for 200 yards, Miss Agnes Geraghty, of the Women's Swimming association, New York, today was the star of the first day's events in the women's final Olympic swimming tryouts.

Miss Geraghty set a new 50-foot pool mark of 3 minutes, 33 2-5 seconds, in a preliminary heat, shattering her own record of 3:37 3-5, made last February at Miami, Fla. She won the final heat in two-fifths of a second slower time.

Rivaling Miss Geraghty's performance was the feat of a 13-year-old girl, Matilda Shurich, also of the Women's Swimming association, who won another heat of the same event in 3:36 2-5. Miss Shurich was third in the finals. Only two other events were decided today, Miss Gertrude Ederle capturing the 400-metre swim, free style, after a spirited race with Miss Helen Wainwright, and Miss Aileen Riggin, Olympic champion, won the fancy dive. All are members of the Women's Swimming association, thus giving the local organization a clean sweep.

Summaries of final heats:

400 metres, free style, won by Miss Gertrude Ederle, Women's Swimming association, New York; second, Helen Wainwright, Women's Swimming association; third, Miss Martha Norelius, People's Palace, Jersey City; fourth, Miss Margaret Ravier, Philadelphia Turngemeinde. Time, 6:03 4-5.

200 metres, breast stroke, won by Miss Agnes Geraghty, Women's Swimming association; second, Miss Eleanor Coleman, Milwaukee Athletic club; third, Miss Matilda Shurich, Women's Swimming association; fourth, Miss Ruth Thomas, Ambassador Swimming club, Atlantic City. Time, 3:33 4-5.

Fancy dive, won by Miss Eileen Riggin, Women's Swimming association, 99.54 points; second, Miss Betty Becker, Ambassador Swimming club, Atlantic City, 98.09 points; third, Helen Wainwright, Women's Swimming association, 94.10 points; fourth, Carol Fetcher, Pasadena A. C., Los Angeles, 91.67 points; fifth, Helen Heany, Women's Swimming association, 88.03 points.

Women Athletes Smash Records

New Orleans, June 7.—Four records of the Southern Amateur Athletic union, women's department, were smashed by female athletes representing New Orleans Athletic clubs in the second annual track and field championships held at Tulane stadium today.

The Catholic Women's club won the meet with 23 points. Annunciation play ground was second with 10, and Young Women's Hebrew association, third, with 8 points. Unattached athletes scored 6, Cumberland Athletic club, 5, and St. Roch Playground 3 points.

Dora Katz, Hebrew association, established a new mark for women in the 60-yard hurdles of 9 4-5 seconds, breaking the old record of 10 1-5 seconds; Mercedes Lecorgne, Cumberland A. C., bettered the high jump record by one inch when she leaped over the bar at four feet nine inches; Anna Koll, unattached, broke her own record in the standing broad jump with a mark of 8 feet 4 1-2 inches against 7 feet 6 3-4 inches for the old mark, and Viola Livaudais, Annunciation, hung up a new record in the baseball throwing contest, heaving the national league official ball 211 feet 1-2 inches.

Lullwater Farm Christened At Presidents' Club Outing

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

Picture 500 people transplanted from the most colorful section of a Kentucky derby crowd, playing, laughing, joking, cheering, applauding as the field of sleek horseflesh, in a drumfire of hoofbeats, steams down the stretch of a track that surpasses in beauty Louisville's Churchill Downs and you have a picture, of a kind, of the christening Saturday afternoon of Walter T. Candler's magnificent Lullwater farm racing plant at the annual outing of the Presidents' club.

The crowd, the horses, the intense sun painting the whole picture in brightest colors, is beyond the imagination of one who wasn't there. For those who were there, it will live for years, as the horses that are trained in this splendid, modern plant advance to positions of wide interest wherever race crowds gather.

The brilliant assemblage of the members of the Presidents' club and their families brought together nearly all of the big civic leaders in Atlanta. The Presidents' club is such an organization, for it is made up of men who now are or have been presidents of the bigger civic and business associations of Atlanta.

Begins with Barbecue.

The christening of the new training grounds began with a barbecue at 1 o'clock. A rare vision was presented as the 500-odd people lined up in double rows at the tables with the rustic stables, reflecting the sunlight from the heavy varnish with which they are coated, as the background. Everything even remotely connected with a barbecue was there. Everything from fried chicken on down to the paper plates.

The racing program that provided the first competitive events to be run on the new track began at 2 o'clock. Three events were run, two class trotting and pacing events and a three-year-old pace. R. M. Striplin, secretary of the Southeastern fair, was starting judge. Several times he called with all the dignity he could muster for Mr. Candler to come to the judge's stand. As often as he was called, Mr. Candler appeared and each time he found some joke awaiting him. He was as much cheered as the horses that ran in the events.

Colonel Fred Paxon couldn't resist the temptation to occupy the stand and consequently prowled thereabouts most of the day.

Some of the best horseflesh in the south was on the Lullwater track yesterday for its baptism of flying hoofs.

Four in First Event.

Three offspring of San Francisco started with Stormy, by Peter Mc, out of Alice Pointer by Star Pointer, in the first event, a class trot and pace. The entries besides Stormy were Virginia Frisco, by San Francisco, out of Judson Girl by Peter the Great; Tippie Frisco, by San Francisco, out of Mary Tipton by Walnut, and Princess Frisco, by San Francisco out of Princess Hall.

The event went three full mile heats, with Virginia Frisco, driven by John W. Thomas, winning. The time was 2:21 1-4, 2:22 1-4, and 2:21 1-4.

The Frisco string appeared to be in good flesh and presented clean action in all of the heats. Tippie Frisco, second, was driven by Mr. Candler; Stormy, third, was driven by Walter T. Candler, Jr, and Princess Frisco, fourth, was driven by Greely Winings, who is considered one of the best colt trainers in the central and eastern part of the country. He is training colts at Laurel Hall farm, Indianapolis, and is understood to have several of Mr. Candler's latest acquisitions in charge.

The second event, the three-year-old pace, with five entries, was won by Bob McTyer, a chestnut gelding by The Abbe, out of Molly O. The time on the heats was 2:21 1-2, 2:17 1-4 and 2:17 1-4. The winner was brought under the wire by Mr. Candler, who, according to old heads at the track, declared that he is giving unusual promise as an expert reinsman. Mr. Candler shows rare judgment in handling his horses.

In the second event the other entries placed as follows: Rol Abbe, by The Abbe, out of Katherine Winston, driven by Johnny Thomas, second; Marion C., by Napoleon Direct out of Cherry Gentry, driven by Greely Winings, third; Lou Abbe, by The Abbe out of Elizabeth Searchlight, driven by Gus Coggins, fourth, and Bootsie, by Axyolo out of Neva Knight, driven by John W. Thomas, fifth.

Lulla Forbes Wins.

The final event, a class trot and pace, brought the real speed of the Candler stables into action. Entries were Lulla Forbes, the sensational bay mare by U. Forbes out of Nelle Worthy L., driven by John W. Thomas; Axson, by Chestnut Peter out of Emma Smith, driven by Mr. Candler; The Great Lullwater, by Peter the Great out of Walnut Leaf, driven by Greely Winings, and Pete Green, by Peter Scott out of Katherine Winston, driven by Johnny Thomas.

Lulla Forbes took the event in two straight heats, the first run in 2:14 1-4 and the second done in 2:12 flat, fast time for the half-mile track. The Great Lullwater was second and Pete Green and Axson split third position.

Lulla Forbes stands out now as Mr. Candler's greatest Grand Circuit prospect. She will be sent to the Grand Circuit start next week, it is understood, with several other Candler horses, including Pete Green, Lou Abbe and Rol Abbe, Gus Coggins' horses, will remain at Lullwater farms for a time before being sent to the track.

On the completion of the three events, Colonel Paxon presented to Mr. Candler, as winner of the three-year-old pace, a silver loving cup, while a wreath was presented to John W. Thomas as driver of Lulla Forbes, winner of the third event.

MADPLAYRUNS AHEAD AT BELMONT

Belmont Park, L. I., June 7.—When Mad Play, in a race packed with thrills, won the $50,000 Belmont stakes here Saturday, it was the fifth time in eight years that Sam Hildreth had provided a winner for the classic.

Running in a contending position all the way, Mad Play came in with a great rush on the stretch and won hands down.

Far back on the stretch came Bud Fisher's Mr. Mutt, second. E. B. McLean's Modest, after being outrun in the earlier part of the race, moved up slowly in the stretch and took third.

When the barrier was lifted Beau Butler was off in the lead with Aga Khan in second position and Mad Play running third. At the half, Beau Butler had been shuffled back and Mad Play's stable-mate, Sheridan, was setting the pace, with Aga Khan hanging on determinedly and Mad Play still third. At the mile pole, Aga Khan dropped back and Mad Play was chasing the pacemaker.

Pacemaker Drops Back.

Coming into the stretch, Sheridan, having made the pace for Mad Play, as was intended, also dropped out of the picture, Mr. Mutt, coming with express-train speed, closed with the leaders and passed Modest, the finish being Mad Play, Mr. Mutt and Modest.

The time, 2:18 4-5, did not approach the track record of 2:14 1-5.

The Rancocas stable entry was quoted at 2 to1, 4 to5, and 1 to 3.

A cloudless sky and mid-June weather greeted the record-breaking throng which journeyed to America's most beautiful racetrack for running of the fifty-sixth renewal of the oldest of America's turf fixtures.

Besides the Belmont, two other stake races — the Meadowbrook Steeplechase, $2,000 added, and the Keene Memorial, $2,500 added—marked the last Saturday at the Nassau county course.

While no outstanding stars were entered in any of the day's races, the huge crowd was thrilled to the core by close and exciting finishes.

A hot morning sun dried out the track, which had been slow due to rains of the past few days, and at post time for the first event, the going was very good, although not by any means "lightning" fast.

Clipsetta Won By Sweep Park

Latonia, Ky., June 7.—The Clipsetta, one of the biggest two-year-old filly stakes in Kentucky, fell to E. Gay Drake's bay filly, Sweep Park, which got a nose decision over Little Visitor. Donnasanta and Cream Puff and eight others at Latonia today.

Travelers and Lookouts Will Play Crackers Here This Week

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Now that Johnny Dobbs and his league leading Memphis ball club have left the city to be gone until August 8, Manager Niehoff and his Crackerclan have a great opportunity of regaining ground which was lost to Memphis. Little Rock and Chattanooga will furnish the opposition for the Crackers during the remainder of the home session which ends Saturday afternoon.

Today will be an off day for the Crackers and Travelers, but Monday afternoon hostilities will be resumed at Spiller Field with a bargain day double bill as a feature of the week's entertainment. There will be a single game with Little Rock on Tuesday afternoon, after which Strang Nicklin will pilot his Chattanooga Lookouts into the Cracker ball yard for a series of four games. It will be the first appearance of Nicklin here this season as manager, for he recently took over the Lookout reins, given up by Les Nunamaker.

Crackers Go to Nashville.

After the series with Chattanooga is concluded the Crackers will jump over to Nashville for a series of four games in three days, a double header being slated for Monday, June 16. Wednesday, June 18, the Crackers return home for a series of four games with Nashville, making a total of eight games in a row with Jimmy Hamilton's crew.

The playing of the Crackers during the past week has not been as disappointing as the tabulation of the games won and lost would indicate, for the Crackers were playing the league leaders, and a mighty good ball club. It was a case of nip and tuck in every game and the breaks of the games played a very important part in the victories.

The Crackers were given some good pitching all the week, especially by Monroe Swartz, who was rushed to the rescue in two instances. Once he was rushed into the game against Memphis with the bases loaded and none out and only one run was scored against him, and that run was the result of a costly fielder's choice on the part of Smith at third base. In the last Memphis game he twirled two innings and did not allow a safe hit off his delivery.

The hitting of the Crackers was very good considering the fact that they were meeting the best pitchers in the league. Atlanta was outhit only four points during the Memphis series.

Manager Niehoff and Bill McCabe played in Saturday's game and looked good. According to Manager Nichoff, George Dumont will be ready to work one of the games against Chattanooga the latter part of the week.

With the Crackers' full strength back in the field the playing should pick up considerably and with Dumont back the pitching staff should get better results.

In the game Saturday afternoon Manager Niehoff in his first fielding play started a lightning double play that killed a threatened rally and then came to bat and laced out a long single to left field. He played good ball all during the game and helped steady the infield.

Rally in Ninth Gives Victory To Visitors

BY HENRY ALLEN.

Some 6,000 cash customers, whose journey to Spillers' ball orchard yesterday further enriched the Atlanta Baseball company, were presented with one of the queerest exhibitions of the national pastime witnessed here in sometime.

Bert Niehoff and his Cracker outfit, acting as hosts to "Dainty Kid" Elberfeld and his Little Rock Travelers, were roughly handled by the visitors, especially in the ninth inning which cost the local crew another ball game by a 11 to 8 score.

A total of 29 men was used during the contest which lasted three hours. Fifteen Travelers were injected into the affair, while 14 of the Crackers saw service. "Rube" Robinson was the only man Kid Elberfeld didn't use while Hollis McLaughlin and George Dumont decorated the Cracker dugout the whole way.

Little Rock used five twirlers to win, while the Crackers used four, and it can't be said that any of the nine were very effective. Benny Karr, Dick Niehaus, Monroe Swartz and Ray Francis worked for the Crackers in the order named, while Elberfeld fired Richbourg, Ford, McCall, Cash and Roberts at the locals.

Travels Get 20 Hits.

In the Crackers pitching review, the Little Rock sluggers garnered a total of 20 safe knocks, while the local batters crashed out only a dozen from the offerings of the rival flingers.

By one of the queer turns of fate Karr and Richbourg, the two twirlers to start the contest, would have been credited with the win and loss, respectively, in the pitching records if the fatal ninth hadn't reversed matters, thus making Ray Francis the unlucky one and Jim Roberts the hero.

Karr would have received credit for the win because the Crackers were leading when he left the box. The locals managed to keep this margin until the ninth, when the score was tied and the game eventually won by the Travelers. Francis and Roberts were working at this time.

In spite of all the hitting and runs made there was only one error for the two teams. "Scrappy" Moore was credited with this bobble when his throw to first was wild.

The Crackers were in the lead all through the game until the ninth inning when the Travelers jumped on Francis for five hits and four runs, which were more than enough to win the weird contest.

Former Crackers, who now draw pay checks from the Little Rock management, were really responsible for the win. Joe Guyon, Turner Barber, "Babe" Herman and "Doc" Smith were reesponsible for sending the runs across that meant the contest.

Guyon Stars.

The person who stood way out in the afternoon was Guyon. Two doubles, a triple, a single and two walks were his contributions for the afternoon on the offensive while he handled three chances in the outfield perfectly.

Ben Paschal, "Red" Smith and Dick Burrus lead the Cracker attack. This trio seems to be just about the most dependable hitting outfit on the squad, and its performance yesterday was nothing unusual.

Johnny Brock, who has been working behind the bat regularly since Homer Haworth injured his finger, split his right hand yesterday and may be out for several days. Haworth will be forced to take over the catching duties again.

Niehoff played the entire game at second yesterday and there is no doubt that his presence greatly aided the infield. Bill McCabe started the game in center but was forced to give way in favor of Mack Hillis because his ankle had not sufficiently healed.

George Dumont has been steadily improving and will be able to start one of the games before the week is over.

Crackers Take Lead.

The Crackers got off to a nice lead in the very first inning. Two singles, a double and another single sent across three counters. Another came in the second on a single, a walk and a fielder's choice.

The Travelers pushed over their first counter in the second. The Crackers went scoreless in the third but the Travelers added another. The fourth netted one run for the visitors while the Crackers annexed three. The fifth gave the Travelers two while the Crackers were scoreless.

The Crackers scored their final tally in the sixth while Little Rock also added another. The seventh added another while the ninth brought Little Rock four counters and victory.

Roy Is Recalled By Tris Speaker

Mobile, Ala., June 7.—Pitcher Luther Roy, a right-hander, with the Chattanooga Southren association team, was recalled from here today to join the Cleveland American league club, according to announcement of President Sammy Strang Nicklin, of the former team.

Chattanooga, in return for Roy, gets Sumpter Clark, who will play third and is due to report here at once. Pitcher Wingfield, who had been covering short for the Chattanooga club, will be put back on the pitching mound. Bates will be moved to short.

DOUGLAS TO PLAY AMATEUR BASEBALL

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 7.—"Shuffling" Phil Douglas, formerly of the New York Giants' pitching staff, has signed up as pitcher for one of the amateur clubs of this city.

LAPAN STILL HOLDS TO LEAD OVER SOUTHERN HITTERS

Carlisle Smith Is Runner-Up With Knode and Roy Carlyle Following Close in Rear

There has been some hard hitting in the Southern association during the past week. Although the leader, Lapan, of Little Rock, has gone back in percentage since he went behind the plate in some of the games, he is still an easy first.

Others behind him, almost a dozen of them, have increased their marks, even if they have not always bettered their standing. It is true that the gain has not been great in certain cases, but there has been a steady improvement all along the line.

Smith, of Atlanta; Knode, of Birmingham, and Carlisle, of Memphis, have all three hung up a better record. This also goes for Stewart, of Birmingham; Burrus, of Atlanta, and Tucker, of New Orleans, while Guyon, of Little Rock; Niehaus, of Chattanooga, and D. Williams can be added to the list. Taylor, of Memphis, for a day or two fell back, but came to the front again.

Paschal, of Atlanta, has only held his own, but this has not stopped him from becoming the undisputed leader among the run getters. In addition, Paschal has also taken the lead in home runs, having pounded out eight to date. In addition he has stolen eleven bases and has made himself useful all around.

After a long chase, Stewart, of Birmingham, has caught up with Marriott, of Mobile, in stolen bases, each having sixteen at present. Brausen, of Birmingham, also putting on speed, has compiled thirteen.

Birmingham has fallen off slightly in team hitting, as has Atlanta, while Little Rock is contending with the other two. New Orleans looks best in the fielding column, but is last among the hitters.

Warmouth, of Memphis, leads the pitchers with eight won and one lost, but Hollingsworth, of New Orleans, has won three more than the Memphis shark. These two have undisputed lead among the twirlers.

National League.

After a long chase Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis, has been dislodged as premier hitter in the National league by Catcher Snyder, of the Giants. It is true that Snyder has not figured in as many games as had Rogers, but the figures are impressive enough as it has been a long chase, backed up by constant slugging.

There has been some indications during the last few days that Hornsby is on the mend and that he may again take command at the top, as it hardly stands to reason that the hard-working Snyder should be able to not only catch in practically every game but also contribute the regular quota of hits.

Gooch, of Pittsburg, is another backstop who is also among the leaders, but he has not figured in many more than half of the games, while his rival has been in all but nine of the Giants'.

Besides Snyder, Kelly, of New York, has also been busy with the bat, at one time threatening to take the lead. As it is he and Wheat, of Brooklyn, are tied for third place. That the leaders are getting better stick work all around is evident, as Frisch is sixth in batting among the regulars. Fournier, of Brooklyn, has given ground a little, but not in long distance swats as the Frenchman has compiled 12 home runs to date, being out in front all by himself.

There has been some hesitation among the base runners, with Grantham, of Chicago, and Bigbee, of Pittsburg, holding the lead in stolen bases with 11, Carey and Traynor, of Pittsburg, being the leading contenders. Frisch of New York has kept a wide gulf between himself and the nearest in total runs and from present indication the Fordham flash should be hard to beat in this department.

New York, as a team, has used the bludgeon with telling effect, having increased its lead in team batting. Brooklyn, Chicago and St. Louis are battling for secondary honors. Pittsburg has braced in its fielding while Boston has been falling down and the Pirates have the best of the argument at present.

Alexander of Chicago leads the pitchers with seven games won and one lost and Sheehan of Cincinnati has the next best percentage, but outside of the first named, the pitchers have shown nothing remarkable.

American League.

Babe Ruth, of the Yankees, has finally landed among the leading hitters in the American league after a long, stern chase. Babe is not yet at the top but he has been making big strides in that direction the last week. At present Ruth is fourth among the regulars, partly accounted for through a slump of his rivals.

Heilmann of Detroit is still the best among the swatters but he has lost a good many points in the different encounters in which he has figured. He did not swing his bat with the same effectiveness in the east as he did at home.

Boone, of Boston, is hanging on but the week's disappointment has been Kenneth Williams, of St. Louis. Kenneth, along with several of his mates, has taken a fearful slump, having dropped from near the top to down among the unknowns. His home run bat has, however, been working and he has added two to his totals.

Babe Ruth has clouted his thirteenth four-base drive and is looking for his fourteenth in the west this week.

Little speed has been shown on the bases and Collins of Chicago is still nursing his nine pilfered sacks. Heilmann has caught up with and passed Harris, of Boston, in total runs. Ruth has been busy enough to tie with Harris.

One of the startling events in the league during the week has been the hitting of Washington as a team. For the first time in many moons the Senators have gone to the top in hitting, leading Cleveland by one point. Another surprise has been the playing of the St. Louis Browns, who have only won three games since May 18.

New York leads the fielders as a team. Boston, which went to the top in the race Wednesday, has not shown brilliantly in either hitting or fielding.

Bush, of New York, leads the pitchers but he has competition in Ferguson and Piercy, of Boston, and White-

SCHOLZ SETS 100-METER RECORD

New York, June 7.—Jackson Scholz, of the New York A. C., and a former Missouri champion, broke the Olympic record for the 100-meter in the finals of the eastern Olympic try-outs Saturday, and Frank Hussey, the Brooklyn schoolboy sprinter, received the first setback of his career.

J. A. Leconey, of Meadowbrook, came in second, but the three sprinters were less than a yard apart. The winner's time was 10.6 seconds. Scholz probably won over Hussey because of his greater experience, and he was at the top of his form.

Minneapolis, June 7.—Out shooting 45 teams of crack marksmen, representing college and universities from all parts of the country, the University of Minnesota rifle team won first place in the national intercollegiate rifle match, sponsored by the war department, Captain Andrew Tyschen, coach, was notified today.

The victory is the second national championship credited to the Gopher team, which also was awarded the Hearst trophy in a national rifle match in which 127 schools were entered.

The Gopher team, made up of 15 crack shots, broke a total of 779 targets out of a possible 800 to win the war department match, with Norwich University placing second, 30 points behind.

Almand Park Wins From Milstead, 2-0

Milstead, Ga., June 7.—(Special.) The Almand Park club of Atlanta won from the Milstead team here today in a well played game by the score of 2 to 0. A large crowd of loyal rooters witnessed the affair.

Schmidt, the tall pitcher of the Almand Park nine, was in great form and held the local lads when men were on bases. He was master of the situation at all times.

The fielding of both clubs was extra good and every body present was very much pleased with the splendid game played.

Spielberger and Speeks were responsible for the two runs that won the game for the visitors. Spielberger got a long triple and Speeks drove him in and scored a minute later on a hit and an error.

The batteries were Schmidt and Minnhinnet for Almand Park, Williams and Stewart for Milstead.

The Defending Champion

Perry Adair, the brilliant young Atlanta golfer, who will play at Louisville, Ky., this week in defense of his title of southern golf champion. He left with the rest of the Atlanta delegation for Louisville last evening. He will play with Bobby Jones in a match today against two golfers who have not yet been named.

Description of Louisville Country Club Course

Louisville, Ky., June 7.—(Special.) The Louisville Country club links, where the twenty-second annual championship of the Southern Golf association will be played, beginning Tuesday, provides features that will appeal to every type of golfer. Long holes where the driving and brassie will have a chance to display his wares; holes which call only for a good long drive; those in-between holes where a drive of good length is needed and if obtained still leaves the player with an approach shot of considerable length, and the tiny mashie shot holes—all are to be found on these beautiful links which overlook the Ohio river.

Too, there are plenty of traps throughout the course that yawn for a sliced or pulled stroke and some narrow fairways which cause the unwary and those lacking sufficient skill plenty of trouble and precious strokes.

The total yardage of the course is a trifle short of the accepted standard of 6,000 yards or better for championship play, being 5,856 yards in length. However, the hazards and difficulties which will be encountered will cause the average player some anxiety if he is shooting for a par 71.

No. 1: The first hole is the longest of all, covering 484 yards with a par 5. The player often fails to realize the difficulties which lie ahead of him on this hole, even though his drive be good; it generally lands in a ravine between two knolls, from where a hefty punch is needed to get within approaching distances of the green. Once the second shot has been successfully played, there is little cause for further worry, as the green will offer no dangers.

No. 2: Is as par 3-hole with a yardage of 231. A long driver can reach the green with his midiron or driving iron while his less fortunate brother will require a driver. The green is well trapped and is reached by a trying down-hill approach shot.

No. 3: The careless driver will find himself in trouble on No. 3 should he slice his tee shot over the fence on the right where there is an out-of-bounds penalty. The second shot must carry in the neighborhood of 200 yards across a wide ravine to the green. The distance is 424 yards and par is 4.

No. 4: The fourth hole is a 122-yard mashie pitch from the top of a cliff to an elevated green in the bottom of a valley. The green is banked against a steep hill. It is considered the sportiest short hole in Kentucky. Par is 3.

Five, six and seven all are alike, along the top and sides of a rolling hog's back which, coming and going, produces many skids both afoot and in one's play. Along these routes are many traps awaiting the player who is off the line. No. 6 has a picturesque sunken green. Par on Nos. 5 and 6 is a 4, while on 468-yard seventh the figure is 5.

No. 8: Is 182 yards long with the customary par 3. It is similar to No. 2, calling for an iron shot from the tee through rolling fairway. A sharp incline behind theg reen presents sufficient hazard.

No. 9: From the elevated tee at No. 9 there is a carry of 253 yards to the elevated green. Should the drive be sliced to the rough slope the player will have trouble, but with the tee shot successfully executed, it is an easy par 4.

No. 10: From the elevated tenth tee near the clubhouse the player gets a picture of what Chick Evans has termed "the show hole of the golfing world." There is 389 yards of undulating and ravined fairway, with plenty of traps on both sides. The success of the drive and the lie obtained for the second shot determines the possible score. Par is 4.

No. 11: Is a "levelling hole." It is 224 yards in length and requires a lusty drive, which holds to the line, for the fairway is narrow and will cause even the experts to consider their irons for the tee shot. Three is par for the hole.

No. 12: The twelfth is a dog-leg down a valley from an elevated tee to a large, terraced, well-shaded green, with a par of 4.

No. 13: Quite appropriately is the unluckiest and most treacherous hole of the course. It is 418 yards in length, but because of the preponderance of hazards, par is placed at 5. The Fairway traverses a narrow valley, where hooked shots will find the trees or dig into the hillsides. Two excellent tshots are required to cross the road to the vicinity of the green, which is elevated and expansive, but dangerously trapped.

No. 14: The fourteenth is an indifferent sort of a hole. It is 392 yards long, with par placed at 4. It is semi-dog-leg in shape, but the down slope to the green will give the player a thrill with its sport approach.

No. 15: Is as deceptive in appearance as it is possible for a golf hole to be. It is but 130 yards long and seemingly an easy mashie shot from the tee, which is elevated, to the green, which is elevated and built up. However, should the drive fail to carry the green and approach be a trifle too hard or a trifle too easy, there are worries galore. A hill rises behind the green, but on all other sides the ground slopes away so sharply there is no chance for a ball to find a resting place until it reaches the bottom. Those who have played the hole, and have been successful or otherwise, say it is "an easy 3 or a very hard 8."

No. 16: The sixteenth, along the top of a knoll, is a comfortable iron shot of 163 yards to a wonderful green, which is well trapped. Par is 3.

No. 17: Aside from the distance, which is 467 yards, there is nothing especially attractive about No. 17 except that the approach must be safely across the road if par 5 is to be realized.

No. 18: The eigteenth hole with its green at the clubhouse, is broad but well bunkered on the right, which, with a steep decline on the left, calls for exceptionally straight work to keep the score down. There is plenty of distance, it being 457 yards long, giving the player a chance for a second shot with the wood. The green is a sunken one and requires exceptionally careful approaching. Par for the hole is 5.

2 GAMES SCHEDULED AT ALMAND PARK TODAY

Two good baseball entertainments are scheduled for Almand park this afternoon. The first, which will get under way at 1:30 o'clock, is between the Southern railway nine and the Almand park nine.

The second game will begin just as soon as the first is completed and will bring the Gate City company aggregation and the Almand park club together.

A large crowd of fans is expected at the park to witness the two battles, despite the fact that Fort McPherson will be the scene of another amateur diamond encounter.

Illinois Wins Conference Meet

Chicago, June 7.—(By the Associated Press.)—Scoring in thirteen of the sixteen events, the University of Illinois team won an impressive victory in the western conference outdoor track and field meet today with a total of 74 points. Iowa was second with 39. Michigan third, with 31 1-2, and Ohio State fourth with 20.

Although the weather was more suitable for football than track athletics, a world's record was smashed and two conference records existing for twenty-one years were equaled. Combatting a chilling wind that swept the course from the northeast, Charles Brookins, of Iowa, world's record hurdler, broke his own record for the 220-yard low hurdles around one turn, winning the event in 23 4-5, clipping nine-tenths of a second off the mark he made for the event in the national collegiate meet here a year ago.

De Hart Hubbard, for the University of Michigan, furnished a surprise by winning the 100-yard dash in 9 4-5 and tying the Big Ten record established by W. D. Hayes, of Notre Dame, in 1922.

Evans, of Illinois, tied the "Big Ten" record for the 220-yard dash established by Archie Hahn, of Michigan, in 1903, when he sprinted to victory in 21 3-5.

Women Golfers To Stage Tourney Starting Tuesday

BY MRS. CLARENCE BRADLEY.

The Atlanta Woman's Golf association will stage a match play tournament over the East Lake Golf course beginning Tuesday morning, June 10.

This tournament has created quite a bit of enthusiasm among the women golf fans of Atlanta, and a fine entry is expected. It is a handicap affair and is different from any former tournament sponsored by the association, as the qualifying rounds will be played with handicaps applying, thereby giving the beginners an opportunity to play with a more experienced player and also play in a higher flight. Flights of eight will be arranged and trophies will be awarded winner and runner-up of each. A baby or nine-hole flight will be arranged for the players that do not care to travel the full 18 holes.

It is predicted that there will be four full flights in the 18-hole division and two in the nine-hole division.

Any Eligible.

Play in the qualifying round will begin at 9 o'clock and the usual green fee of $1 will be charged. This tournament is open to the members of the Atlanta Woman's Golf association only, but any woman golfer in Atlanta is eligible to join the association. Any one wishing to do so can pay their dues on the first tee Tuesday morning and play in the tournament and all other affairs sponsored by the association during the year.

Tournament play gives the beginners the finest experience they can get and for this reason the association is encouraging match play at all the clubs. Atlanta has more woman golfers of championship calibre than any other city in the south, as the recent southern woman's golf championship at Chattanooga demonstrated Atlanta not only led in attendance by a large majority, but brought home the championship cup and out of the thirty-one trophies offered Atlanta copped eighteen.

The climatic conditions in Atlanta give the golfers an opportunity to play all the year round and with four ideal golf courses, it should give the southern players a decided advantage. East Lake Country club is rated as the seventh finest championship golf course in America, and the experience derived from playing over this fine course is the best that could be had for the beginner as well as the seasoned players.

Ladder Tourney.

Another contest to encourage golfers at the different clubs has been launched by the association. This is the ladder elimination tournament and is a handicap affair arranged in three classes. Those having a handicap of and up to twenty will be in class "A;" the "B" class will reach 35; and the "C" class will go the limit which is 50. After the first day of play which opened at all clubs Friday, the players will have two weeks to play their matches: Beginning at the top of the ladder, the one that is in the second place challenges the one that holds the first place and number four challenges number three. The idea is to reach the top of the ladder and in each class the same rules prevail. This ladder tournament is only open to the members of the Atlanta Woman's Golf association.

Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, the Atlanta Woman's Golf association representative, will have charge of the play at East Lake Country club; Mrs. T. T. Williams, representative at the Brookhaven club; Mrs. L. J. Robinson, at the Druid Hills Golf club, and Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr., at the Ansley Park Golf club.

Trophies to Be Given.

Mrs. L. J. Robinson, former Michigan state champion, and the Atlanta Woman's Golf association representative at the Druid Hills Golf club, has arranged a weekly one-day handicap medal tournament for the members of the Druid Hills Golf club, with trophies for the low net and low gross scores.

The first two tournaments that were played Friday, May 30, and June 5 were well attended and new members are registering for the next tournament that will be played on Friday, June 13. This is an eighteen-hole affair and will bring all classes of players together and should be crowned with success.

Good Pitching Features Saturday's Amateur Games

Brilliant fielding and good pitching in the majority of the games featured Atlanta's amateur baseball playing Saturday afternoon.

There were several surprises in the various leagues. The Georgia Avenue team continued to hold a firm grip on first place in the Perrin Royal league, with eight victories to its credit. Several upsets occured in the Perrin league and a 11-inning contest featured the Manufacturers' league.

PERRIN LEAGUE.

The Atlanta Utility baseball team ousted the Terra Cotta nine out of fourth place in the Perrin league Saturday afternoon in an interesting game which ended in a 3-to-2 score with the Utility team in the lead.

The game was a pitchers' battle between Vason of the winners and Payne of the losers. Vason gave up eight hits but kept them well scattered while Payne gave up only five and two of those came in the fourth inning. The bunched hits in the fourth inning coupled with an error paved the way for the victory.

Atlanta Utility .....000 201 000—3	5	4
Atlanta Terra Cotta...000 001 001—2	8	4

Batteries: Vason and Kelly; Payne and Jones.

Mail Service Springs Surprise.

The Railway Mail Service sprang a surprise in the Perrin league by defeating the strong Whittier Mills team by a 10-to-3 score. It was the second victory in seven starts for the Mail Service team.

The game was featured by the pinch hitting of the Mail Service batters, who scored three runs in the fourth on good pinch stickwork. A rally was staged in the ninth inning that netted four hits and five runs. Humphries allowed the Whittier team only five hits and kept those well scattered.

Errors on the part of the Whittier team played an important part in placing men in positions to score on pinch hits.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
R. M. S. .....100 301 005—10	10	4
Whittier .....012 000 000—	3	5	12

Batteries: Humphries and Thomas; Thompson and Sammons.

Coca-Cola Team Wins Another.

The Coca-Cola team added another victory to its credit Saturday afternoon by defeating the Hood Brick company team by a 9-to-2 score.

The game was featured by the hitting of Starr, who secured four hits out of five trips to the plate. He also played good ball at first base.

Timely hitting coupled with four costly errors was responsible for the victory. Harper pitched winning ball for the Coca-Cola team and gave up only nine hits, and had them well scattered except in the fourth inning when three safeties accounted for one of the two runs.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Coca-Cola .....213 002 100—9	11	0

PERRIN ROYAL LEAGUE.

Georgia Avenue won its eighth straight victory Saturday afternoon, defeating the Pep Class, runner-up in the Royal league, by a score of 10 to 4.

The entire Georgia Avenue team played jam-up ball and helped Baker out of several bad holes by sparkling plays in the infield. Baker was touched up for 9 hits, but they were scattered enough not to cause any damage. He pitched exceptionally good ball in the pinches.

Not only did Baker pitch well but he secured three hits and two walks in five trips to the place. Logarmarsino, Darley and Gardner also hit well for the winners. Verner and Irvin played good ball for the losers.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.

Pep Class .....002 000 110—	4	9	1

Batteries: Baker and Logarmarsino; Irvin and Atchley.

Brown Mill Wins.

Brown Mill won a loosely played game from the B. M. C. nine by a score of 6 to 0.

The game was a pitchers' battle as far as hits were concerned, for each side secured five hits, but poor fielding and bad base running marred the pitchers' duel. The B. M. C. team made a total of 8 errors, while the Brown Mill team made 2.

All of the runs came in the first and third innings, when errors, coupled with timely hits, paved the way for victory.

The score by innings: R. H. E.

B. M. C. .....000 000 000—0 5 8

The Kirkwood team forfeited to the I. C. S. S.

PERRIN SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE.

Capitol View Baptist went into the lead in the Perrin Sunday School league by defeating the Loyalty Class 6 to 0, while the Grant Park team lost to Central Baptist.

It was a pitchers' battle between Evans of the Loyalty Class and Dorris Miller of the Capitol View team. There were only five hits during the game, Capitol View getting only 2, while the Loyalty Class secured 3.

Pinch hitting, coupled with three costly errors, tells the story of the game. There were several good fielding plays on both sides, and fast fielding knocked down several balls that were labeled hits.

The score by innings: R. H. E.
Loyalty Class .....000 000 000—0 3 3
Capitol View .....101 000 40x—6 2 1

Batteries: Evans, Burress and Day; Miller, Sawyer and Maddox.

Grant Park Loses.

Central Baptist beat Grant Park by a 14-to-5 score Saturday afternoon in one of the upsets of the afternoon.

The game was slow and uninteresting except for two or three fast plays in the infield that cut off possible runs. Each team secured 10 hits apiece, but Central Baptist bunched hits in the fourth, sixth and seventh innings.

The score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Grant Park .....120 110 000—	5	10	4
Central Baptist .....000 403 52x—14	10	2

Boothians Tie for Third.

By winning over the Moreland Avenue nine, 7 to 0, the Boothians are now in a tie for third place in the Sunday School league.

The game was close and interesting for eight innings, but in the first half of the ninth inning the Boothians jumped onto Shumake's delivery for a total of four runs and five hits. Up until that time Shumake had kept his hits well scattered but weakened at the last.

The score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Boothians .....100 001 104—7	14	4
Moreland Ave .....000 000 000—0	4	0

Batteries: Whitney and Holbrook; Shumate and Johnson.

MANUFACTURERS' LEAGUE.

The Panamco Oil company team won an interesting 11-inning game of ball from the Gate City Cotton Mills nine by a score of 4 to 2 in one of the feature games of Saturday afternoon.

It was a pitchers' battle between Peel of the winners and Jackson of the losers. The Gate City team outhit the Panamco nine but could do nothing with Peel's delivery in the pinches. Errors were directly responsible for the victory in the eleventh inning. Lee hit well for the losers and scored two of the runs.

The Red Seal Shoe company nine won a loosely played 5 to 4 game from the North Atlanta team Saturday afternoon. Errors coupled with poor base running slowed up the game considerably and towards the last three seemed to be no interest in the game whatever.

A. B. and C. Wins.

The Atlanta Baggage and Cab company team won a free hitting contest from the Fire Department nine by a score of 17 to 11. The Cab team scored in every inning except the second and seventh and added six runs in the ninth inning on timely hitting coupled with several errors.

CITY LEAGUE.

The F. E. F. team of the Dixie league maintained their lead Saturday by defeating the Western Electric team by the score of 7 to 6 in a close and exciting game.

Dickenson for F. E. F. and Allen for the Western Electric each hit home runs. The feature of the fielding was the one-handed running catch of the long fly hit by Allen in the ninth inning. Parker and Allen both pitched good games.

Capitol View Leave Cellar.

The First M. E. team brought up their percentage enough to leave the cellar of the Dixie league when they beat the Peachtree Road Presbyterians by a score of 7 to 5. The Peachtree team was going fine and McGlaughlin struck out 14 of his opponents, but occasional errors in the field allowed the two extra runs to slip over, and the game was lost. McGlaughlin also knocked a home run in the first inning.

The all around work of the Methodists was better than it has been for several games. Turner umpired a good game.

Chicks Lose and Win.

Birmingham, Ala., June 7.—Birmingham won the first game of a double-header here today, 6 to 5, but Mitchell's pitching enabled Memphis to triumph in the second, 6 to 2. Camp, former Chick outfielder, playing the same position today for the Barons, besides making a home run, pasted out a single that won the first game. He drove both runs in in the second game.

PEPPER TIES WORLD'S RECORD IN OLYMPIC TRIALS

MONTGOMERY TOURNEY WON BY CRISMAN

Montgomery, Ala., June 7.—(Special.)—For the second year in succession Glen Crisman, brilliant little Selma star, Saturday fought his way through the championship flight of the Montgomery Country club's annual invitation golf tournament to grab off the highest laurels. Glen was faced by Files Crenshaw, of Montgomery, a college team-mate and an opponent who battled just as gamely as Glen, before going out on the seventeenth green, 3 and 1.

The names of Crisman and Crenshaw are famous at many other localities, for Glen was Alabama state champion in 1923, medalist at the 1923 southern amateur and winner of many other minor meets. Files Crenshaw was twice state titleholder, is the present southern intercollegiate champ and Montgomery city golf king. There was class a-plenty in Saturday's final match.

The championship match Saturday was a brilliant victory for Crisman and a nerve-wracking defeat for little Files. It was not upon the seventeenth green that Crenshaw lost the match, but a combination of practically every other green. Files' putts just would not drop Saturday and it is to this that the diminutive star can attribute his defeat. For nine holes Glen was in exactly the same boat, neither golfer running down anything within four feet of the hole.

Sinks Fifteen-Footer.

But with the turn towards home, Crisman's putting blade took on new life and it was a long fifteen-footer on number 14 that marked the turning point of the match. He did not have many more necessarily long putts, usually having a couple for his par.

Files never got his putter to firing but he was coming through beautifully with every other club and scrapping to regain his ground throughout the length of the match. The first half of the finals match was somewhat tame, the match being all square at the turn, Glen having taken a 40 and Files 41. Both missed several short putts for wins.

Their work on the greens on the outgoing journey being the department that boosted their scoring totals, Crisman breezed through the final nine holes in one stroke under par figures, a great 35, his total medal for the match being 75. Crenshaw had a 38 in turning the 18 holes in 79. Crisman had 12 par holes and 1 birdie going one over par on the other five. Crenshaw had 8 pars and 1 birdie.

Was Also Medalist.

The victory of Crisman was unusual in the fact that the Selma star was also the medalist on Thursday, the two honors rarely ever coming in any tournament. Crisman defeated Jack Crenshaw, 6 and 5, on Saturday morning, while Files Crenshaw trounced Charlie Locke, of Birmingham.

In addition to furnishing the winner and medalist in Glen Crisman, Selma, with only fifteen golfers entered in the meet, took away five of the flights. It was an unusual occurrence that the Crisman family was represented three times. Glen won the tourney; his dad, W. O. Crisman, copped the fourth flight and W. O. Crisman, Jr., 9 years of age, outscored several golfers many times his age to get a place in the tenth flight.

Atlanta failed to furnish a flight winner, the others being distributed as follows: Montgomery, 7; Birmingham, 6; Selma, 5, and Columbus, 2.

One hundred and sixty-four golfers entered the tourney, from which ten flights were selected. There were noticeably few defaults, and the matches in the majority of the cases were unusually close. Rain Thursday and Friday slowed the course somewhat, but despite the hard showers the tournament was a success in every way.

The Rules of Golf

—By—

Innis Brown

BALL LODGING.

The rules of golf frequently spoil what might otherwise be a very good golf yarn. For instance, have you ever listened to a tale of a player slicing a ball out of bounds only to have it land in a wagon or motor car from which the driver later threw it out onto the putting green, so that the player got a 2 or a 3 on the hole after all? Good story but impossible according to the rules.

In this particular case, of course, the ball must be counted out of bounds, and another played. In any case, if a ball lands in anything moving, the player must drop another as near as he can judge to where the object was when the ball fell into it, and play from there. There is no penalty. He doesn't have to play the ball from wherever it drops or is thrown from the conveyance nor does he have to chase the conveyance to get it.

Explanations.

A player drives and his ball drops in a caddie bag carried by a caddie for another match on a parallel fairway. Does he have to play it out of the bag?

No. He can drop a ball about where the caddie was when the ball landed.

If a player's ball should happen to strike a spectator and drop in a pocket in his clothes, could the ball be taken from the pocket and dropped?

Yes, preceded, of course, by due apologies to the victim.

If any golf rules puzzle you, write Innis Brown, care of The Constitution Sporting Editor, enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope. He'll clear them for you.

FOR A BETTER SCORE.

One reason for lots of bad golf is the fault of too much tension in the grip starting right from the time the stance is taken and the ball is addressed. Gripping too tightly ties up the muscles of the forearms and destroys flexibility of the wrists, and flexibility of the wrists is essential for anything like a full stroke. In giving an idea of the tension of his grip, Jim Barnes says he grips no tighter with his right hand then he does a pen or pencil in writing. With the left hand the grip is somewhat tighter, but not vise-like by any means.

Top right, Barnes, of Ripley college, Tennessee, who was a dark horse in the pole vault event. He cleared the bar at a mark well over 12 feet. U. S. OLYMPIC HOPES REST IN GIANT COLLEGIANS

Purpose of Olympiads Defeated

BY WALTER CAMP.
(Special Correspondent of The Constitution.)

New York, June 7.—The Olympic games of 1924, like every modern Olympiad that has gone before, is defeating the main purpose that Baron de Coubertin had in mind when he revived the ancient Greek event, namely, the cementing of friendships among nations.

Already the 1924 games have produced more friction than perfect amity from now on could possibly overcome. But even at this late date, a new and special effort should be made by the Olympic committee of this country to provide, so far as possible, against further clashes. For America is not wholly blameless in the matter.

It is true that in the recent debacle at the rugby football game between the United States and France, the best elements of Paris deplored the hostility to which the Americans were subjected by the hot-blooded French spectators. But one must bear in mind what led up to this condition, for it is a condition, not a theory, that confronts us.

Started With Skating.

The trouble began back in the skating contests, when there was a difference of opinion between the French committee—which, after all, has the games in charge—and the American representatives, as to the presence of an additional trainer.

The trouble grew in the dispute over the adoption of an American-made tennis ball.

Fuel was added to the flames by the objection of our rugby team to the referee originally selected by the French committee. The manager of the American team was quoted as saying he desired to obtain an official who would be generous in his interpretation of the rules, and would not call penalties for violations unless the violations were flagrant and willful. To this was added a statement attributed to Sam Goodman, the American rugby coach, in which he was made to say, after witnessing the defeat of the Rumanians by the French team:

"The American style of field tackling should break up that French offensive, and even this lightning Jauregguy is liable to slow up after being tackled a few times in rough western style. We hope our strength and tackling will offset any French superiority in science, and with two weeks' practice hope to perfect our team work to cope with the brilliant French attack."

Seek to Use Force.

Putting the two statements together, many Frenchmen deduced that the Americans were seeking to bull their way to victory through brute force, and that they were looking for a referee who would let them do it without penalties. That wasn't true, but that was what a great many Frenchmen thought, and viewing it in the light of the other difficulties that had gone before, they decided the Americans weren't good sportsmen.

"If the soil is made ripe, the harvest will be reaped—" and that has been the story of the Olympic contest thus far.

The United States, with its record of past victories and its astounding power developed for this year, can certainly afford to assume the position of a generous competitor, accept rules and conditions as they find them, and endeavor in every way to impress the foreign nations with their sportsmanship and generosity, which would do America much more good in the long run than a whole string of victories.

In this connection, the Americans might take a lesson from the so-called "heathen Chinee." The Chinese soccer team, on a recent trip through Australia, made 63 goals to their opponents' 54. Yet they won only eight matches and lost nine. The reason? They were such good sportsmen that they refused to take scores from penalty tries awarded them. They didn't win so many games—but they won a lot of admirers.

Marietta Wins From Buford, 6-4

BY JOHN CROUCH.

Marietta, Ga., June 7.—(Special.) Marietta had little trouble in hitting Andy Chamber's offerings in the game this afternoon which resulted in a 6 to 4 win over Buford. Lefy Willis, on the mound for Marietta, was invincible after the first inning, when two hits, one error, and a throw to third which hit the base runner scored two runs.

Marietta jumped on Chambers in the fifth inning for a total of four hits and scored three runs. Their first run came in the opening frame when Barnes doubled to deep left and scored on Bryant's triple to center. Another run was annexed in the sixth and seventh due to consecutive safe hits and excellent base running.

Settle and Chambers led the batting attack for Buford with three safeties out of four trips up, while Wall carried off batting honors for the locals with an equal number.

Tigers Win Slub-Fest.

Detroit, June 7.—In a twelve inning game, featured by heavy hitting by both teams, Detroit won the first game of the series from Philadelphia, 11 to 10. Welch's home run in the ninth after two men had walked tied the score. Fothergill's double, two walks and Blue's single brought the winning score for the Tigers in the twelfth.

Reds Win First of Series.

Philadelphia, June 7.—Cincinnati won the opening game of the series from Philadelphia today when a fourth inning rally netted nine runs and gave the visitors a 10 to 4 victory. For three innings the contest was a happy one for the local fans and when the fourth inning started the home team was holding to a 2 to 0 lead over the invaders from Ohio. Then in the fourth the Reds opened a bombardment on Carlson that chased him from the hill and sewed up the ball game.

COLE '8' SETS FASTEST PACE FOR SWEEPSTAKES

As an aftermath of the Indianapolis 500-mile race comes a statement from Chester S. Ricker, director of timing and scoring at the Indianapolis sweepstakes classic, which shows how the start of the race was so unusually fast, and how Joe Boyer in his original car established a record for the first lap of the race which will probably stand for some time. According to Ricker, the first lap of the race, which was paced by a big yellow Cole roadster, was also the fastest pace-lap ever attempted on the Indianapolis oval.

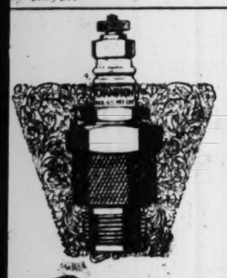

"In all my experience as timer," says Ricker, "there has never been a faster or better get-away than was made by the field of cars at the 12th 500-mile race, and a large share of the credit belongs to the Cole pace-maker driven by Lou Pettijohn.

"I watched with particular interest the pace-lap, as I was interested in how much speed the Cole would show on balloon tires. As is customary, the first mile was comparatively slow, as it is necessary to get all the cars bunched as nearly as possible before they come into the home stretch.

"Lou Pettijohn, with Theo E. Meyers as passenger, did the last mile in 45 seconds, according to our records, which is at the rate of 80 miles an hour. What was even more interesting was the fact that the Cole was stopped on the apron in front of the pits before the south entrance to the infield was reached.

"It surely speaks well for the performance of balloon tires that not only was such high speed attained with a stock car, but also that the Cole could be so easily handled after it crossed the tape at such a high rate of speed.

"The Cole in my estimation set the fastest pace the Indianapolis Motor Speedway has ever seen. The speed with which the Cole brought the cars down the straightway in front of the stands unquestionably accounts in a large measure for the record-breaking speed of the first official lap won by Boyer."

Chandler First To Announce Line of New Models for 1925

Cleveland, Ohio, June 7.—The Chandler Motor Car company today announced its 1925 models, leading the field of manufacturers in producing its new cars and placing them on the market.

Balloon tires are standard equipment on the 1925 Chandler, and four-wheel brakes are optional at a slightly higher price.

Many other changes have been made in chassis and bodies, the Chandler presented today being the result of eighteen months' development.

The Pike's Peak motor, which has made the Chandler famous the world over for performance powers, as at-clashless, noiseless, positive change-speed unit, proved by thousands of owners, has brought the subject of transmission improvements into national prominence, and many manufacturers are now experimenting with new methods of changing gears.

True Balloon Tires Used.

The balloon tires adopted by the Chandler are the true balloon type, super-size, and in combination with Chandler's scientific spring suspension, provide marvellously easy riding over even the roughest roads. Ease of tested by its victories and records in officially observed hill climbs and acceleration tests, has been made flawlessly smooth by recent refinements, and its performance ability is now more pronounced than ever before.

The traffic transmission, which, though less than one year in use as an exclusive Chandler unit, has established itself as one of the most successful innovations ever made in automobile construction, is a feature of all the new models. The success of the steering is assured through the use of anti-friction bearings in the steering gear. Standard cord tires may still be obtained at the purchaser's option.

The four-wheel brakes offered as optional on the 1925 Chandler were designed by Chandler engineers, and, like the Pike's Peak motor and the traffic transmission, are made at the Chandler factory.

The brakes are mechanically operated, and the arrangement is so simple that the entire system, front and rear, requires only nine lubricating points. The front brakes are equalized with each other, and the rear brakes likewise; in addition, the equalizing system correctly proportions the braking effort between the front and the rear brakes.

Many New Features.

Other new features of the 1925 Chandler are as follows:

Pressure system of chassis lubrication.

New head lamps with latest improved combination of lens and reflectors.

Improved panels and instrument boards.

New type gas and spark levers, compact and neat.

Larger and easier-operated cowl ventilator.

Longer front seat cushions in touring cars.

New carburetor, giving quicker starting and better efficiency at all speeds.

Larger vacuum gas tank, insuring ample fuel supply for long climbs at slow speeds.

Larger accessory shaft drive sprocket, giving longer life to the front drive-chain.

Universal battery connections, permitting the use of any make of battery without change of terminals.

Improved type of piston (cost iron), connecting rods and piston pins, retarding natural wear and promoting silence.

Honed cylinders, producing a smooth finish ordinarily obtained only by 2,000 to to 5,000 miles of driving.

Increased oil pressure for motor lubrication.

Improved oil pump and circulation system.

Details of New Brakes.

The four-wheel brake used on the Chandler was adopted only after eighteen months' tests by the experimental engineers. All types and designs were tried out until a brake could be so perfected as to meet the rigid requirements of the makers.

With the traffic transmission the Chandler already had a device that would control the speed of the car on long descents as surely and as simply as any braking system, and even with the four-wheel brakes the descent of these grades in second gear will still be the more advantageous way.

The new brakes are of the external contracting type, virtually a duplicate of the rear wheel brakes, in which there has been no change.

The entire brake assembly has been built upon the front axle I-beam; that is, there are no operating shafts bracketed to the frame, and the brakes therefore are easier in operation and without possibility of cramping action.

The location of the king-pin, with relation to the wheel, is such as to give the greatest ease in steering and the least wear on the tires. The universal ball joint, which is located exactly in the center line of the king-pin, operates in a constant bath of oil, and the operating shaft joints are both dust and water-proof.

CHRYSLER PROMOTES FIELDS AND ZEDER

Detroit, June 7.—Announcement is made by Walter P. Chrysler, president and chairman of the Maxwell-Chrysler-Chalmers board of directors, that J. E. Fields has been elected vice president in charge of the corporations' sales, and that Fred M. Zeder has been elected vice president in charge of engineering. Mr. Fields has been general sals manager and Mr. Zeder chief engineer.

"The remarkable abilities shown by Mr. Zeder and Mr. Fields since they assumed charge of the engineering and sales departments of the entire corporation five months ago is responsible for this promotion," says Mr. Chrysler.

To the industry, generally, the rapid promotion of the two men will be important news, though it has been freely predicted by Maxwell-Chrysler executives for some time, owing to the outstanding improvements, particularly in the Maxwell division, in sales, merchandising and engineering, which the two have sponsored and carried out.

Mr. Fields joined Maxwell 18 months ago as a sales director. He was chosen to take charge of the corporations' combined sales departments following the sudden death of Arthur E. Barker in January. For 16 years, beginning with the old Thomas-Detroit company, he has been intimately associated with the problems of motor car distribution—as dealer, territorial manager and sales manager. It is believed that he knows more automobile dealers and distributors than any other man in the industry, as well as having an intimate first-hand knowledge of their problems.

Mr. Zeder's motor car engineering experience has been of similar duration. For years he has been internationally recognized by the automotive industry as one of its outstanding engineering authorities.

LUTHERAN OFFICIAL TO VISIT ATLANTA

Rev. S. S. Waltz, D. D., executive secretary of the National Lutheran Brotherhood, with headquarters in Chicago, and one of the most widely known and popular officials of the United Lutheran church in America, will visit Atlanta the latter part of this month and will be the special guest of the Men's Brotherhood of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer at its meeting June 23.

NEW BLOOD INJECTED INTO MARMON FORCES

G. M. Williams, former president of the Wire Wheel Corporation of America, has just been announced as president of the Nordyke & Marmon company, of Indianapolis, manufacturers of the Marmon car. Mr. Williams for six years general manager of the Dayton-Wright plant of the General Motors corporation, and who has to his credit many striking achievements in the industry, brings with him a strong financial backing and a comprehensive manufacturing experience.

Mr. Williams takes up the active reins in place of Walter C. Marmon, who becomes chairman of the board of directors. Howard C. Marmon, designer of the Marmon car, retains his active position as vice-president and chief engineer. Other executive heads, including A. R. Heiskell, E. S. Gorrell, H. L. Purdy and H. G. Shafer, remain in their present capacities.

"With the marked increase in the volume of our business we have realized the necessity of additions to our executive organization to handle the added burden," said W. C. Marmon, in announcing the change, "and we feel we are very fortunate in securing Mr. Williams. He is without doubt a strikingly successful executive. He comes with us at a time when we are enjoying a very comfortable business and our plans for the future call for greatly increased activity and expansion.

"In fact, the new development in the Marmon program follows the greatest period of sales success in the history of the company. Since the first of the year the Marmon factory has not only operated on full schedule, but has been compelled to work nights, holidays and Sundays to keep production at a pace with sales. Even this overtime work now finds Marmon far behind on its orders for shipment this spring."

Appoints Carl Sherer.

G. M. Williams, president of Nordyke & Marmon company, has appointed Carl J. Sherer, formerly secretary and treasurer of the Dayton-Wright company, as his special assistant in the management and financial control of the company.

"In securing the services of Mr. Sherer, Nordyke & Marmon company obtained one of the best brains ever developed by the General Motors corporation in matters of financial control."

Mr. Sherer is a graduate of the University of Dayton, Dayton, Ohio. He was treasurer of the Speedwell Motor Car company from 1909 to 1914. At the time the United States entered the world war, he was treasurer of the Dayton Metal Products company, war munitions manufacturers. Later during the war he held the responsible position of treasurer of the Dayton-Wright Airplane company. Mr. Sherer handled these two positions simultaneously.

Auto Men Frolic At Brookhaven on June Eighteen

BY C. V. HOHENSTEIN.

Wylie West, general chairman on arrangements, announced recently that plans had been completed for the annual summer outing of the Atlanta Automobile association to be staged Wednesday, June 18, at Brookhaven Country club, and that indications point to the biggest and best summer outing ever staged by the association. Tickets for the event are now on sale at the executive secretary's office, 412 Gould building, and reservations can be made by writing or phoning, Walnut 4192, C. V. Hohenstein. Gentleman's ticket, $2; lady's ticket, $1.50.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors it was unanimously recommended that the members of the association close their places of business at 1 p. m. on June 18, in order that all the employees may have an opportunity to attend the outing. A number of the members have signified their intention of purchasing complimentary tickets for their employees, as in years past.

A golf tournament will be staged during the day for those who prefer this kind of sport. Individual and team championship matches are being arranged by Clarence Knowles, care Martin-Nash Motor company, telephone Ivy 3950. All who wish to compete in these events should get in touch with Mr. Knowles immediately. Two beautiful silver trophies will be awarded as prizes, in addition to a number of other prizes which are being donated for the occasion.

Other sports and events are being arranged for those who do not enter the golf matches, including foot races, tennis and bathing, the beautiful lake at Brookhaven being open all day to the members and their employees. Suitable prizes will be awarded to the winners.

At 7 p. m. an elaborate course dinner will be served in the banquet hall of the club house. During the service of the dinner, Fat Elrod, chairman of the entertainment committee, will introduce a number of entertainment features, which will include vocal numbers, dancing, etc.

Immediately following the dinner, the winners of the various sport events will be awarded prizes, after which the festivities will be concluded by a dance. A ten-piece orchestra has been engaged to furnish the music during the serving of the dinner, and for the dance.

FRANKLIN WINS HONORS EL PASO HERALD TOUR

A Franklin Demi-Sedan took first place both in economy and endurance in the gruelling 12-day, 1,900-mile road run staged by The El Paso Herald under the sanction of the Automobile Association of America, which started at El Paso on May 17, and ended there on May 28.

This run was over Texas, New Mexico and Arizona roads, through desert wastes, mountains and mountain canyons. Part of the route was over roads described by experienced drivers as "the worst in the world."

Franklin participated in this run with 14 makes of cars, divided into classifications according to price. Average speed required was regulated on the same basis, 14 miles per hour for lowest class, 16 and 18 for next two classes and 20 miles per hour for top class in which Franklin competed.

Triumphing easily in its own price class, Franklin out-performed a number of cars in lower classifications from the standpoint of endurance and defeated all cars in economy above the classification including only the smallest cars.

On certain parts of the run where second and low gear was required for hours at a stretch in mountain climbing, the pressure air-cooling system of the Franklin demonstrated great efficiency, bringing the car through on schedule where others were penalized for radiators boiling dry and for failing to make the required time.

The Franklin, one of two closed cars entered and the only one to win, was a stock car. To enter this contest, it was driven through from Syracuse to El Paso, a distance of 2,700 miles, in nine days' time, part of it across Missouri roads which were at their worst owing to spring rains.

The winning car, which finished the run in excellent condition, will be driven back to Syracuse, stopping at principle cities en route to allow inspection by the public.

PREVENT TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS WITH UNIFORMED MEN

Syracuse, N. Y., June 7.—"To prevent violation of law is a greater work than to arrest and punish violators," says H. H. Franklin, president of the Franklin Automobile company. "For that reason, I believe that all motor traffic officers in all communities should appear in uniform and patrol the streets and highways openly. Their presence would have the desired effect of discouraging motorists from traffic and speed ordinances and prove a much greater measure of safety than is the case where such officers are dressed in citizen's clothes and by surprise methods apprehend people after they have violated the law.

"An efficient fire department is better indicated by the number of fires it doesn't have than the number of fires it puts out. There are fewer speed law violations where traffic officers are in evidence."

Essex Completes Non-Stop Run on Southeast Roads

E. H. Bacon, Jacksonville Distributor, Promotes Grueling Test of Essex Six.

Driving an Essex Six touring car, E. H. Bacon, president of the Bacon Motors company, of Jacksonville, has just successfully completed a gruelling non-stop run from Jacksonville to Savannah, Augusta, Asheville, Knoxville, Chattanooga, Atlanta and Macon to Jacksonville.

The distance covered was 1,267 miles, with a gasoline consumption of fifty-nine gallons. The total driving time, according to official reports, was 41 and 6-10 hours.

Mr. Bacon stated that the route was selected to provide roads of every type with a liberal portion of bad clay, mountain and sand. "While those of us who come in daily contact with the performance of the Essex are thoroughly conversant with its remarkable stamina, economy and ability to make time over any type of road, the trip was a revelation. No better performance, no greater economy and no better time could have been expected of any car," stated Mr. Bacon, who passed through Atlanta on the last lap of the remarkable run Thursday night.

Mr. Bacon is head of one of the oldest and best known automobile distributing concerns in the southeast, and is an enthusiastic motorist.

He is well known in Atlanta among automobile men, and has a number of business and social friends here, as well as a number of relatives.

ATLANTA FORD DEALERS OBSERVE TRUCK WEEK

Atlanta's Ford populace will be well represented Wednesday afternoon when Atlanta and Decatur Ford dealers observe Commercial Truck week with a downtown street parade, embellished with flying streamers and enlivened by the music of a brass band.

The occasion is to emphasize the motor truck as a means to quick and economical transportation. Many of the newest styles and types of truck bodies will be on display.

The Fordson tractor will occupy a prominent place in the parade, one being used with a trailer to carry the band and others will be shown equipped for industrial use.

It is expected that a large number of prominent Ford fleet owners in Atlanta will participate and many novel displays are in preparation.

This, it is said, will be the largest parade of its kind ever attempted in the south and the equipment used will run well over half a million dollars.

The various divisions of the parade will form near the Ford assembly plant on Ponce de Leon avenue, and the line of march will be out Ponce de Leon to Peachtree, down Peachtree and Whitehall to Trinity and thence back to Ponce de Leon, where the parade will proceed to Decatur. A detachment of motorcycle police will act as escorts.

Any truck owner wishing to arrange to enter one or more of their cars are requested to get in touch with W. A. Sperber, of the Ford Motor company.

According to the new flag card compiled by the national flag conference, the pledge to the flag is: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and to the republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

BALLOON TIRES NOW STANDARD WITH REO

After a period of six months during which genuine balloon tires have been selective equipment on Reo passenger cars at an additional cost, the Reo Motor Car company has now announced that the balloons will be standard equipment on passenger cars in its line at no extra charge. List prices on all models remain unchanged.

"Before we offered genuine balloons as selective equipment," says H. T. Thomas, vice president and chief engineer of the Reo Motor company, "tests on factory-owned cars and in our laboratories had convinced us that these tires, as applied to Reo, were right from standpaints of economy, safety and comfort.

"We did not wish to press the public into accepting this equipment until it was generally known—not just among men in the industry—that balloon tires were the next logical step in automobile progress, however, and for this reason we left the choice between high-pressure and low-pressure tires to the buyers. Throughout the six months we have strongly urged the use of balloons, and we are now convinced that motorists are solidly for them. From now on every Reo passenger model coming off the line will wear balloon tires.

"It might be well to explain why Reo cooperated with tire manufacturers by adopting a standard size as proposed by one of the leading manufacturers. This size, 6.20 tires on 20-inch wheels, is standard, not in the sense that it is one of the 'twenty-three standards' which have been the nightmare of the industry during the winter and spring, but in that it is one of the five sizes recommended by the engineers who perfected genuine balloon tires for motor car use.

"The size to be selected from these five actual standards is determined by the weight of the car, 6.20 being the one adapted to Reo models both open and closed.

"More important is the fact that through some good fortune Reo design is admirably suited to the use of low-pressure tires. Chassis features that have been used by Reo for a number of years served to give that complete balance that is most desirable in cars fitted with genuine balloon tires.

"A low center of gravity and a nearly straight-line drive resulting from Reo's famous double frame construction are responsible for the ideal manner in which genuine balloon tires adapt themselves to Reo models.

"The Reo steering mechanism is exactly fitted to function correctly with genuine balloon tires and this together with our spring suspension gives us still another mechanical feature which makes balloon tire equipment readily adaptable to Reo design.

"Reo success with genuine balloon tires plus public demand for this equipment have prompted us to drop everything but low-pressure tires for our passenger cars. This we believe to be one of the most important steps in our twenty years of motor car building.

"Upon checking over our sales records we find that the demand for genuine balloon tire equipment on our passenger car models has been so overwhelming and so far above the demand for the regular pneumatics, that the adoption of balloons is the only logical step for us to take."

NEW FORD DEALER APPOINTED HERE

Hall Davis, Well-Known Employee of Ford Plant, Given Franchise in City of Atlanta.

The Hall Davis Motor company, newly appointed Ford dealers, have opened their place of business on Whitehall street between Park and Gordon streets.

Hall Davis, head of the new company, has been connected with the local Ford factory organization for a number of years. He began nearly ten years ago with a humble position in the office, and has successfully held a number of positions during this time, each of which was a promotion.

His duties have familiarized him with almost every department of the local Ford organization, particularly of the office and sales department. Nearly six years of his connection with Ford have been spent in the various positions of the sales department.

Being thoroughly familiar with Ford products, Ford policies and the most efficient and effective sales and service methods of Ford dealer organizations, it is freely predicted by his friends that Mr. Davis will find his new venture a most profitable one.

Carefully Chosen Help.

"We plan to build our business upon the basis of a more efficient and more effective service to the public, in every department. We have selected the heads of our various departments for their particular aptitude and experience in the line in which they are placed in our organization.

"In selecting our location we took into consideration the accessibility from and the nearness to the downtown business section, and the large area and number of car owners in the West End and south side sections, for which we would be the most conveniently located," stated Mr. Davis.

Mr. Davis has lived in Atlanta a number of years and is a graduate of Emory. His work in the sales, welfare and efficiency departments of the local Ford organization greatly strengthen his college training for the work which he is now undertaking.

Department Managers.

Weyman W. Jones, service manager, has been connected with the mechanical end of the Ford business for ten years. Several years were spent in the Ford assembly plant, the remainder of his experience being with Ford dealer service organizations, with the exception of a few months spent in the sales department. For six years he has had charge of the service department of a local Ford dealer, and is well known to a number of local Ford owners.

A. B. Williams, parts manager, has been in charge of Ford parts departments for the past seven years, though none of his experience has been in Atlanta. The work of Mr. Davis with the Ford organization brought him in close touch with the efficiency of the various parts departments of dealers in the Atlanta territory and it is significant that he chose Mr. Williams to take charge of his own parts department.

T. R. Knight, office manager, is a graduate of the commerce and business department of the University of Alabama, and has been connected with Ford dealer organizations since completing this four years course of training. Like Mr. Williams, he was selected from an organization out of the city, and bears the reputation of being one of the most efficient and competent office managers in the Atlanta territory.

MINIATURE BUICK PLANT WILL TOUR COUNTRY

A force of Buick workmen and a lecturer will be sent on a 9,000-mile tour of the leading cities of the United States. This tour, which will reach from coast to coast, is for the purpose of demonstrating to citizens, en route, not only the careful manner in which the Buick car is built, but the fact that local branches and distributors carry complete line of parts from which a Buick car can be assembled.

The necessary tools and equipment is carried from town to town on a G. M. C. 2-ton truck, which is especially constructed so that a hinged platform about 15x30 is available for exhibition purposes. On this platform the car is built and driven away by means of a runway to the street, thence to the Buick show rooms, where it is placed on exhibition. The exhibition is drawing thousands of people wherever it is shown.

MATHEWS WILL RACE FOR DEKALB OFFICE

Decatur, Ga., June 7.—(Special.)—A. L. Mathews, who has had business connections in Atlanta and here practically all his life, has announced his candidacy for tax collector of DeKalb county, subject to the primary which will be held in the fall. Other candidates are expected to enter.

Mr. Mathews is prominent in fraternal circles. He has been identified in DeKalb county politics for a number of years and is expected to make a good race for the place, his friends declare.

CHEVROLET CONTEST AWARDS ANNOUNCED

One of the first prizes for dealers was won by S. W. Fleming, Thomasville, Ga.; while first, third and fifth prizes, respectively, in the salesmen's class, were won by L. D. Robertson, Georgia Auto Exchange, Columbus; William E. Turner, Faver Motor Co., La Grange, and Henry C. Sparks, connected with S. W. Fleming at Thomasville.

Thirty-nine dealers and 100 retail salesmen throghout the United States are announced as winners in the big $20,000 national mid-winter prize contest conducted by the Chevrolet Motor company. The checking of the sales records of all those competing has just been completed, and within a few days each of the winners will be notified officially by the company as to his standing in the contest and invited to make his selection of the handsome prizes to be awarded.

Under the rules of the contest, these dealers and salesmen, in the heart of the winter months with snow and cold and bad roads and buying apathy to confront them, stepped out and beat their preceding summer's sales records—some records to beat and some "stepping" to beat them—and now it is free trips to Detroit and gold watches and chests of table silver for the ones who not only dared to do, but succeeded in doing it.

Nineteen dealers, each representing a different sales zone, won the grand prize—a return trip, in June, all expenses paid, to the Chevrolet headquarters and parts plants in Detroit, and the big assembly plant at Flint, Mich., including various sightseeing tours in and around Detroit and a day's visit, by steamer, to Put-in-Bay, Lake Erie, the scene of Perry's famous naval victory. The top-notcher in this division is John L. Randel & Co., Chillicothe, Texas, who scored an increase of 1,166 per cent over his summer sales record.

Twenty dealers, one to a zone, won second prize—the choice of a $150 17-jeweled solid gold watch engraved with the record of the winner's achievement, or a 140-piece silver service.

Similar prizes will be awarded to the 21 successful contestants winning first position in the retail salesmen's division. The high man here is Vance Kearns, connected with Carpenter Motor company, at Durham, N. C. Kearn's sales showed an average monthly increase of $6,180.

Second, third, fourth and fifth position among the retail salesmen was won by 21, 21, 19 and 18 contestants, respectively. Each of these 79 lucky ones will be given the choice of a $50 17-jeweled solid gold watch, suitably engraved, or a 39-piece silver service.

In the dealers' class two of the winners showed an increase over their summer sales records of more than 1000 per cent; two made over 400 per cent increase; five over 200 per cent; and seven more than 100 per cent. The retail salesmen's class showed many winners averaging a monthly increase, for the mid-winter months, of $5,000 or more.

FIRESTONE MANAGER WRITES ON BALLOONS

BY W. C. HARRIS.
Manager Atlanta Branch Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

In view of the fact that Firestone pioneered, developed, tested and placed on the market, the first genuine, full sized balloon tire, we are often questioned on the principles involved in its construction. Motorists generally are interested in lower air pressure, but few know why gum-dipping is essential or how widely the full size balloon varies from the half-balloon.

The full-size balloon, which fits smaller rims, reduces air pressure by half, and increases air capacity in practically the same ratio. Insisting on full-size balloon tires means that you will get full advantages of balloon betterments in comfort, safety, car-conservation, mileage and fuel economy.

Gum-dipping means that every cord is insulated and impregnated with rubber. It is the process which first made the large size balloon practical for any type of service. It is one of the most important betterments in the history of tire making.

While there have been volumes written and published during the past few months about the balloon tire and many explanations and definitions have been given to the public, we find the fundamental principles still remain as outlined in the first article published on balloon tires by J. E. Hale, engineer of the Firestone Tire & Rubber company.

Mr. Hale pointed out that the fundamentals of this movement to ride on low air pressure were comparatively simple and told automobile and tire engineers that to have greater cushioning for comfort and protection against vibration from the car, a combination of low air pressure and large area of contact must be provided by changing construction so methods would be employed that would provide necessary flexibility without impairing wear and service of the tire.

It is well for car owners to remember this information was not given out by Mr. Hale until after over two million miles of test had been made and tire construction developed which had been put on the market and remains the same today.

From the simple principles involved it will be seen that the large cross section tire called the balloon, when run at low air pressure, must withstand a much greater vertical deflection than the old high pressure tire. It was found that tires built according to old methods generally failed in service prematurely from two causes. First, separation of tread and carcass or between plies. Second, localization of stresses about half way up the side wall would generally cause fabric failure on inside plies.

It was necessary to make use of a thinner side wall construction which would lessen the effect of this flexing action when tires were run at low pressure and that this could be done and still have the tires sufficiently strong to stand up in service because the bursting stresses on the carcass would be so much lower.

These principles set forth in the first article written by Firestone last June have now been further proven by thousands of owners who have equipped their cars with Firestone genuine balloon tires and have them in service many months. Twenty-one well-known automobile manufacturers have also placed their stamp of approval on genuine balloon tires after their own rigid tests and are now furnishing them as original equipment.

We feel that these tests and this approval should be proof to any car owner that he is not buying an experiment in Firestone genuine full size balloon gum-dipped tires and that the original principles outlined by Mr. Hale a year ago have stood the test of time.

Offering to answer any reasonable question telephoned to its office, a firm dealing in general information is said to have set up business in New York city.

AUTO ASSOCIATION PLANS ANNUAL OUTING

Plans have been completed for the annual summer outing of the Atlanta Automobile association to be staged Wednesday, June 18, at Brookhaven Country club, according to Wylie West, general chairman on arrangements.

"This year's outing," Mr. West says, "will far outstrip its predecessors in attendance, variety of entertainment and sport features." Tickets have been placed on sale and reservations can be made by writing or phoning C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary, Walnut 4192.

Directors of the association have unanimously recommended that members close their places of business at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of June 18, so that all employees may have an opportunity to attend the outing.

Clarence Knowles, of the Martin-Nash Motors company, is arranging a golf tournament for those who prefe this kind of sport. Individual an team championship matches will b staged. Two beautiful silver trophie as well as other prizes will b awarded.

During the afternoon a number o athletic events will be staged for thos who do not care to play golf, th events including tennis, foot race swimming contests, etc. Suitabl prizes will be awarded to the winner The lake will be open all day fo bathers.

An elaborate course dinner will b served in the banquet hall of the clu house at 7 o'clock, during which number of entertainment features wil be introduced by "Fat" Elrod, chair man of the entertainment committee Immediately following the dinne prizes will be awarded to winners o the various events. The Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, made up of about 200 representative retail merchants and allied industries, will stage its last general summer membership meeting Tuesday night at 6:15 o'clock at the Cecil hotel. Nearly 25 of the senior retail merchants of the association, whose connection with the retail industry in Atlanta extends over a period of 35 years or more, will be honor guests at this meeting.

A partial list of the senior merchants follow: John A. Aldredge, Frank Beck, George Beck, C. J. Bloodworth, M. M. Davies, Beaumont Davison, W. O. Foote, J. Frohsin, J. J. Haverty, Joseph Jacobs, Henry S. Johnson, Charles J. Kamper, G. E. King, H. A. Maier, R. E. O'Donnelly, W. W. Orr, F. J. Paxon and W. J. Wood.

An invitation has been sent out to all younger retail merchants of the association, their employees, department managers and assistants to attend, and indications point to one of the largest gatherings in the history of the association, officials state.

W. W. Orr, past president of the association, will deliver the feature address on behalf of the senior merchants, followed by Clarence Haverty, past vice president of the association, who will respond on behalf of the younger merchants. Beaumont Davison and several other senior merchants will deliver short talks, touching on many incidents connected with the development of the retail trade of Atlanta.

A special musical program, which includes an orchestra, the Georgia Railway and Power company quartet and other features, is being arranged.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

Some of the hardware dealers of Atlanta are sending large quantities of clay furnaces to different northern cities. These furnaces are ordered by persons in the north who employ colored women who have recently come from southern communities. Many of these state in their communications they do not know what a clay furnace is, but that the colored woman in their employ recommends that a clay furnace be purchased in order that she may iron the clothing for the household with the facilities she is accustomed to. In these homes undoubtedly there are gas or electric irons. But these women are calling for the kind of equipment they are accustomed to using. A large percentage of those applying for work at the Atlanta Urban League Free Employment agency are just as crude in their training as this clay furnace situation indicates. In order that this condition may not continue the urban league, one of the member organizations of the Community Chest, has established and is operating an opportunity school where women and men may secure training in the new and better methods of preparing and serving food, nursing, sewing and general housework. This school is located at 125 Auburn avenue. If there are employers in the city who have persons in their employ whose service can be made more satisfactory to the employer and more productive to the employee by securing definite and specific training we will be glad to arrange classes at satisfactory hours to train such persons without any cost to the employer or to the employee. Any person interested is asked to call Walnut 4118.

The Atlanta Educational Festival association had a most successful outing at Lakewood park Monday, June 2. The gross receipts were around $3,800. When the actual expenses have been deducted the net income will be given to worthy charitable and educational institutions of the city of Atlanta.

The A. M. E. ministers will hold their regular meeting in the tea room of the Atlanta Urban League Opportunity school Tuesday, June 10. The Urban League Opportunity school was indorsed by the Baptist Ministers' union at its weekly meeting June 3. This meeting was held in the tea room of the Atlanta Urban League Opportunity school. All of the clergymen in attendance upon this meeting were most enthusiastic in their praise and commendation of the work that is being done by the Atlanta Urban league and of the potential good to result from the establishment of this new enterprise in training prospective employees to render efficient service and thereby increase their economic worth to themselves and their communities.

The closing exercises of the various institutions during the week were highly inspirational as well as informational. All of these institutions are manned by consecrated men and women who are giving the youth of the race a clearer interpretation and vision of the place of service and responsibility awaiting them in the larger world about us "to help bring His kingdom upon the earth." The bulletin congratulates all of those who received their diplomas as an evidence of satisfactory completion of the prescribed course and hopes they will soon find their place in the scheme of human effort where they can render the largest possible service.

Atlanta University Summer school opens on Monday. While intended primarily for present students of Atlanta university, applications can be considered from others who are properly qualified. Information can be obtained by telephoning Main 4200. The members of the regular teaching force who will act as instructors for the summer school are Webster, Adams, Howe, Davidson, Harper and Zimmerman. Professor G. Floyd is the director.

TWO SCHOOLS TIED IN CLEAN-UP DRIVE

Joel Chandler Harris and Ira Street elementary schools tied for first prize in Atlanta's "Clean-up, Paint-up Keep-up" campaign, it was announced Saturday by Fred Cooledge, Jr., executive secretary of the campaign committee.

A staff of judges has been grading 63,000 papers submitted by school children in the contest ever since its close more than a month ago. The tremendous volume of work, Mr. Cooledge said, delayed the decision.

Mr. Cooledge declared that the reports proved this year's campaign to have been the most successful in the city's history. In 1922 school children returned 23,000 reports on clean-up work and in 1923 returned 34,000 reports. This year they returned 63,000 out of the 67,000 sent out from headquarters. The reports include all city and county public schools and a number of private schools.

The James L. Key and Center Hill schools both received honorable mention.

Rosserville school led all county schools, with R. L. Hope school second.

Gray Street school won the loving cup awarded to the leader among the negro schools, scoring the highest percentage of all city and county schools with 82.2 per cent. Edwin P. Johnson and William H. Crogman schools also received honorable mention.

The plans for making "clean-up, paint-up" work a permanent campaign in Atlanta have not been abandoned, Mr. Cooledge said Saturday, and an effort is being made by the campaign committee to establish a central office to cooperate with other civic organizations which are to include "clean-up, paint-up" work in the regular programs of civic improvement.

Sweetwater Camp Attracts Lovers of Great Outdoors

BY L. O. MOSELEY.

Hundreds of Atlantans, lovers of the great outdoors, are enjoying week-ends, holidays and "off" days at Sweetwater camp, a new outing place, just 45 minutes' drive from Atlanta. The camp is under the management of W. W. Summerlin, prominent Harolson county citizen and former member of the state senate.

The new camp is ideally situated, with all modern conveniences, ample bathing facilities, boating, dancing, fishing and snug little cottages equipped with every convenience for camping. Persons who desire may have their meals prepared by chefs who have spent many years in preparing wholesome and dainty food for campers. Fresh fish, game and vegetables of every kind produced by farmers near the camp are included in the regular menu.

Phonographs and pianos provide music for guests, and a pavilion ample for scores of dancers, with specially-constructed floors, is available at all times for dancing. The main dining room, adjoining the pavilion, is artistically decorated and has the atmosphere of real resort life.

The camp is one of the most beautiful spots in the south and, under direction of Mr. Summerlin, who has had many years of experience in similiar camps and resorts, offers every attractive feature to persons who enjoy outings of one day or the entire summer.

Beautiful Spot.

Nestling snugly at the foot of the low mountain range, running along Sweetwater river at a point where the stream breaks into the verdant valley of the Chattahoochee, is located Sweetwater camp—a brilliant masterpiece in nature's gallery. The natural beauty has been greatly enhanced through the enterprise of the camp's management. Inviting cottages dotting the mountain slopes include every modern luxury an convenience, no expense having been spared to make the camp a place of rest for the tired business man, recreation for the brain-fagged, and a haven for those pleasure-bent mortals who appreciate and enjoy wholesome outdoor life.

Sweetwater cottages are not of the ordinary, make-shift type. They are substantial, comfortable summer homes—constructed with an eye to fresh air and cleanliness, with screens and bath rooms, drop curtain and false partition enabling each cottage to comfortably take care of one to 20 persons. Running water and electric lights are other conveniences for vacationists.

Other visitors are housed in stoutly constructed tents with board floors, screened walls and doors, electric lights and pure spring water.

The location of the camp, only 17 miles from Atlanta and reached by roads easily traversible in all weather conditions, makes it an ideal place for the business man to send his family for the hot months. He can motor to and from his summer home in 40 minutes, an exhilarating drive through some of the most magnificent scenic beauty in the south. To reach the camp one leaves Atlanta by way of West View cemetery, out Gordon road to the river at Garrett's bridge and thence to the camp along a route posted with signs pointing the route.

The region in which the camp is located may be compared favorably to the Thousand Islands region of the St. Lawrence. Hundreds of verdant islands dot the river where the rapids plunge from the dam that furnished power for a cotton factory which was destroyed by Sherman's army in 1864. The factory has never been rebuilt and its ruins are interesting to visit. Other equally as interesting spots are within easy walking distance of the camp.

Four miles of deep eddy water give almost seaside opportunities for boating, swimming, fishing and all aquatic sports and diversions.

The high altitude is as invigorating and healthful as could be found at any mountain resort.

Historic Scenery.

This wonderful spot, lying almost in the lap of Atlanta, was ignored for centuries while places of less natural beauty and fewer advantages as a reception area were found out and developed. Even during the last 60 years while Atlanta has been growing into the south's greatest city, Atlantans have traveled hundreds of miles to find less favored places in which to rest and to escape the heat of summer.

Here, at the very gates of Atlanta, in the midst of magnificent forests, rugged boulders and roaring rapids, are scenes of natural beauty unsurpassed by any found in the Blue Ridge, or, to the southerner, even in the Rocky mountain region.

An occasional dose of
DR. CALDWELL'S
SYRUP PEPSIN
Keeps young girls fit

False Modesty Wrecks Health

THE young lady just assuming the responsibilities of a woman is very apt to be self-conscious of her physical functions, and in consequence neglect them. There is no time, however, when it is more important for her to look after them. Chief among her troubles is constipation, and her suffering will be serious when she gets older if she does not regulate her bowels now. Mrs. Mary Kellar of 132 Benton St., Sisterville, W. Va., was perplexed about her daughter until her own druggist told her they used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at his house, and she did likewise. Miss Irene Mazierska of 90 Peter St., Buffalo, N. Y., is glad her attention was called to Syrup Pepsin.

Safe for Young and Old

Let mothers with growing daughters interest themselves in this matter and see that their judgment is enforced. A rule followed by many is to take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin once a week until the bowels function daily, and at such other times as there is headache, biliousness, sores and fever blisters, lack of energy and appetite, sleeplessness, indigestion.

A dose can be given in these conditions to any member of the family however young or old as Syrup Pepsin is a simple compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasing aromatics, and perfectly safe.

Public Recognizes Merit

You will quickly see the difference between a mild laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and castor oil, or rough cathartics and physics. Syrup Pepsin acts gently and does not gripe. Increased doses are not necessary. A bottle can be had at any drug store, and a spoonful costs less than a cent. It has been successfully used for thirty years and is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles having been sold in drug stores last year. Keep Syrup Pepsin in your medicine chest.

Civil War Roster of Famous Georgia School Published

For the first time since the war between the states, the full roster of the cadets of the Georgia Military institute who served in the armies of the Confederacy has been compiled and is here published.

The Georgia Military institute, located about 20 miles from Atlanta, was at that time an important military college. It was a training camp for the Confederate army from the beginning of the war and many of the leaders of the Confederacy received their military training there. General George P. Harrison, elected several times as commander of the United Confederate veterans, was among these distinguished graduates.

The roster herewith published, and other facts concerning the cadets of the G. M. I., have been gathered together by W. E. H. Searcy, of Griffin, Ga., orderly sergeant of company A, and ordnance sergeant of the battalion.

Go Into Service.

In the spring of 1862 many of the cadets left the institute and went into the Confederate service, training men in all sections of the country. Later others were sent out from time to time, to impart the trainin- in military tactics, etc., so vitally needed.

The cadets protected the lines of transportation to Tennessee and Virginia. They were a constant menace to the raiders who came in from the federal army, and rendered important service to Generals Forrest, Wheeler and others in keeping these raiders out of the state.

On May 6, 1864, Sherman broke camp at Chattanooga for his march to the sea. The battalion of cadets went before him to the sea and were in all the military movements from Chattanooga to Savannah. They helped to hold Atlanta during the siege and were in Hardee's corps, Wayne's division, Carswell's brigade, Johnston's army.

They served under General Hood after Johnston was displaced by him. They were turned back from the march to North Carolina, to Augusta, where they defended the great Confederate arsenal at that place. There they were disbanded and paroled in May, 1865. It is said that they were the last troops in the south, east of the Mississippi, to give up their arms. This was due to the fact that the arsenal at Augusta could not be abandoned until the federal government was able to get troops there, which was difficult, with railroads torn up and stragglers all through the country.

Central To Operate Poultry Car To Buy Terrell County Fowls

Dawson, Ga., June 7.—(Special.)—Another poultry pick-up car will be run Dawson June 18 for the entire day according to advice from F. M. Connor, development agents of the Seaboard Air Line railway. J. A. Kelley, wholesale poultry and egg broker of Atlanta, who has bought a large amount of live poultry in this immediate section, will have a representative aboard the car to buy such live poultry as is offered and a representative of the state bureau of markets will grade and weigh the fowls.

The company recently operated a poultry pick-up car through this city which originated in Arlington, moved up through Edison, Blakely and Cuthbert to Dawson, and it is reported by those in charge that the car picked up more live poultry in Dawson than in all the points touched before coming here. A large amount of surplus poultry which is now in a marketable condition is reporter in Terrell county and it is expected that the cooperative poultry sale will result in one of the best sales yet staged in this county.

CHEAPNESS OF LIFE.

America is confronted today with two conditions that menace the welfare and happiness of the people to a more alarming extent than in any other civilized nation on the globe.

Indeed not before, in any peace-period since the establishment of this republic, has human life been so cheap and law violation so flagrant.

These are the two menacing conditions referred to, and the critical seriousness of the situations they develop not only challenges the best thought of the country in meeting and mastering them, if possible, but should arouse the public conscience to the ideals of civilization to such an extent that no time shall be lost to that end.

In Chicago two "master minds" among the idle rich of that great city noted for its dens of vice and crime among the "professionals" of the underworld, committed murder for the "thrill of the adventure," the most atrocious in the annals of modern history. Perhaps other homicides may be traced to their hands—and yet these young men were schooled to the highest degrees in the arts and sciences, possessed all of the worldly possessions that hearts could covet, and lived in environments of refinement and culture.

It is not alone in Chicago. In New York, within the past few months, the police records carry the names of those closely identified with social prominence, and the crimes run the gamut from petty larceny, forgery, banditry, arson, to murder.

In Atlanta only on Wednesday of last week, a father who had been sufficiently provident to accumulate his home and other property, shot his wife and himself to death, leaving seven children, from babyhood to graded-school ages, orphaned and without provision for their protection and care.

In the same newspapers that carry the story of this tragedy are other stories of neighbor shooting neighbor to death, suicides, traffic tragedies, and the minor criminal reports that are in the routine of a day's newspaper making.

And these are only outstanding instances of the hour in the national and local crime records.

With panoramic swiftness every new day brings a new cataloguing. The page of one is turned as a new page is brought to the view of the bewildered, almost horrified reader. The mind of the peace-loving citizen is carried from crime to crime. The past is all but forgotten as the present unfolds, and thus the wave sweeps tragically on, tearing at the vitals of a nation's morals, and increasing its momentum in its passionate fury.

What is the cause of it all, and what is the remedy?

Parental license and indulgence is undoubtedly one cause. In the wild chase of the father for the dollar and the mother for social prestige the old and honored restrictions of home life are overlooked in too many instances.

The over-liberal licenses of society no doubt contribute to the conditions. Men and women do today with impunity what an outraged public would have frowned upon a generation or two behind us.

This brings about a condition of human levity that is undeniably eating at the higher ideals of peace and morals.

But perhaps none of these are the controlling causes, although contributing causes.

Times have changed. We live in a motor age, and not in an ox-vehicle age. Blue laws have no place in the present day, and too much restraint craves a passion for freedom that will swing to the extreme when once it comes.

These facts must not be overlooked, and yet, realizing them as we do, the upstanding duty of the American citizen today is to draw a closer tie between himself and his home, and to guard the youth of the home with a kind and inviting indulgence that is not ad libitum license, and with a companionship that makes rebellion impossible, and assures love and respect.

The real causes are undoubtedly traceable, first, to the radical unrest that has gripped this country as never before, creating disrespect for law and order and for the old and traditional policies of popular government; second, to a degeneracy produced by a low-ebb of politics, in which trickery, manipulation, design, demagogy, all enter, thus tearing down the respect for the constitution, and for constituted authority, and building up a role of mediocrity and fanaticism that neither creates nor holds the respect of the people; and third, to the hip-pocket flask of home-made, death-dealing, conscience-destroying, moral-assassinating hootch, that stalks like a "devil of destruction" in every stratum of society, striking alike at the rich and the poor, the educated and the ignorant, and joy-rides on every avenue and highway.

The horrifying situation that confronts Christian America today must be met. Human life is neither valuable nor sacred under the reign of crime-terror that sweeps the nation. The highways and streets are unsafe. The homes are menaced. The courts are defied. Justice is crucified—

There must be a change. It must come through an aroused electorate backed by an aroused conscience.

ROAD BOND PROBLEM.

In another column is a communication from Martin Amorous, of Marietta, in opposition to a $70,000,000 bond issue for highway development, as has been advocated in some quarters.

Without defending this specific proposal, which in our judgment would need rigid revision, and especially modification, before submitting it to the people, there are many features in Mr. Amorous' communication that are so misleading, it should not go to the press without challenge.

In the first place, assuming that the Arkansas bond issue for highways caused a number of "sheriff sales" for road taxes, it must be understood that there is no proposal before Georgia, even indirectly, that is in the slightest measure analogous to that situation. There the carrying and retirement of state road bonds was provided in a special ad valorem road tax, which every property holder had to pay. That is not even considered in Georgia. Here a special sales tax of three cents a gallon on gasoline is already imposed, as is the vehicular license taxes, the two sources providing between five and six million of dollars a year into the state treasury.

None of the Georgia propositions for bond issues for completing the assembly-accepted state-wide highway program even remotely suggest any tax of any kind upon property or individual — ad valorem or income. They simply provide that the income from the special taxes already existing, roads or no roads, be used as a sinking fund for a sufficient bond issue to give the very people who are today paying these taxes acceptable highways during their life-time. That is fair and just, and the state has no right to impose such a gas tax, certainly, for any other purpose.

The farms in Arkansas that Mr. Amorous said were "sold" were sold in the sense of fi-fa transfers, redeemable, of course. It is not probable that even a negligible number of farmers actually lost their farms by the ad valorem road tax, although we are frank to say that such a method of retiring state road bonds is both unsafe and unwise. We would vigorously oppose any such a proposition in Georgia.

Mr. Amorous' contention that the proposed bonds are to be issued at one time, and thus precipitate a building condition that would disrupt normal labor conditions, and, indeed, to a greater volume than the highway department can meet, is, of course, far-fetched, and written without a fair knowledge of any of the various bond proposals.

It is not contemplated that the full issue, if authorized, shall be put upon the market at once. That would be foolish. Any law seriously proposed will carry a definite schedule of the annual issues, covering a total running period of several years, but for annual amounts sufficient to meet all the federal aid available, and to link in the small or poor counties that must always obstruct the completion of the through trunk highways until some satisfactory state bond program is adopted. It is idle to say that Mr. Amorous does not know that the highway department can double its construction capacity without increasing its office overhead charges. He is too good a business man for that, and to the end that it can, it is obvious that the net expense per mile of road building will be reduced considerably by having sufficient funds to aggressively progress.

"Too much debt," of which he complains, is an ideal thought, but in constructive development, thereby adding to the material welfare of everybody, by enhancing values, and expediting industry and business, the expenses must be differentiated as an investment, and the dividends accruing from such an investment is immutibly illustrated by North Carolina, once the trailer of Georgia in everything, and today the leader of Georgia in every constructive activity. It is the richest per capita state in America, and the progressiveness of her people in building highways and schools is responsible. She has left Georgia hopelessly behind in the value of manufacturing. Is that not an unanswerable argument against Mr. Amorous' claim of "too much debt?" The prosperous business operates on borrowed capital, certainly until it is sufficiently strong to become a lender and not a borrower. North Carolina was once poor. Now she is rich. She borrowed money with which to make her rich, and in the process made the whole people of the state more prosperous than those of any other southern state. Statistics prove it.

The Constitution believes that any bond issue for roads should be coupled with bonds for school improvements upon a fair basis of allocation, and that the retirement of the school bonds should be amicably agreed upon without any direct taxation of the people.

Schools and roads go hand in hand.

The consolidated school is made possible only by the paved highway, and the consolidated school is the one essential step toward public school efficiency. They are so closely linked that the developments are of joint concern. North Carolina saw this, and voted originally for road and school bonds combined.

It is, in our judgment, unwise to ask for a $70,000,000 road bond issue, and a total $50,000,000 bond issue, carrying a fair allocation to schools, would more nearly meet the thought of Georgia. This, of course, would merely be an authorization, the separate issues to be made only as needed to carry on the work economically and scientifically.

RECREATION AND PARKS.

The national conference on outdoor recreation, called recently by President Coolidge, and the success of which was largely due to the efforts of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, has adjourned after a several days' session in Washington.

Reports indicate that it was a most successful meeting and that a new and broader viewpoint regarding federal land holdings, and the general health and quickening value of outdoor recreation especially, was established.

The conference made its confession of faith in a set of resolutions and organized permanently to aid and abet, not only the government, but the people generally, in accomplishing constructively the principles it advocated.

Of peculiar interest to the states of the southern Appalachian range of mountains was the resolution declaring that our national park system is our greatest heritage of an animate and inanimate nature and that our national forests are areas that should be set aside and maintained for both productive and recreational uses. The conference called upon the federal government to make a careful survey of all available resources of parks, forests and public lands to determine the recreational facilities of such areas; and to create a permanent body to investigate the problems of federal land policy so far as they relate to recreation.

The national park system is under the jurisdiction of the U. S. department of interior, while the national forests are under the jurisdiction of the U. S. department of agriculture. They both carry recreational features, and there is no conflict between them. The forests, acquired under the Weeks law, are for the purpose of protecting head waters and timber growth. Through them the bureau of forestry builds roads and trails and establishes campsites, etc. There are in Georgia at present 160,000 acres of national forests in the two reservations, the Nantahala and the Cherokee. Other acres are under option and will be acquired when the new appropriation is made available.

On the other hand, with all of the national parks in and west of the Rocky Mountains, including the Yellowstone, Glacier, Yosemite, Grand Canyon, etc., with 20,000,000 people visiting them for health and recreation each year, The Constitution began a campaign two years ago for a national park in the southern mountains. Recently Secretary Work of the Interior appointed a commission to select a site for such a park. That commission has been organized and will cruise the southern Appalachian this summer for the purpose, as commissioned.

It is the earnest hope that a four-state park may be established with gateways in Georgia, North and South Carolina and Tennessee. There is no more beautiful mountain section in America, nor one more easily accessible. The fact is that a park in this section will be within one night's run of 60,000,000 people and will be reachable in a few hours' automobile run by not less than 10,000,000 people. That is, of course, provided the highway approaches are built. It is for good roads to and through the Georgia mountains that The Constitution has fought so vigorously in connection with the national forests development, and the proposed national park, which now seems a certainly within a reasonable time.

To show the enormous interest in the proposal, 2,500 people gathered at a road meeting in the mountain town of Hiawassee Monday, despite the rains of a week preceding, and the fact that Hiawassee is reached only by highway travel.

And why not a national park in the south? And why not paved roads through the mountains of Georgia and the south? Our southern members of congress have for years voted millions of dollars to the national park developments in the west. Not alone to the park developments, per se, but to the highway approaches to those parks. The finest roads in the world are those of the government, built in the great park reservations of Colorado, Montana, California and the southwest. The members of congress did well in voting these appropriations. The encouragement of outdoor recreation and the preservation of animal and plant life in the native elements is to be commended, and the value of the outdoors for health and rest should be emphasized by the government, but why not such a park in the south, where it can serve the far greater number of people in the states east of the Mississippi and measure up to every essential of altitude, climate and rugged attractiveness?

Every encouragement should be given the national movement for outdoor recreation, and every encouragement should be given the greater development of the national forests and the plan for the establishment of a national park in the southern mountains.

A GIFT TO FRANCE.

Premier Poincare voices the national gratitude of France to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., with peculiar fervor. He says that the $1,000,000 gift to the French government to restore the roof on the Rheims cathedral spells salvation for an "artistic patrimony of the whole world."

To every citizen of the United States who took part in the great war, Rheims cathedral was the embodiment of immemorial faith and beauty. When that magnificent pile crumbled to ruins under the well-aimed bombardment of the German cannon, there was a feeling of widespread indignation, not only in France, but throughout the whole world.

Mr. Rockefeller's gift of $1,000,000 means 18,000,000 francs in France and the ministry feels certain that there is sufficient money to carry on needed repairs at Versailles and Fontainebleau.

Versailles, with its memories of the French revolution, the historic scene of the splendor of Louis XIV, the agony of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, the cataclysmal days of Robespierre and Danton, is the goal of thousands of American tourists each year. Then there is the Fontainebleau palace, that brings back thoughts of the great Napoleon, but where now a great American school of music is turning out able and finished American musicians.

Mr. Rockefeller's magnificent gift will cement the bond which has existed between France and the United States ever since the young LaFayette clasped the hands of Washington, ever since Franklin carried from Philadelphia the pledge of friendship which caused France to support the cause of American independence.

There had been warnings from time to time on the part of famous architects that the historic buildings were crumbling, that the leaky roofs were destroying the fresco plaster work in the salons, but the French government, encumbered with a reconstruction program as the aftermath of the greatest war in history, could not raise the necessary money.

Then Mr. Rockefeller made delicate inquiries from eminent Frenchmen asking if France would be willing to accept funds from a foreigner for the restoration of her magnificent palaces and temples.

The gift has touched the heart of France. It has done more toward international good feeling than half a dozen conferences. It blows away the clouds of misunderstanding.

The United States and France, the two greatest republics in the world, having time and again marched together in the vanguard, when the ideals of free people were in danger, will continue their friendship of centuries to the good of the world.

"A sublime move," exclaims the Figaro. "It's the heart of America that has always beat in unison with the heart of France," says Le Temps.

"Local prosperity" is the record since January 1, and the plan to build on for today and the future, with business increasing steadily.

Lady of Morning

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

Light of the Morning
In the shadowed place;
Love's been dreaming
Of his sweetheart's face;
Love has listened
For the dawn of Light:
Lady of Morning,
Make the dim world bright!

II.

The hills are singing,
And the valleys know
Why, in the shadows,
They were dreaming so;
The dream that whispered:
"There is no more Night,—
Lady of Morning,
Mistress of Light!"

III.

Abide with the lonely
In the Morning's beams;
Read for the loveless
Love's sweetest dreams!
Sorrow, far-fading,
Gray Grief in flight,
Lady of Morning—
Mistress of Light!

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

A Beautiful Lie.

Rev. S. B. MacKay, English country vicar, is called to town. He is brought into police court and asked by the magistrate to identify a golden pectoral cross. "Where did you get it?" the priest flings at the policemen. "That woman had pawned it in a shop in this city," answers a constable, pointing to a young girl standing with head downcast. "We thought it suspicious and arrested her." The vicar looks at the girl. He recognizes her as a former servant. He knows she has stolen his cross and some of his wife's table silver. For a moment he is in deep thought. "I gave her the cross," he says. "I will redeem it from the pawnbroker and she can ride back with me in my carriage, for we are just in great need of help at the vicarage." So he lies, this servant of the Master. The girl weeps, is broken-hearted and sobbingly tells the vicar she will mend her ways. They are leaving the station. Smilingly the vicar assures a policeman with a skeptical look that "everything is right now. I gave her that cross, you know." He is lying again, but at the same moment there is joy in heaven.

A Dead Language Revives.

Students taking up Latin are on the increase in several American universities. It's a favorable sign and one of great significance. There was a time when Latin was looked upon as a dead language, from the study of which nothing good could come toward earning money or starting out in the business world. But as the wave of materialistic prosperity is reaching an ever higher level, more and more people in the United States are awakening to the fact that material greatness is not everything. There is a sincere seeking for culture, a higher appreciation of art, a profound valuation of learning. It's a happy beginning. It will end in a renaissance that will startle the world with its brilliance and splendor.

A Question.

Four more Japanese gentlemen have committed suicide over the exclusion bill. They followed the example of the unknown, who ripped open his abdomen in front of the American embassy at Tokio to protest against "the insult against his race and people." Over at Crozer Theological college one Japanese student refuses to accept his diploma and he asks "if Christianity has a real spiritual and moral power on the general policy of the nation." Now apart from the fact that the Japanese seem entirely unable to grasp the meaning of the exclusion bill and persist in believing that America considers them inferior, while they are refused admittance because they are unassimilable, the young theological student's question is a very pertinent one. We are officially a Christian nation. "But has Christianity a real spiritual and moral power on the general policy of the nation?" Let's think that over.

Norse and Roman.

Amundsen, great Norwegian explorer, has quarreled with Lieutenant Locatelli. Locatelli was to pilot one of the three machines on the coming flight to the North Pole and he wanted the Italian colors painted on his machine. Amundsen objected. He said no national colors of any kind were to be painted on the planes. It is likely that he looks upon the venture as something undertaken in the interests of science, which is universal in its applications. But the Italian has informed Signor Mussolini and this firebrand is hollering about an insult to the Italian colors. The man takes himself too seriously. When Amundsen was told of Mussolini's ire the great Norseman smiled and lit his pipe.

A Man-Made Bible.

Caravans of linguistic experts, belonging to different nationalities, are trekking into the desert of Arabia to have a look at the "lost gospel," said to have been discovered by Arabian shepherds in an old ruined temple. The gospel is written in Aramaeic, but lacks the name of the author. Its date of writing has been fixed at half a century after the death of Christ. That makes it an older chronicle than the gospel of St. John and perhaps older than the gospel accorded to St. Luke. Will this gospel ever be taken into the canon of accepted books and form part of the Bible? That all depends on its contents. Should the gospel be one with Arian tendencies you may be certain that it will meet the fate of the 196 gospels which were destroyed by order of the fathers at the council of Nicea. Those gospels contained doctrines which did not harmonize with orthodox dogma and consequently had to go. The new "lost gospel" may be preserved in some museum or library, but unless it holds doctrines acceptable to the censors it will not be included in sacred scripture. Men decide that part as men did in former days.

Toward the Future.

Edouard Herriot says he wants to direct the heroism of war times into new channels. He thinks that will bring about lasting peace and a spirit of reconciliation. Noble sentiments and wise. Think of all the energy and initiative, the research and physical strength that is wasted in Europe on armaments and militarism. Could all that tremendous force be combined and led into channels of peace and good will, what a mighty effort for peace would result!

Ireland Will Be Ireland.

Canadians, Sir Robert Borden and Arthur Meighan, are mentioned as arbitrators on the Irish boundary dispute between the north and south of the distressful isle. Both Canadians were prime ministers of their country and both are able statesmen. Ireland has come to rest and has recourse to the civilized way of round table conference to settle its difficulties. That's a great improvement. In former days we were led to believe that the Irish liked nothing better than fight out any matter of dispute. For centuries and centuries there has been pernicious propaganda going on about Ireland. We were told the Irish people lived like pigs, they had no culture, they were rough, coarse creatures. The remarkable part of it is that Germany and Austria said the same thing about the Polish as the English said about Ireland. It was nothing but imperialism using a cloak to hide its actions, which were not fit for the light of day.

Amorous Opposes And Argues Against State Road Bonds

Editor Constitution: I favor good roads and many other good things when I am financially able to pay for them. The people of Arkansas led off under the national highway commission and got good roads by great bond issues. One thousand five hundred farms were sold in Arkansas this year by the sheriff to pay overdue interest on road bonds. I favor good roads but I am not willing to swap my farm and home for good roads. In one farming district in Arkansas surveyed out by the highway road commission the total taxable value was $332,000 and the estimated cost of the roads in that district was only $740,000.

The proposition to issue $70,000,000 of bonds for good roads means that we will pay $70,000,000 for road construction and $50,000,000 more for interest for the use of the money as a fool to build the roads. The usual life of a good road is 10 years. These bonds are to be paid off in 30 years. So we will be paying all our gasoline tax money for 20 years after our good roads are worn out. While it's estimated we will collect $8,000,000 this year from gasoline and the road advocates demand all this be used to pay for bonds—the people must pay some extra tax to go to the other state purposes now supported by the gasoline tax. Another fact: $3,000,000 each year won't in 30 years pay bonds and interest.

The highway commission can not economically build $70,000,000 worth of good roads in one, two or three years. To start this work in all the counties the same year will drain the farms of labor and put a wage cost and loss of production that will "bankrupt" the farmers—materials will cost more and the delays and wastes in supplying them to all the counties at once will also add to the road costs.

The $3,000,000 annual gas tax will pay for 100 to 150 miles of roads each year, and this is as much work as the highway department can carry on with economy and efficiency in one year.

If you issue $70,000,000 bonds your annual payment on principal and interest will be over $4,000,000, and this $4,000,000 must be paid each year even if weather conditions, want of men or shortage of materials should delay building more than ten miles of road in any one year. The distress of the world today is due to too much debt of nation, state, county, city and individual, and the farmers of Georgia did not produce net enough last year to pay interest and taxes.

I am in favor of building good roads from our annual income and not with borrowed money. MARTIN AMOROUS.

The School, the Home, the Criminal

BY M. ASHBY JONES, D. D.

The kidnaping and murder of the Franks boy in Chicago seems to have been a crime so unnatural that it has proven a sensation, even in a day when the sensational has become almost the normal in our news columns. I use the word unnatural because there are natural motives which produce the most horrible crimes. From time immemorial men have committed the most horrible acts motived by lust, revenge, greed or fear. In these cases one of the primal passions has taken possession of the personality and driven it with inexorable logic. In this case, so far as the tragedy has unfolded, no normal motive has been revealed, even in an abnormal expression. Until all of the intricate relationships of these two young men are known, and the story of both their inner and outer lives is before us, it will be utterly impossible to answer any of a score of questions which clamor for satisfaction. But the story, even as we now know it, raises some vital questions which must be answered before our civilization can move forward.

We are accustomed to the idea that the home and the school form the first line of defense for society. We rightly presume that the immature and undeveloped child-life must be properly fitted for the duties and responsibilities of any helpful social existence. So we look to the home and the school to prepare the child to function as neighbor and citizen. Indeed our democracy is builded on the presumption that it is not safe to turn a man loose in society, with all of its privileges, without such preparation of the personality as can be given by the home and the school. It is for this reason that Anglo-Saxon democracy especially has thrown its full protection about the home, while, at the same time, it has developed a program, not only of free, but even compulsory education.

Definitions and Destructions.

The shocking thing about this crime, and hundreds of others which have been committed in the past few years, is that these youthful criminals have committed their horrible deeds within the immediate environment and atmosphere of the home and the school. Of course in the first reaction of bitter disappointment one is tempted to raise the question whether the home and the school have ceased to function as safeguards of society. This would be wretchedly superficial. However, is it not a good time to insist upon some distinctions and definitions? Instead of mere emotionalism, which easily breaks into singing "There is no place like home," or flamboyant oratory about "the little school house on the hilltop," wouldn't it be better for us to be asking, with calm and intelligent earnestness, what kind of home and what kind of school is necessary to the safety of civilization?

Of course I am not presuming to answer that question, but I do desire to make two suggestions as to the nature of such an inquiry. If the home I is to be in any sense a preparation of the child to live helpfully with other people, shouldn't it be within itself an epitome of the larger society world, with its privileges and obligations, its rights and responsibilities? We may as well understand that the home, without this social consciousness of the balance of privileges and responsibilities, is not a help but a menace to society. A child who grows up taught by every-day experiences that its little home-world exists for the purpose of petting and pampering him in all of his changing moods, satisfying his appetites and catering to his whims will inevitably go out into the larger world with the same conception of society. He is being trained and fitted not to live with men, but to live on men. The home which does not teach the primary social principles of obedience to authority, respect for the personality of others, consideration and thoughtfulness, self-control and personal sacrifice has ceased to function as a civilizing influence.

Why a School.

When we turn to the school I should certainly demand some more definite purpose for education. I would have, not simply the teachers, but the public generally to raise the definite question, why is school at all? Is it for the purpose of imparting knowledge along given lines or shall we strive to develop a type of personality? Are we to fit men for vocations or professions, or shall we seek to fit them for life that they may know how to live? These are not merely academic questions to be discussed by specialists. When a diploma is given to a graduate what is that you are turning loose upon the world?

Last year, whether it was intended or not, a university turned loose upon society an ornithologist. An ornithologist is a dangerous animal. Yes, but so is a lawyer, an engineer, a merchant, a preacher, if these specialties and professions have been developed at the expense of the personality of the man. I am convinced that a school whose professors teach subjects—mathematics, biology, history languages—instead of using these subjects for the purpose of developing neighbors and citizens, is a menace to civilization. The school and the home may make criminals, but they may produce a righteous civilization

LIBRARY LITERARY NOTES

Early Experiences of an English Novelist

BY LUCILLE COBB, OF THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY

Algernon Blackwood, in his recent book, "Episodes Before Thirty," has given us another proof of the statement that truth is stranger than fiction. The book is intensely interesting. More thrilling than a novel is the account of his relations with Arthur Glyn Boyde, whom he characterizes as one of the most entertaining and sympathetic companions he had ever met, but who proved to be a thief and confidence man. Very interesting also is the story of the gruff but kindly old German doctor, Otto Huebner, and his fight against morphine. Those who look for something romantic in these pages will be disappointed, for there are no women in this book except the mere mention of his mother and sister and the motherly German Jewess, his landlady.

"Episodes Before Thirty" is the story of 10 years of the author's life spent in Canada and New York. Mr. Blackwood came with his father, who was a high official in the British postal service, to Canada for a few weeks' trip. They saw Canada at its best and Algernon was so impressed that he decided to come to Toronto to live. With him, he writes, "came—in the order of their importance—a fiddle, the 'Bhagavad Gita,' Shelley,' 'Sartor Resartus,' Berkeley's 'Dialogues,' Patanjali's 'Yogi Aphorisms,' De Quincey's 'Confessions,' and —a unique ignorance of life." His first literary work was for the "Methodist Magazine," a monthly periodical published in Toronto. After two unsuccessful ventures, first as joint owner of a dairy farm, then of a hotel, he came to New York.

Old "Sun" Man.

Mr. Blackwood's first newspaper position was with the New York "Sun" on a salary of $15 per week. Some years later he came on the staff of the "Times" at a salary of $35 per week, which was later increased to $40. However, he did not find his work as a reporter very congenial. He writes: "If any young man learning values wants to know the quickest way to study the seamy side of life, to understand the darkest aspects of human nature, and incidentally, to risk the loss of every illusion he ever had, let him become a reporter on an up-to-date New York newspaper. Within six months he will be apt to believe that every man has his price; he will become acquainted with vice, crime, horror, terror and every kind of human degradation; theft, murder, arson will seem commonplaces, forgery a very ordinary affair; men and women, it may even seem to him, 'go straight,' not because of any innerent principle of goodness in them, but because that degree of temptation which constitutes their particular 'price' has not yet offered itself." However, he had some pleasant intervals during his life as a reporter. One day he translated an exceptionally clever story from the French paper, "Le Courier des Etats Unis," and submitted it to his chief. It was printed and he was afterwards allowed an afternoon off weekly, provided he translated a story each time. These free hours he spent in the free library in Lafayette place, devouring the Russians, as well as every kind of book he could find on psychology; or else in going out to Bronx park, not at that time the home of the New York "Zoo," which, he writes, was a paradise to him, the nearest approach to the woods he could find. Mr. Blackwood was sent to interview many distinguished foreigners, Sarah Bernhardt being among them, because he could speak their languages. He regarded a trip to meet an Atlantic steamer at quarantine as a day off.

Early Experiences in New York.

Mr. Blackwood's early experiences in New York were by no means pleasant. He shared his East 19th street room with two other Englishmen whose incomes were never certain. "Dried apples and hot water—with expensive oatmeal we had to be very sparing—constituted our dinner for four nights out of the week; coffee and bread and butter for breakfast, coffee and 'sinkers' for lunch completed my dietary," he writes. Sickness prevented his working at all for some time and his pride kept him from appealing to his aristocratic relatives. He never let his family across the water know the true state of affairs. Newspaper reporter, artist's model, actor, gold-seeker in Ontario, newspaper reporter again, but on a different paper, in an eau-de-Cologne manufacturing business with a man who proved to be a decidedly shady character, and finally private secretary to James Speyer—such was Algernon Blackwood's life in New York city. He writes: "It is a mercy one cannot see the future. In that New York misery, present and to follow, had I known that some 15 years later I should be my own master, living more or less like a gentleman, earning my livelihood, though a very bare one, by writing, I could never have faced what I did face. And yet value that may have lain in the experiences would certainly have been missed, at any rate. If one knew that the future promised better things there is no patience in human being that could hold and wait for it; if, on the other hand, it promised worse I have met no courage that could be present. Those who preach 'live in the present only' have common sense on their side."

First Appearance in Print.

It was Angus Hamilton, a stepson of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, who is responsible for Mr. Blackwood's first appearance in print. He borrowed some manuscripts to read and took them to the publisher, Eveleigh Nash, whose reader, Maude Poulkes, recommended them for publication much to the author's amazement.

Louise Maunsell Field writes: "Mr. Blackwood is, of course, far more than pastmaster of horror; he is a stylist, able to give exquisite expression to the wellnigh inexpressible, prose-poet of the borderlands which lie beyond and behind the outer edge of the conscious, the physical and the tangible; possessor of a tested philosophy of life which would seem to have served him well, a philosophy familiar to his readers, but which cannot be dwelt upon here. A mystic with a backbone, accepting what came, not subserviently, but proudly, even fiercely, prompted by the spirit of his own peculiar kind of resignation, which commanded him: 'Dodge, shirk, avoid nothing. You have deserved it.'"

Percy A. Hutchinson writes of Mr. Blackwood's book: "'Episodes Before Thirty' is in many respects a strange book. . . . It is an absorbing narrative; it is absorbing also as a study in psychology. It reads largely like fiction—and is stranger because truth. Few writers of autobiography have succeeded in so unobtrusive a manner as Blackwood to draw so full-limned a portrait of themselves and at the same time a portrait so intimate. The book is a 'confession'—as that word has come to be used in literature—rather than a portrait. Yet there is nothing of mawkishness; the Rousseau touch is conspicuous by its absence and the indifference of the trained reporter to his theme is manifest throughout. The reader will lay the book down with the feeling that he has met a truly noble man, yet a man for whom he has, for reasons he can in no wise define, some lurking feeling of pity. Mr. Blackwood, should he happen to read this line, would undoubtedly scoff at the writer; yet it is precisely because the narrative produces this—probably wholly unwarranted emotion—that it exercises its peculiar, penetrating and lasting charm."

Weekly Bible Talk

The Rebuilding of the Temple

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

TEXT OF TODAY'S BIBLE TALK BY MR. BRYAN.
(Ezra 3:8-13; 6:14, 15.)

Now in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jezadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the Lord.

Then stood Peshua with his sons and brethren, Kadmel and his sons, the sons of Judah, together, to set forward the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the Lord, they set the priests in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with cymbals, to praise the Lord, after the ordinance of David king of Israel.

And they sang together by course in praising and giving thanks unto the Lord; because he is good, for his mercy endureth forever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid.

But many of the priests and Levites and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house, when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes wept with a loud voice; and many shouted for joy.

So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people: for the people shouted with a great shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

And the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah the son of Iddo. And they builded and finished it, according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes king of Persia.

And this house was finished on the third day of the month adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

To this day, Cyrus, king of Persia, remains one of the greatest rulers known to history—and the days of his glory were almost six hundred years before Christ.

By his own genius he rose to the head of the most extensive kingdom that any one had governed up to that time.

And wherever the Bible is read he is known as the king whose hosts conquered the proudest of all ancient cities—Babylon—even while Belshazzar was entertaining his guests at history's most drunken revel—the feast at which the prophet Daniel interpreted the handwriting on the wall—Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin.

To Jew and Christian alike, Cyrus is also famous in connection with another dramatic Biblical event—the rebuilding of the temple in Jerusalem after its complete destruction by Nebuchadnezzar at the time that great prince of Babylon led the Jews into captivity into the very heart of his dominions.

Unprecedented Liberality.

"The Lord God of heaven . . hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem"—thus Ezra the prophet records Cyrus as saying; and thus moved by divine suggestion—"that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled"—he notified the Jews, captive in Babylonia three score and ten years, that they might return to the Zion of their dreams and rear there a house of worship of their own on the ruins of the temple that Solomon had built.

It was unprecedented liberality on the part of the monarch.

It would have been liberal to release the Jews from bondage and allow them to get back to Palestine as best they could; but he commanded his people to lend assistance—all the assistance needed—money, goods and beasts of burden.

Still more remarkable, he sent back all the valuable vessels of gold and silver taken from Jerusalem when Nebuchadnezzar, also fulfilling the prophecy of Jeremiah, brought ruin upon the Holy City and led its people captive.

The Persians were quite different from the Egyptians.

In the latter case, the children of Israel went into Egypt by invitation of Pharaoh and were afterward held in servitude until released by the killing of the first-born and they were then pursued to the Red sea.

In the Babylonian exile, the Israelites were carried away from Jerusalem as captives in war and were not only set free but received whatever aid they needed for their journey home.

Individual Influence.

Among the Jewish captives there were a number (Daniel among them) who had distinguished themselves by devotion to their God and by eminent service to the Persian monarch, and their good deeds doubtless counted in the balance in creating a kindly attitude toward the race.

The influence of the individual in affecting public opinion as to his race, nationality or group is too important to be overlooked. Where the blame can be located, it is not fair to blame a group for the crime of one member, but critics are prone to judge the whole by the virtues or vices of the individual.

In Asia, for instance, all citizens of the United States are called Christians, and our religion suffers because of the vices and dishonesty of un-Christian Americans.

So in Latin America—selfish exploiters have sometimes injured the reputation of our country and closed the door against legitimate enterprises and worthy investors. On the other hand, such men as Daniel reflect credit on their race or class and confer upon them a real benefit.

It is also a worthy thing to be able to appreciate good in others. Monuments are, for this reason, evidence of the character of the living as well as proof of the merit of the dead. Cyrus appreciated the devotion of the Jews and was open to suggestion in their behalf, and his people, responding promptly and generously to his instructions, rendered every possible aid to the departing Israelites.

Leader and Workers.

Next a word in regard to Zerubbabel, under whom the Jews returned home. He was a builder—an executive.

Individuals differ in their qualifications for different tasks. Some can direct; others can carry out instructions. Both classes are needed and are equally worthy if they employ their different abilities in the same spirit and with equal consecration.

Zerubbabel had a call to an important work, the rebuilding of the Lord's house, but he would have been helpless but for the fact that a multitude of workers felt called to join in the effort.

Society's troubles will be greatly relieved when all are honored according to the spirit in which their work is done, whether they direct others or are themselves directed.

The rebuilding of the temple was a matter of great significance. It meant that the Jews, chastened by affliction, had undergone a change of heart; repentence had wrought its perfect work and they were again back in the fold.

A Much Needed Lesson.

The enthusiasm with which they set about their new work gives us a lesson in church building. "They sang together in praising and giving thanks unto the Lord; because He is good, for His mercy endureth forever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout when they praised the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid."

In this case, there was a resurrection of faith and a rebuilding of the house of God, but the laying of the foundation of any new church building should be an occasion of rejoicing, for it has all the meaning that it had in ancient days, and more; it means the building o four lives on a religious foundation.

And when was such a lesson more needed?

Modern civilization, with its intense business activities, its multiplied diversions and its materialistic delusions, is leaving little time for worship and is crowding out the thought of religion.

No Substitute Possible.

None of the new things, however, furnish a substitute for consecration of the heart—out of which are "the issues of life."

Business needs occupy the time, unproven hypotheses detract the thoughts and worldly pleasures paralyze the purpose.

God has not changed, but He seems farther away—"'Tis little joy to know I'm farther off from heaven than I was when a boy."

The Bible has not changed, but its veracity is questioned; Christ has not changed, but He is being misrepresented; man has not changed, but he is misled.

If the American people were to turn to church building with the joy that the children of Israel manifested, it would revolutionize society.

If business were run upon the basis of love and brotherhood, pure food laws and anti-trust laws would be unnecessary. Politics would be purged of corruption and social life would be simplified—neighbors would meet together to hold intellectual communion instead of assembling to exhibit rivalry in cooking and to display extravagance in dress.

What the Church Should Be.

The church should not be a dormitory filled with sleepy communicants, but a school house for instruction in God's word and a place in which Christians should learn to apply the moral code of Jesus and hasten the coming of His kingdom.

The cause of the Master and the welfare of the people are bound to suffer if joy-riding in automobiles and pleasure yachts is more alluring than simple worship in the temple of God. Many of the older Jews, "priests and Levites, and chief of the fathers —"men that had seen the first house"—wept when the foundation of this second house was laid.

The young should not be indifferent to religion, but when the pulse is full and death seems remote, they sometimes are.

It is different with those who are growing old; as the ties of life are loosening and the day approaches when one must make the great adventure into another world, one realizes the consolation of a religion that pledges the love of a Heavenly Father, provides a Saviour as a remedy for sin, and holds out the promise of a life beyond the grave.

Rebuilding has in it an element that is absent in the first construction; it implies an earnestness even greater than that required for building the original structure whether it be a temple, a residence, or a character.

It is the dawn of a new day after intervening darkness.

May all our nights be followed by a morning and all our sorrows be swallowed up in seasons of rejoicing.

Things New and Old About the Bible

Effort Toward Methodist Unification

BY REV. W. P. KING,
Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

It may seem to require some elasticity of imagination to discuss my specific subject under the general caption. However, since the question of the unity of the church is a Biblical one and my discussion will lead up to the Methodist unification plan, I will allow my general caption to stand.

This introductory article will deal solely with the controversial question of the legality of the special session of the general conference.

As a side remark, I wish to observe that there are some healthful indications in the present agitation and difference of opinion. We have majority and minority statements from the college of bishops. It is to the credit of the college of bishops and to the church that no one bishop is able to dominate the others, and there is exploded the traditional idea of the unanimity of the bishops, which has always been a fable not even cunningly devised. Bishop E. D. Mouzon, however, passes criticism on Bishop W. A. Candler and Collins Denny for breaking away from the unit rule, which in the past he claims they have zealously urged. This is an affair between the bishops and I have no comment to make.

The statement of Bishop Mouzon is:

"This is the first time in the history of our church that an important paper has been given to the church by the college of bishops, which did not carry the names of all the bishops. Indeed, it has been the tradition and rule of action that where the majority of the bishops speak, all speak, and more than once since I have been a member of the Episcopal college have I heard it urged that the entire college must speak with one voice. It is rather interesting to observe that the two bishops who have been most insistent in urging the 'unit rule' are the first to break away from it."

The pertinent question just now is whether or not the special session of the general conference has been legally called. The minority of bishop protest against the special session and the protest is signed by Bishop Candler, Denney, Dickey and Darlington. While the public press has carried both contentions, yet the placing of these contentions in juxtaposition will enable the reader to see more clearly the issues involved and the respective arguments.

The resolution passed by the general conference at Hot Springs in 1922, is as follows:

"When a plan for unification is indorsed by a two-thirds vote of each commission and approved by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, then our college of bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our general conference."

In the statement signed by the 'four bishops' three objections are urged against the calling of a general conference in the summer of 1924. They are as follows:

'1. The law as set forth in paragraphs 37 and 38 of the discipline, and which has been in the discipline for 58 years—the law which authorizes the bishops to call a special session of the general conference—is null and void, because unconstitutional. The bishops are, therefore, without any authority to call a special session.

'2. Even if the constitutionality of paragraph 37 and 38 were conceded still they do not authorize the bishops to call a general conference until every annual conference shall have had opportunity to elect new delegates.

'3. The calling of a general conference in the spring of 1925 would have more truly carried out the resolution of the general conference of 1922 than will the date fixed by the majority of the bishops, namely, July 2, 1924.'

It appears evident that the entire contention of the bishops of the minority must consistently stand or fall with the objection number one, as given above. Objections numbered two and three are not relevant for if objection number one is valid the bishops would have had no more legal authority to have called a special session of the general conference after than before the intervening annual conference, and would have been no more justfied in calling the special session in 1926 than in 1924.

Bishop Mouzon's Reply.

Bishop Mouzon, the chairman of the commission in unification, replies to the three objections of the minority statement which are given according to the order as stated above.

Bishop Muzon's reply to the first objection says:

"The position taken by Bishops Candler and Denny was that paragraphs 37 and 38, which gave the bishops authority to call a session of the general conference 'at any time,' are null and void, and that the bishops are entirely without authority to call a special session of the general conference at any time at all.

"This argument—this reductio ad absurdum—was not thought of until the last day of our discussion. If it made any impressions on anybody except the two bishops who presented it, I saw no evidence of it in the process of our deliberations. Just think of such a thing! Here is a law which has been in the discipline since 1866; and now we are told it is no authority, but that we must go back and be governed by a law which has not been in the dicipline in 58 years, but was in the discipline 116 years ago. I cannot believe that this argument of men who were evidently in distress for want of sound reasons for their opposition to the action of the college of bishops will have any influence on the church at large."

The following is a portion of the answer made by Bishop Mouzon to the second objection:

"The next objections offered by the bishops who are opposed to unification was that paragraphs 37 and 38 of the discipline would not allow the calling of a general conference until all the annual conferences had had opportunity to elect new delegates.

"To support them in this view, Bishop Candler and Denny interviewed a few lawyers and got hasty opinions from them that paragraph 37, which says that "The bishops shall have authority to call a general conference at any time' does not mean what it plainly says, but must be interpreted as meaning 'at any time after all the annual conferences shall have had opportunity to elect new delegates."

It would have been more fitting if the bishop had omitted the word "hasty" as applied to the opinions of the lawyers, from whom the bishops of the minority received an expression. Whatever may have been the fact, this is not germane to the argument.

There is given the essence of Bishop Mouzon's reply to the third objecton:

"That a general conference meeting in the spring of 1925 would more truly carry out the resolution of the general conference of 1922.'

'Let it be observed that this resolution calling the special session does not say, 'One year after the plan is approved by the general conference of the Methodist church,' but rather 'when a plan is approved, then our college of bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session.' English language can hardly make anything plainer than that.'

He further adds that he wrote to the chairmen of the various delegations and that overwhelming response was in favor of the early call of the special session.

The bishops of the minority state that they have interviewed a number of lawyers who confirm them in their position, but the legal opinion is not published at this writing. Bishop Mouzon gives out the following:

"Concerning the force and validity of the 1922 general conference resolution, just quoted. I append the opinion of a distinguished firm of Methodist lawyers;

"We had occasion to consider the matter of our last general conference in 'empowering and instructing' the bishops to 'call a special session of the conference.'

"The action of the general conference in question appears in report No. 1, of the committee on church relations and Bible cause, on page 222 of the Journal of the 1922 conference, and is as follows:

"When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each commission and approved by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, then our college of bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our general conference.

"This report appears to have been duly adopted by the general conference and thus it became the action of that body.

"The Discipline at paragraph 42 provides:

"The general conference shall have full powers to make rules and regulations for our church under the following:

"The general conference shall have full powers to make rules and regulations for our church under the following limitations and restrictions, viz; and then follows the six restrictive rules, no one of which covers the subject matter of this inquiry."

"Discipline paragraph 43 lodges a veto power in the bishops, and this paragraph together with the decision of the bishops at paragraph 632, provide for the exercise of this power. The Journal above referred to being silent, we conclude that no step was taken by the bishops to veto this action of the conference;

"Therefore, this action of the general conference, in our opinion, became one of the 'rules and (or) regulations for our church,' and is mandatory upon our college of bishops. From this, it would follow that our bishops have no option, but must, within a reasonable time, issue a call for a special session of the general conference."

A Legal Opinion.

I have had opportunity of securing an expression from only one lawyer, who is widely known for his legal ability. He says:

"The 'constitution' of any organized body, civil or ecclesiastical—means simply how it is constituted so as to carry out its purpose. For instance: In what men or group of men shall the legislative power be placed? And what limitation shall be placed upon their power? This is what organization means.

"The general conference is made the supreme power in this church and is given (par. 42 full powers to provide rules and regulations which would, of course, include procedures, with certain restrictions; certain things which it may undertake to do must be submitted to the annual conferences. But how and where and by whom a general conference may be called is not one of the things which under this paragraph must be submitted to the annual conference. This comes within its full powers of making rules and regulations. Therefore the change in 1866 was not required to be submitted to the annual conferences. So there was no change in the constitution.

"Putting these full powers in the hands of the general conferences was and is the 'constitution.' The restrictive provisions are, of course, a part of the constitution. Certain questions must be submitted to the annual conferences—but I fail to see in these restrictions—that to provide how and by whom the general conference may be called is one of the limitations put upon its powers. It is a mistake to suppose that every paragraph in the discipline is a part of the constitution.

"Furthermore there is the principle of a long time acquiescence which is sustained by a large number of decisions of the supreme court.

"In 'corpus juris' on constitutional law, page 715, paragraph 67, there is a statement of this legal principle."

Effect of Long Acquiescence.

Legislative or executive construction of constitutional provisions, adopted and acted upon with the acquiescence of the people for many years is entitled to great weight with the courts, and when not manifestly erroneous, will not be disturbed. The injustice that would inevitably result by the disturbing of such constructions after a long period of acquiescence therein, during which many rights will necessarily have been acquired is a very strong argument against it."

As a layman in legal matters I offer no dogmatic opinion. Application may be made, however, of the principle of acquiescence. The paragraphs which authorize the bishop to call a special session of the general conference have been in the book of discipline since 1866, while the provision that only the bishops and the annual conference can call a special session was in 1808, or 116 years old. The discipline clearly discloses that the bishops may veto any rule or regulation which they deem unconstitutional. There was no issue raised according to the records by any bishop or member of the general conference of 1922, as touching the legality of the resolution calling for a special session. If it were not even a matter calling for veto, still it is rather curious in the light of the present controversy that no protest was made.

Personally, I am not contending that the special session for 1924 is preferable to the suggested date in 1925, but according to a consistent interpretation of the claims of the bishops of the minority, the bishops had no legal right to call a special session for any date, since it is contended that paragraphs 37 and 38 of the discipline are null and void.

The minority may claim, however, that the resolution of the last general conference calling for a special session should have been framed differently. The only way to have legally framed the resolution according to the position of the mipority would have been a request to be acted upon according to the provision of 1808: "The general superintendents with or by the advice of all the annual conferences, respectively, shall have power to call a general conference if they judge it necessary." This can mean nothing but that before the call could have been made the bishops would have to be unanimous, and all the annual conferences would have to agree.

It is difficult to imagine how anyone can believe that the members of the last general conference could have been induced to go through the vain exercise of passing a resolution whose birth pang would have been its death pang.

BLOODWORTH PRAISED BY LEGION CONVENTION

Among the resolutions adopted by the state convention of the American legion in Savannah on June 5 and 6 was one that commends very highly the work of an Atlanta legionnaire, Major J. G. C. Bloodworth, Jr.

As director of the State Service bureau, created by the legislature last summer to help Georgia men who served in the world war or in the Spanish-American war, Major Bloodworth has acquitted himself in such a way as to receive high commendation from the legion. It is pointed out that he has helped over 600 Georgians obtain compensation or other rights from the government; has enabled Georgia men to collect in pay and allowances over $70,000 from the government which they otherwise would not have received and has assisted numerous Spanish war veterans in getting pension matters adjusted.

Major Bloodworth is machine gun officer in Atlanta's new infantry regiment, the 200th regiment, and is well known in military circles, having served with distinction with Atlanta's old regiment, the "5th Georgia," during the war.

Appointment of an assistant director of the bureau here, with an increased appropriation of $10,000, to better serve veterans of American wars was included in the resolutions.

SCHOOL CHILDREN BENEFIT BY USE OF MALTED MILK

The question of what to do with the backward child, the perplexing problem of educators since schools began, seems almost to be answered at last by the results of an experiment made in a Boston public school.

During pleasant weather, backward pupils from all grades in the school carry on their studies in an outdoor class room specially constructed for this purpose in one corner of the school yard.

Sunshine and fresh air, together with hot Horlick's Malted Milk served during recess, morning and afternoon, have worked wonders.

The pupils are brighter and more attentive. They are gaining weight, averaging an increase of three pounds the first month. Their eyes and complexions are noticeably clearer. And they are more ambitious to learn.

HOWARD THEATER HAS POLA NEGRI IN 'MEN'

Slave markets of antiquity have their counterparts in modern life, according to Dimitri Buchowetzki, whose production of his own story, "Men," starring Pola Negri, contains an illustration of how women are bought and sold today. "Men" will be shown at the Howard theater all week starting Monday.

"Men," Pola Negri's latest picture for Paramount, is the best picture that this star has made since she arrived on the shores of these United States. It gives Pola opportunities for acting that even "Passion" did not contain, and she rises to every one with admirable aptitude. In it, whether because of the director's cleverness or a new manner of lighting or more suitable makeup she is positively beautiful, a picture of virile, vital womanhood that answers every requirement of sex appeal, that which in "Men" is most important.

To Dimitri Buchowetzki, the Russian director who produced "Men," must go the credit for its splendor. He has made a picture that answers every need with an unoriginal story, and yet it is a picture that flames and throbs. Its story has, through the manner of its handling, its treatment, the flavor of originality.

Filmed by the Russian director as his first American-made picture for Paramount, "Men" contains the story of the amazing adventures of a French girl, "Cleo," who begins life as a waitress in a cheap wine shop and rises to fame as the greatest dancer in Paris. The role "Cleo" is played by Pola Negri. Surrounded by a host of men who try to win her favors by fair means or foul, she finally promises to give the privilege of her company to the highest bidder. Handled by the masterly direction of Dimitri Buchowetzki, the scenes which follow are probably unsurpassed in the history of motion pictures.

Chosen to support Pola Negri in this powerful picture of life among certain sections of European society are well known players such as Robert W. Frazer, Robert Edeson and Joseph Swickard.

Conductor Risinger will this week present another novelty in his overture presentation, a contrasted bit of symphonic melody and "Sympho-Jazz" under the caption of "In Love with Chansonette." This offering is a cleverly arranged rendition of "In Love" (Chanson) by Rudolph Friml, scored for four celli, a most unusual quartette, and played by Umberto Migli, Raymond Thompson, Frank Verdi, and William Utermoehlen, all of the Howard orchestra. This beautiful bit of melody will then be contrasted with a Paul Whiteman arrangement of "Chansonette," the popular fox-trot which happens to be nothing more or less than a modernized version of the above mentioned "In Love," by Friml. The score for the picture contains some very interesting numbers, among them being "Love Song," by Roy Lamont Smith, popular composer of Chattanooga and Los Angeles. Strauss' "Fleutermause" (The Bat), Grieg's "Berceuse," and Victor Herbert's "Love Theme," from "The Fall of a Nation," are also included in Mr. Risinger's scoring.

The Park sisters, petite entertainers in clever dancing and harmony singing, will be featured in the prologue. The little sisters come direct to the Howard from Hollywood, California, which is their home and where they have appeared in many entertainments, some under the direction of David Wark Griffith, master director of motion pictures.

The second and last chapter of "Around the World in the Speejacks" will be shown this week. In this chapter Mr. and Mrs. Gowen are taken the rest of the way around the world and back again to the United States. Many thrilling adventures are to be seen in this chapter.

The comedy is one of the Cameo-Educational comedies, entitled "The Lunch Brigade," and is a sizzling, soaring skyrocket of mirth.

'CYTHEREA, GODDESS OF LOVE' AT METROPOLITAN

Truth in Lives and Love of Today's Men and Women.

Fanny Randon was a wife who believed that running a household should be conducted on a businesslike and efficient basis. She had a clock in every room, in order to time her work and to keep on schedule. She had no time for fun or recreation, because, somehow, in spite of her "efficiency expert" methods, her house claimed her whole attention.

Her husband, Lee, on the other hand, believed that every person was entitled to get as much fun out of life as possible, and he tried frequently to induce Fanny to go to the theater, dances and parties with him. But she consistently refused.

So it was little wonder that one day when Lee met a pretty little maiden he tried to convince her that he was not an "old man" by dancing with her, and behaving generally as a college sophomore. And he went home carrying on his cheek, in rouge, the outline of a pair of arched lips.

What happened to Lee is an amazingly dramatic story which can be seen next week in "Cytherea, Goddess of Love," at the Metropolitan theater.

To round out the program with a great deal of variety, several attractive short subjects have been added, including Mack Sennett's late comedy, "His New Mama," Fun from the Press and the ever popular Metropolitan news to complete the program.

The Spanish atmosphere permeating the story of "Cytherea" is carried by Mr. Leide in his musical score.

Irene Rich.

Irene Rich, the popular screen actress, sailed last week on the liner France en route for London to appear in her first foreign production. Miss Rich's latest screen appearance is in "Cytherea—Goddess of Love," the Samuel Goldwyn-George Fitzmaurice production. Alma Rubens, who shares honors with Miss Rich opposite Lewis Stone in the film version of Joseph Hergesheimer's story, remained in New York for the Broadway opening of the production. The foreign picture in which Miss Rich is to be starred by Newhurst films, an English company, will be called "What the Butler Saw."

Kenneth Clarke is working on the script of "If Ever I Marry Again," which First National Productions, Inc., expects to film during the year.

'THE MIDNIGHT ALARM' MELODRAMA AT RIALTO

If It's Action You Want, It's Here in This Great Picture.

The most sensational fire scenes ever screened; the most gripping suspense ever created in a picture drama; the most heart-tugging romance ever depicted; the most human, realistic scene drama of real life lived ever told in the silver sheet; and a perfect cast combine to make "The Midnight Alarm' which is the featured attraction at the Rialto theater this week, one of the most attractive motion pictures of the year.

Other numbers of the Rialto program will be the newest and funniest comedy obtainable, the current International Newsreel, with the most complete pictorial interpretations of the biggest news events of the day, along with a stirring musical presentation by Whitney Hubner and his excellent Rialto orchestra.

"The Midnight Alarm" is frankly and sensationally melodrama, of the kind the best of us and the worst of us, the youngest of us and the oldest of us, thrill to and applaud and want to see again.

Alice Calhoun, as the lovable heroine of one of the most moving stories of poverty you ever read, is locked in a vault while the building around her is burning to the ground.

Percy Marmont, he of the great success in "If Winter Comes" and other great characterizations is forced to burn out the combination of the safe to free the girl he loves above even his own life, as a screen hero should love.

But here is the story in brief:

Silas Carringford kills his partner, Thornton, who has made him executor of his estate. Through aid of Springer, a servant, the murder is palmed off as a suicide. Carringford forces Mrs. Thornton to flee his obnoxious attentions. She is killed at a railroad crossing. Her young daughter is picked up by a Mrs. Berg. Her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Tilwell, as well as Carringford, carry on an unceasing search for the lost child. Carringford finds her keeping a news stand with another waif, Aggie. Chaser, a young crook, is in love with Sparkle, as she is called. Carrengford plots to destroy the papers which would identify the girl as the heir to Thornton wealth and takes the money as his own. The girl and Chaser are finally trapped with Carringford in a burning office building, when Carringford tries to get the documents from Sparkle. Carringford and Springer die in the flames. Harry Westmore, a fire captain, who had become enamored to Sparkle, rescues her from the building, where she had been imprisoned in a steel vault. Sparkle is restored to her grandparents and the wealth due her. Chaser gives way to Westmore in his suit and turns his attention to deserving Aggie.

A few hours later it suddenly dawned upon Mr. Losee that Richard had played with him in "The Hawk." But Dix, at that time, was a "super" in the show, with no idea that he would some day become so prominent in the motion pictures world that Mr. Losee, whom he had always regarded as an excellent actor, would be in the supporting class of a picture in which Richard was one of the featured players.

LIFE IN YUKON GAVE SERVICE POETIC IDEA

Robert W. Service, author of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," the Metro-SL picture coming to the Grand theater next week, was born at Preston, England, in January, 1874. His father, Robert Service, was the manager of the Preston bank.

After having completed his education at the Hillhead public school at Glasgow, he served as an apprentice with the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Glasgow. He then emigrated to Canada and settled on Vancouver Island, where he engaged in farming. Later he traveled up and down the Pacific coast, following many occupations, after which he joined the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in Victoria, B. C. He was transferred to White Horse in the Yukon Territory and then to Dawson.

For eight years he lived in the Yukon and traveled extensively in the subarctic climate. It was at this time that he obtained the background for his stirring poems of the Klondike.

He finally devoted himself exclusively to literary work, writing the "Songs of a Sourdough," "Ballads of a Cheechako," "Trail of '98," "Rhymes of a Rolling Stone," "The Pretender," "Rhymes of a Red Cross Man" and "The Spell of the Yukon."

Turn about is fair play. Years ago one Frank Norcross, at that time managing a road show, gave a job to a certain Dave Thompson. This week Thompson, in the capacity of production manager for First National Productions, Inc., gave Norcross a job in support of Corinne Griffith and Milton Sills, who are being cofeatured in "Single Wives."

"THREE WEEKS" COMES ONCE IN EVERY LIFE

"In the life of every man and woman comes a 'Three Weeks.'"

That is the claim of Elinor Glyn, authoress and expert on love, whose most famous novel, "Three Weeks," was filmed for the Goldwyn studios by Alan Crosland, and comes to the Paramount theater Monday.

"Once in every human being's life comes a period of supreme happiness brought about by love. Every woman, for a time, is The Lady, and every man is Paul.

"It may last for months—it may last only a few days. But in that time, every person reaches his highest mental and moral point.

"One does not know at the time that he is experiencing his 'Three Weeks.'"

It was with this fact in mind that Mrs. Glyn wrote "Three Weeks" in order to idealize love and depict the "three weeks" of every man and woman.

It is also because of this fact that "Three Weeks" has become the most widely read novel written in the last fifteen years, Mme. Glyn believes.

'THE HEART BANDIT,' LOEW'S BIG PICTURE

Viola Dana and Milton Sills Star in Leading Role; Other Features.

Prettier than ever, more hoydenish, yet more sincere, Viola Dana romps with evident glee through her newest Metro picture, "The Heart Bandit," which opens tomorrow at Loew's Grand theater for a week's stay and as an added attraction to another big bill of vaudeville. The tiny star is always to be depended upon for an entertaining film, and "The Heart Bandit" not only holds up to the very high average she has set in her Metro series, but goes the rest of her releases one better.

The production also is fortunate in the presence of Milton Sills in the leading male role. Always splendid, Mr. Sills contributes many fine dramatic moments. He is one of the screen's "man's man" heroes and his dignified personality forms an ideal foil for Miss Dana's antics.

But although merry moments predominate, the picture also has a serious side of real significance. The story by Fred Kennedy concerns the regeneration of a girl crook when she hides in the house of a lonely old lady and her son to escape arrest. The dramatic and comic situations arising from this premise bring forth many exciting and laughable moments.

There is a touch of the underworld running throughout the whole picture and this influence is always working on Molly O'Hara, played by Miss Dana. Molly is called "Angel Face" by the members of Spike Malone's gang of stick-up men because she is so innocent looking. The attempted robbery of a van filled with bootleg liquor is the downfall of Molly, as far as the gang is concerned, but proves later to be a blessing to the former member of the gang of law breakers.

Her experiences in the home of the rich old lady, and her crap game with the hired hands and other pranks will make you double up with laughter. Her fight to draw entirely away from the influence of those with whom she was formerly associated will win your sympathy and make you pull for Molly O'Hara. She finally wins out and in the most dramatic way.

Wallace McDonald, hero of many productions, has a great character part in the picture and Gertrude Claire is delightful as the little old rich lady who was lonesome for the arms of just such a pretty sweet little girl as Molly O'Hara.

It is one of those pictures which grip you from the start and make you want to fight for the heroine.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

'THE BAT' AT LYRIC THEATER THIS WEEK

Rinehart-Hopwood Mystery Thriller Offers New Sensation in Stock.

"The Bat," mystery comedy supreme, is the play of the week at the Lyric theater, opening Monday at ladies' bargain night prices and continuing each night and at Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday matinee at popular prices, the first presentation at popular prices in the south.

"The Bat" is the terrific thriller and laugh-producer written jointly by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood. It combines the adventure and mystery that has made Mrs. Rinehart a dominant figure in modern fiction and the explosive comedy that has made Avery Hopwood probably the wealthiest of living playwrights.

The central theme of the play is startling, developed with incidents that are saturated with terror and make an onlooker's hair stand on end. Murder, robbery, assault, ghastly presences, unearthly midnight prowlers, shrieks that quiver from nowhere over dead telephone lines, bloody arms that are thrust through solid wood from empty space, and unimaginable terrors are perpetrated.

Lively Comedy Contrast.

People so human that their reactions to the play's excitement are screamingly funny just because they are so real, situations that change color so rapidly that laughs are forced through chattering teeth, exchanges of wit such as Hopwood delights in, ludicrous situations such as made "Fair and Warmer," "The Gold Fish," "The Demi-Virgin" and "Ladies' Night" all lend the comedy contrast to the mystery play.

"The Bat" has been seen in Atlanta in the hands of two different New York road companies. The Lyric management was confident Saturday, after two weeks of preparation, that this week's version would outdo anything seen in the south and would rival the original New York production that enthralled Gothamites for two successful years.

"The Bat" was the first of the succession of mystery plays that have been produced during the last five years. It is also, in point of total attendance, number of performances and number of companies which have played it, the greatest of all mystery plays, if not the greatest of all modern plays of all types.

Up to the time the local company opens with it Monday night, "The Bat" will have been seen by more than 1,000,000 people in North America and Europe who have paid more than $1,500,000 for the privilege.

Surprises in Casting.

The regular patrons of the Lyric theater have some surprises in store for them in the line-up of the players and characters. "The Bat" is a mystery play and every detail has been perfected to preserve the mystery to the very end for those who have not seen it.

Only the regular members of the Lyric company have parts. They are Isabelle Lowe as Dale Ogden, Wilfred Lytell as Brooks, Loraine Bernard as Lizzie Allen, William Loyd as Doctor Wells, Ramona Weaver as Cornelia Van Gorder, Rankin Mansfield as Billie, the Jap butler; Gus Forbes as Anderson, the detective; Edwin Vail, director of the plays, as Richard Fleming; Edward Power, assistant director, as Reginald Beresford, and Robert Smiley as the unknown man.

Special stage effects, more difficult than the Lyric technical staff has ever had to prepare before, have been arranged to work with precision.

Miss Weaver, incidentally, may be remembered as the Dale Ogden of the last road company production in Atlanta about two years ago.

'AMBITIONS' TOP LOEW VAUDEVILLE PROGRAM

A Musical Satire Written Especially for Fun Purposes.

One big headliner after another is the pace set by Loew's Grand theater, with this week's the attraction bigger than ever. It the musical satire, "Ambitions," with a big company, and talented too. This act includes singers and dancers galore with comedy lines that were written with a guarantee to make one laugh. There is not a dull moment in this vaudeville offering, presentations in the cast bringing the highest praise from every critic.

This act, like the big headliners Patsy Shelly and her jazz band entertainers and Miss Tommie Allen and "Seminary Scandals," is bound to score a big success, for like the two preceding ones, it is another of the big acts that were put on the calendar with the new full-week policy.

The cast in this musical satire is an exceptional one, with excellent voices and clever dancers, while the leads are too well known for any further introduction.

Billy Bann and Dave Mallen, who scored such a big success in "The Boardwalk Revue" will put on an attraction this week that will closely rival their headline attraction. In fact, it could almost be billed as the second headliner. It is called "Precocious Moments," with these two stars at their best.

George Lloyd and Zella Goodman offer songs, smiles and music joyfully combined, and there couldn't be a better combination for pure unadulterated amusement. Lloyd and Goodman are great entertainers and the audiences wherever they have played have been with them from start to finish.

Marion Clair will offer a very unusual act. Miss Clair is known as the girl with the double voice and her skill in so completely changing her tones is almost amazing. She has a voice ranging from deep contralto to high soprano, with every note as clear as a bell.

The Gorgalis trio are marvels with rifles, performing some of the most dangerous marksmanship stunts ever seen on a vaudeville stage. This trio are peers in their line.

Milton Sills and Viola Dana star in a pretty and clever comedy drama entitled "The Heart Bandit," in which there is a number of thrilling moments.

AT THE THEATRES

Reading left to right, scene from "The Bat," at the Lyric; next scene from Jimmie Hodges' Musical Show at the Forsyth, "Honey Girl;" top, right, Baldwin Players in "I Love You." Right, bottom, scene from "Ambitions," on Loew's vaudeville bill week.

'I LOVE YOU,' FARCE COMEDY, ATLANTA

John B. Litel and Baldwin Players This Week.

John Litel removed the putty part of his nose that made it crooked. He brushed away the camouflage that had snaggled his teeth. He threw the clothes of "Matt Burke," the stoker in "Anna Christie," into the ash can and donned his conventional clothes instead of the apparel of the engine room.

"Now," said he, "I feel like myself again."

And Atlanta theatergoers will welcome the recrudescence of Mr. Litel this week. It's all very well for John to do a character part with makeup every now and then, but two weeks in succession is an ample sufficiency.

That's the reason they are hailing with delight the fact that the Baldwin Players will present "I Love You" at the Atlanta this week and that Mr. Litel will return to normality.

He has a fine part, too, in this sprightly comedy that is abounding in laughs and situations. He's in trouble from the first curtain right until the last, but it's the sort of trouble that keeps the ribs tickled.

Every other member of the company, too, is given plenty to do in this typically hot weather bill. Miss Gladys Hurlburt can cast away the sackcloth and ashes of "Anna" and be her delightful self.

There is an especially fine part for Romaine Callendar, and dainty Flora Gade will be back, and so will Rhea Dively.

Don't forget Al Roberts, either. He has a part that will make people forget the bishop and the jailer, in both of which he seized the affections of Atlanta in a grip that will last a lifetime.

Rudolph Berliner, former musical director for the Ritz-Carlton hotels and for Klaw & Erlanger productions, is to become a motion picture director. He is now acting as one of Cecil B. DeMille's assistants in the making of "Feet of Clay" for the purpose of learning the business.

JIMMIE HODGES & CO. PRESENT 'HONEY GIRL'

Musical Comedy—Good Music—Plenty Pretty Girls.

The Forsyth Musical Comedy company, headed by Jimmie Hodges, one of the greatest funsters Atlanta has had the opportunity of enjoying, will offer this week "Honey Girl," a musicalized version of the celebrated drama "Checkers" which thrilled the country a generation ago.

Mr. Hodges and his brilliant company of artists have established their reputation for giving an exceptionally good show at popular prices in the one week in which they have shown here. The entertainment is snappy, high-class and diversified, as was shown in the first offering in the extensive repertoire of the company "My Havana Girl," a thoroughly enjoyable music revue.

"Honey Girl" has been transformed into most delightful musical play by adaptation from Henry Blossom's famous racing drama. The play has been brought down to the minute by Alfred Clark and it has been liberally provided with more than a score of the most bewitching of the Von Tilzer melodies of the whistling and humming variety. There is a charm to the Von Tilzer musical dreams that is irresistible and the Hodges artists have proven themselves to be masters of the sweet songs.

In the dramatic sense, the lines of "Checkers" have been followed closely, nor have the characters been changed beyond recognition, and it is certain that Forsyth patrons, who in the past have been thrilled by the greatest of racing dramas, will experience keen pleasure in witnessing the modernized play with its added wealth of tinkling music and lively dancing.

In "Honey Girl" members of the company find a greater opportunity for portraying more pretentious characters than were required in the first offering at the Forsyth. This week's attraction affords some real "parts" for the players and will serve to reveal to the musical comedy fans the true versatility of the artists composing the company.

Miss Bonnie TeBeau will assume the leading feminine role of Honora (Honey Girl) Parker and her beauty and vivacious personality fit her for the part admirably. Jimmie Hodges, of course, will play the title role of "Checkers." It is one of the kind in which the clever comedian shows off to his best advantage, for it allows his extemporaneous wit to run rampant.

One of the features of the production will be the speed in which all scenes will be changed, never allowing a dull moment during the entire performance. There are no intermissions during the play, but the intervals between scenes are filled with good snappy bits of singing and dancing by real artists who know how to entertain.

The show is laid in three acts and the settings have been provided to equal in beauty and impressiveness the original New York production. It is a $2 show in every particular that will be presented at the popular prices of 25 and 30 for matinees and 40 and 60 cents for the evening performances. The afternoon show will commence at 2:30 o'clock and the night performances at 7:30 and 9:15 o'clock.

ANNA Q. NILSSON

Miss Nilsson has a role of exceptional sympathy as the betrayed wife in "Between Friends," the J. Stuart Blackton production of the widely known novel by Robert W. Chambers. It is a Vitagraph picture and will be seen soon in this city.

Kingsmore First To Get Covered Wagon At Popular Prices

A magnificent epic of the early west is James Cruze's Paramount production, "The Covered Wagon," which will be the feature at the Howard theater soon, the first time in the United States at popular prices, says Manager Kingsmore. This is a picturization of Emerson Hough's new novel of the same name, and it is said to be one of the greatest photoplays ever seen on the screen.

The features embraced in this story are many and varied and include among others the start of 350 covered wagons from Westport Landing (now Kansas City in 1848. The terrors of fording freshet rivers, prairie fires and the like are depicted with great realism. A buffalo hunt is one of the most exciting scenes. Old Fort Bridger with a night attack and fight by day with Indians, are shown. The dividing of the trails to Oregon and California at old Fort Hall, a touch of the gold fever in California, magnificent mountain shots and a culmination of the romance with the establishment of one of the first homesteads in Oregon—these are all incidents in a picure that bristles with big scenes.

Such historical characters as Kit Carson, Jim Bridger and Bill Jackson, scouts and typical western characters, are portrayed in the Paramount screen version of the novel, which is conceded to be one of the most notable literary achievements of the present decade.

The various roles in the hands of well-known screen players. The leading man is J. Warren Kerrigan, and the leading woman is Lois Wilson. Alan Hale is the villain. Others in the cast include Tully Marshall, Ethel Wales, Charles Ogle and John Fox. Jack Cunningham adapted the novel to the screen.

Richard Dix Plays Prank On Frank Losee's Memory

Frank Losee, who plays the part of George Castle in the recently completed Alan Crosland production for Paramount, "Unguarded Women," was frankly puzzled when he met Richard Dix for the first time at the Famous Players' Long Island studio and Richard started giving an imitation of Mr. Losee as he appeared with William Faversham in "The Hawk," the play in which Losee appeared some years ago. Mr. Losee asked Richard how he knew Mr. Losee's part in that show so well, but Dix just laughed, telling Frank to think hard and see if he couldn't find the explanation for himself.

"You made me what I am today"—thus sings Phyllis Haver the song she used to play not so long ago when she tapped the ivories to the tune of twenty-five kerplunks a week. That was when she played the role of "orchestra" in a nickleodeon, but she up an' left the theater flat and presented the world with one of its most pulchritudinous bathing beauties. Having garnered all the laurels that a mere beauty can win, she forsook the comedy field and today she is proving herself an actress of no mean ability in the role of Marion Eldridge in "Single Wives," which First National is producing.

Sylvia Breamer is resting after her strenuous role in "The Woman on the Jury." She is soon to be featured in another First National special.

RAMONA WEAVER, LATE OF 'THE BAT,' BACK IN ATLANTA

Ramona Weaver, who played the leading role in one of the road company productions of "The Bat," which shocked Atlanta from time to time for several years past and who played the ingenue part in Lou Hopkins' production of "Adam and Eve" in Atlanta several years ago, is to have the secondary femininé part in the Lyric Players' version of "The Bat" this week.

Miss Weaver won a regular place in the Lyric company last week with her work as "Babbett" in "Ladies' Night" and is to take character roles as utility actress for the players during the rest of the summer season.

The new Lyric entertainer is a daughter of Blanche Weaver, who played with Augustin Daly, the Sotherns, Mrs. Fiske, Margaret Anglin, Richard Mansfield and others who were winning their first laurels in a former decade.

Miss Weaver practically grew up on the stage, gaining her first experience with the grease paint and limelights in watching rehearsals from a cradle borrowed out of the stage properties of the theater in which Mansfield played Shakespeare some 20 years ago.

The West Indies and northern coast of South America have claimed Miss Weaver's talents most recently and she closed a long tour through Latin America with J. Harkins last month.

Prior to that she had played with Charles Hopkins in "The Arabian Nights" at the Punch and Judy theater, New York.

Miss Weaver's two previous sojourns in Atlanta planted within her the desire to know more of the Gate City of the South, especially to test its vaunted advantages as a summer resort.

"The Lyric is certainly about 40 degrees more comfortable than any of the places I have played in the last six months," she declared Saturday night.

Irene Rich, who has just finished playing the leading role in "Behold This Woman," the picturization of E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, sailed from New York last week for England. This latest release of this popular motion picture player is a romance of movieland and the fans will obtain glimpses of how pictures are made in this production.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Editor The Gazette, Emporia, Kansas.

The Editor and His People. Editorials by William Allen White, selected and arranged by Helen O. Mahin, with introductions and footnotes by Mr. White.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE.

The author and his editorials are familiar to most readers, for, as the editor of The Gazette, of Emporia, Kansas, he has become widely known. This book contains the most interesting and characteristic of his editorials.

The editorial entitled "To an Anxious Friend," on free speech, which won the Pulitzer prize of $500 for the best editorial article of the year, is a masterpiece. But Mr. White is at his best in all these selections, and even though Emporia, Kansas, is not called a great city, they will be read with as much interest, and given as much thought, as is attributed to any large eastern newspaper.

The reader will be both interested and entertained in the information he is sure to gather about politics in Kansas, and the editor's personality is so pronounced that it adds a special pleasure to the reading of the editorials.

The introduction by Helen Mahin is well written and in it she explains why she undertook the compilation and selection of Mr. White's most interesting editorials. (The MacMillan Co., New York.)

OUR FAITH IN EDUCATION.

Our Faith in Education. Dr. Henry Suzzallo, president University of Washington, Seattle, has written a most interesting little volume bearing the above title, the substance of which is "Educate, Then Legislate." It is dedicated "To the teachers of America, those devoted citizens and workers who more than any other group are making it possible for an inspiring democracy to approximate its full dream of a prosperous and happy cooperation."

The following are facts from the author's book:

"It is not difficult to comprehend why men wish privilege and power. They are modes of personal liberty."

"Men readily believe in the doctrine and theories which give them what they wish."

"A square deal in adult life is not worth much unless there is a fair chance during childhood."

"Privilege is the liberty granted us by others; power is the basis of that liberty which we take for ourselves."

"He who masters the schools will in time master the nation itself, not personally and majestically in the old discarded kingly way, but by right personal influence tossed into that passing processional of youth which makes its way from home to citizenship by the pathway of the schools." (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

Romance in Science, by Bessie I. Miller, consists of a collection of lectures published under the title of "Browse." The author of this interesting little volume is professor of mathematics in Rockford college, and yet she has not introduced that subject into the series but gives a cordial "invitation to walk in a pleasant meadows along paths which are always beautiful and which at times disclose unexpected vistas of glorious ideals." (The Stratford Co., Boston.)

RURAL SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

Charles Josiah Galpin, author of "Rural Life," and who heads the division of "Farm Population and Rural Life" of the Century's department of agriculture, is also the author of university and government monographs on a variety of aspects of country living, but best known to specialists as the author of "The Social Anatomy of an Agriculturial Community," a research study that discovered an intimate relation between family life on farms and the organization of life in towns and cities.

A great deal can be said about a man whose activities have brought the wonderful results as has Mr. Galpin's—all of which goes to prove that he has the right idea about rural life. He is very optimistic when it comes to the future of agriculture in America. He believes that the American people are beginning to understand the importance of safe and sane farming principles.

The book is presented in a way to make it interesting, it is to the point, condensed and quick in thought, for he knows the farmer and he knows all about farming, and knows how to tell about it.

The chapter headings are: The Frontier in Farm Life; Why Farmers Think as They Do; The Cost of Family Living; Questions That Confront the Farm Woman; Where the Farm Family Trades; Landlords and Farm Tenants; Agriculture and High Schools; Agriculture and Hospitals; Agriculture and Churches; Affording Modern Institutions; Re-Planning a City as a Place Not to Live In; Defense of Farming; Movements of Population to and From Farm; American Agriculture in American Art; The Coming Rural Municipality; People on Sub-Marginal Land; Sources of Hope for Rural Life.—(The Century Co., New York.)

WHY I WROTE "TARZAN AND THE ANT MEN."

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

I might tell you that I was prompted by an artistic urge that would not be denied expression, or that clamoring readers from Herschel's Island to Patagonia and from Oshkosh east to Oshkosh insisted upon another classical interpretation of jungle life, but the truth of the matter is that Joan is sixteen and loves to dance, which is an expensive pastime with shoes at eighteen dollars a pair, and that Hulbert blossomed forth in long trousers and evening clothes all in the same year, while the demands of Jack for rifle ammunition, marbles and kite strings threatened to exceed the supply.

It must be wonderful to be able to devote one's self to art for art's sake, a luxury which I have never been able to afford.

FICTION RECEIVED.

Re-Creations. By Grace Livingston Hill. A story of a young college girl's influence on her family. It a real interesting and beautiful romance that should be read by every girl. (Lippincott, Philadelphia.)

The Terriford Mystery. By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, whose exciting mystery story has a splendid plot, also contains a delightful love story. The author is well known as a clever writer, and in this story she holds the reader's attention to the last page. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

Pacific Tales. A collection of the most interesting of the adventure stories of Louis Becke, a native of South Wales. Lord Pembroke said of the author: "He knows the Pacific as few men dead or alive have ever known it." (J. B. Lippincott company, Philadelphia.)

Thrice Told Tales. Selected and with an introduction by Dr. Blanche Colton Williams. This is a collection of unusually interesting stories—they have been published, re-published, and even republished in anthologies. They were written by the author's class in advanced story writing, Columbia university, and with her "Handbook on Story Writing" which is a guide to short story construction, will prove a most useful gift to the college boy or girl. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

My Story That I Like Best. By Edna Ferber, Irvin S. Cobb, Peter B. Kyne, James Oliver Curwood, etc. With an introduction by Ray Long, editor of the Cosmopolitan, reviewed by Dr Blanche Colton Williams, chairman O. Henry memorial committee of award. The reader will find this an interesting test of what it takes to make a real good story writer, why the author selected the above for interviews, as well as the remarks made by each author.

This Woman. By Howard Rockey, a new author, and one who probably did not decide to write a story until he really had something to say. (The frontispiece is by P. J. Monahan. The Macaulay company, New York City.)

JUNIOR BOOKS.

Stories of Shepherd Life. By Elizabeth Erwin Miller Lobinger, author of "The Dramatization of Bible Stories and Dramatization in the Church School." This little volume is a second-grade course of study suitable for primary departments of church schools, week-day schools and religion and church vacation schools.

The stories in this little volume are woven around the active life lived by the Hebrew shepherds, and are so interesting that even the little tots will enjoy reading them.

The introduction is by the author, who was born and reared in Washington, where her father was a prominent judge.

Mrs. Lobinger's books have found their way into nearly every home where there are children, and they are on the right road to these homes. Sooner or later the gate will be found open, the door will be ajar, and the children will present an attractive picture as they study the Biblical stories of the shepherds. (The University of Chicago Press.)

The Gem Hunters. By Francis Rolt-Wheeler so well known as a lover of boys, and as the popular author of U. S. service series, and other interesting stories that appeal to boys and girls.

But there is no subject of more interest than that woven around precious stones. In this book the author shows what science has done and the story of wonderful gems. The central figure is a South African youth who, just prior to the Boer war, found on his uncle's property, a magnificent diamond, and the experiences connected with the find will give the boy or girl who reads about it a number of real thrills. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepherd company, Boston.)

Heavenfolk. By Waldemar Bonsels. The translation of this book was made by Adele Szold Seltzer. The poems were done in English by Arthur Guiterman.

The little folks who failed to read that charming book, "The Adventures of Maya, the Bee," which was written for adults, but children have found it of greater pleasure, have missed a beautiful story.

Do you remember Sprite? For some reason or other, he has been sent away from his own home and is now living on earth with the trees and plants, with the frogs and the to-whit-to-whoo's, the birds and the foxes. Each chapter of this exciting story is filled with interesting incidents about animals which are real thrillers.

"Heavenfolk" will be found to be just as full of the out-of-doors as Maya, with the same characterization of the animals, the same interesting style, all of which will appeal not only to the little folks but the big folks as well.

The author is a very likable man and he ranks with the great lovers of nature in literature. There is a charm about his stories that possesses a personal appeal. (Thomas Seltzer, publisher, New York.)

The Janitor's Boy, and Other Poems, by Nathalia Crane, a very attractive little girl of 11 years. She was born in New York city and her love for poetry even when a few years old was quite noticeable. When she was nine years old she sent a poem to a newspaper which was accepted and so has all the other poems she has sent, though it is known now that the newspapers did not know she was a child. The first verse of the poem, the title of the book, is as follows:

"They're going to build a flat-house on the lot next door to me;
And Roger Jones, the janitor's boy, is as mad as he can be.
The lot was like a tropic isle, with weeds and rubbish fair,
With rusty cans and coffee pots that looked like Roger's hair." . . .

(Thomas Seltzer, publisher, New York.)

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

The American Review of Reviews for June has for its frontispiece a picture of President Coolidge and his reconstructed cabinet, the cabinet members being Harry S. New, postmaster general; John W. Weeks, secretary of war; Charles Evans Hughes, secretary of state; Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury; Harlan F. Stone, attorney general; Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy; James J. Davis, secretary of labor; Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture; Herbert C. Hoover, secretary of commerce, and Hubert Work, secretary of the interior.

Under the titles "The Progress of the World" and "Leading Articles of the Month" the reader will be well posted on all public affairs.

Scribner's Magazine for June contains many attractive illustrations, with the leading serial by John Galsworthy, entitled "The White Monkey." The frontispiece, "Copley Square," is reproduced from a drawing by Frederick Polley. The table of contents presents interesting articles both in prose and poetry. This issue of Scribner's is well worth being a June issue.

One of the most attractive magazines received is the World Traveler, which is always welcome and is always filled with interesting, attractive and beautiful donations to the reading public. This is not only a real June issue, but it presents Great Britain with a number of articles attractively illustrated.

The cover design by Burton Rice is entitled "A Lass of Edinboro' Town," with frontispiece "The Old Bridge House, Ambleside." This issue is filled with many calls for the traveler to cruise down the Thames, and to fish for Shakespeare's "Fool Gudgeon." While each article is interesting, "About, Aboard and Abroad" should not be overlooked.

McClure's Magazine for June is also a very attractive number, beginning with the cover by Howard Mingos and with frontispiece of unusual design, besides many interesting articles by popular writers, the reader will find this a most interesting number.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

"In Unfamiliar England," Beautiful Travel Book, Reissued.

L. C. Page & Co. have reissued in new larger format, with additional chapters, Thomas D. Murphy's beautifully illustrated travel book—"In Unfamiliar England."

Captain January Film Will Be Released at Once.

The film production of Captain January, Laura E. Richards' famous story of New England coast life with Baby Peggy in the stellar role, will be released at once, so Principal Pictures announce.

The prize-winning essay of the General Federation of Women's Clubs upon the subject, "What Do the Two Million Seven Hundred Thousand Federated Clubwomen Want From the Publishers?" won by Mrs. John R. Roberts, of Philadelphia, is presented in the June International Book Review.

The essence of the successful composition is: "We Clubwomen want books that are interesting. We want biography that shows a man's soul as well as the facts of his life. We want autobiography that is not conceited. . . ."

It is Mrs. Ayscough's comprehensive knowledge of the Asiatic language and culture and Miss Lowell's brilliance as a poet that has made "Fir Flower Tablets" one of the most important and delicate interpretations of Chinese poetry.

In Days Gone By

A Sigh for the Ten, Twent', Thirt'!

BY O. O. McINTYRE

I am wondering if true enjoyment in the theater is not on the wane. I know I do not experience the pleasurable hours I used to enjoy at the play. Either something has happened to me or to the theater. Perhaps both.

The theater clientele has changed. Gallery gods are now occupying plush upholstery in the first row of the movies. We used to look down with certain contempt upon the shameless shoulders and bulging shirt fronts below.

Up there we were crunching peanuts and soda pop and players "played up" to us. Our verdict made or broke a show. Today the theater creaks with dignity. It has become a place for women to show jewels and for men to show their women. The play is not the thing.

A scandalized star who has been occupying the first pages for several weeks can pack a playhouse. We go to a play—and the next day forget what it was all about.

We used to remember every line. I recall when the harassed father said to his erring daughter the night she knocked at his door with the little bundle of humanity in her arms: "So you've come back, have you? Well out of my house. I'll have no dinner of your gittin'." And I hissed that hard-hearted old rascal until I was gasping for breath.

And I applauded just as heartily when the saintly gray-haired mother came in and said: "I wouldn't send a dog out on a night like this. Father, if she goes, I go with her." Whew! Great stuff! No fooling.

Do you remember, too, when the homespun old father in another play came in to the dinner table and saw the fellow from the city at the table? There was the rogue with white ascot tie, checkered coat, riding boots and fierce black mustaches. How I despised him! When father saw him, he stood up, trembled with rage and shouted:

"Mother, I won't sit at the table with that thar' city chap. He ain't done right by our Nell!"

Hooray, Hooray! Whistles, screams, cat calls. Ad lib.

The theater has become too highbrow. Walter Pater once sized it up with: "But, beside those great men there is a certain number of artists who have a distant faculty of their own by which they convey to us a peculiar quality of pleasure which we cannot get elsewhere; and these too have their place in general culture, and must be interpreted to it by those who have felt their charm strongly, and are often the objects of a special diligence and a consideration wholly affectionate, just because there is not about them the stress of a great name and authority."

And again Gilbert Seldes, one of the foremost young writers of our time and editor of the high-browish Dial, wrote in his most excellent book, "The Seven Lively Arts," this mighty truism:

"If there were an academy I should nail upon its door the following beliefs:

"That Al Jolson is more interesting to the intelligent mind than John Barrymore, and Fanny Brice than Ethel.

"That Ring Lardner and Mr. Dooley in their best work are more entertaining and more important than James B. Cabell and Joseph Hergesheimer in their best.

"That the daily comic strip of George Herriman (Krazy Kat) is easily the most amusing and fantastic and satisfactory work of art produced in America today.

"That Florenz Ziegfeld is a better producer than David Belasco;

"That one film by Mack Sennett or Charlie Chaplin is worth the entire oeuvre of Cecil de Mille;

"That 'Alexander's Rag Time Band' and 'I Love a Piano' are musically and emotionally sounder pieces of work than 'Indian Love Lyrics' and 'The Rosary';

"That the circus can be and often is more artistic than the Metropolitan opera house in New York.

"That Irene Castle is worth all the pseudo classic dancing ever seen on the American stage, and that the civic masque is not perceptibly superior to the Elks' parade in Atlantic City."

The theater needs a mighty debunking. It must be purged of its clap-trap. It is my contention, to go the versatile Mr. Seldes a bit better, that Al Woods has and will continue to furnish more amusement to theater patrons than the Theater Guild. And I believe Mr. Woods has more of the art that makes the theater great than the entire guild outfit—estimate men and women that they are.

It is the fashion now to sneer at "The Old Homestead" and "Way Down East." We bend the knee to cycle plays and foreign importations. So far as I can see there has only been one importation from other shores in New York in ten years that really stood out and that is Charlot's English Revue—a musical hodge podge.

Pope advised: "Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring." Theatrical producers should heed the warning. The theater is primarily to entertain. It may carry its lesson but that should be subjugated to the bigger idea—amusing the public.

There is no single tradition in the theater today. There are a hundred and one traditions. The art is distracted under a multiude of vague ideas. Each one is striking out for some new path when all should get back to the fundamental—entertain the public.

With one exception the critical estimates of the New York plays the last season were to me disappointing. That one exception was "The Show Off"—and it was an elaborated vaudeville sketch.

Mr. Seldes again is right when he says that the theater makes too much effort to prettify and restrain. The theater appeals to our hoydenish sense. That is why such harlequins as Bert Savoy, Ed Wynn and several others are so popular.

Not so long ago I was in a small midwest city over night and I attended a trouping stock company's performance. The offering for the evening was "Human Hearts" a relict of a happier time in the theater.

I enjoyed every moment of it and not only that there were several scenes that misted my eyes. The scenery was moth eaten and the curtain stuck twice on the way down but it was amusement just the same.

Upon returning to New York I went to the opening night of a magnificently staged production. It was breath taking in beauty in spots, but it creaked somehow and I can honestly report that I enjoyed the stock company performance much more.

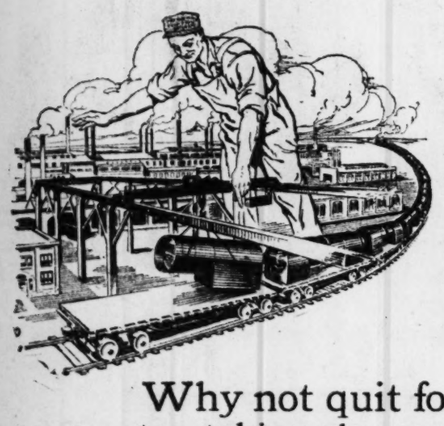

Where are the stars today to take the place of those who are gone? I pause for reply. Think of them—Sol Smith Russel, Nat Goodwin, Joe Jefferson, Kyrle Bellew, Frank Wilson, William Gilette and John Drew.

KEWANEE

Built in one piece at the factory

An apple may look healthy and attractive on the surface, Horatio, but sometimes when you cut it open you find a hungry worm in the center. It may be just like that with your new building. You might make it look like a wing of Buckingham Palace, but if you put an indifferent heating boiler in it, it's an apple with a worm in it.

We often wonder what people are thinking of when they spend thousands of dollars on new buildings and treat the boiler as if it were a mere incident instead of what it is—the very heart of the building.

Why not quit fooling—why not stop taking chances—why not eliminate false economy and install Kewanee All Steel Firebox Boilers? They will last as long as the building, add immeasureably to its renting and sales-value, and insure the comfort of the people in it.

Kewanee All Steel Firebox Boilers are riveted together in one piece at the factory, doing away with the possibility of leaky joints such as often occur in the boilers which are assembled on the job.

The Old Man Behind the Boiler will give you figures on costs and savings that will open your eyes. Write to him for an eye-opener.

Donald Norton
By Robert E. Pinkerton

A vivid and inspiring love story, set against a colorful background of ambition and strife, hatred and race prejudices in northern forests.

Janet Layard is a new type of heroine, a daughter of the wilderness who declines a life of sheltered comfort and ease, and braves custom and public opinion for the man she loves. Full of action, adventure and poignant romance, Mr. Pinkerton's new novel is a book you will want to read again and again.

And a fierce raging thirst is your lot---
There is tasty and cooling refreshment
And the joy of a cool autumn morn
In the bright sparkling bubble of NuGrape
That laughs weary summer to scorn.

The Kiwanis and Rotary clubs were served with luncheons, the profit of which went into the fund. The Lions' club went without luncheon at all, enjoying an "eatless" luncheon, in order that the entire proceeds might be given to the veterans.

Following program for the May meeting Mrs. C. M. Clark, honor guest of the evening, gave reminiscences of the time when Jefferson Davis visited Albany in 1886. She told of talking with him, and displayed a handkerchief given her by him.

The meeting was a celebration of the birthday of Jefferson Davis, and Dr. Robert B. Harris was the chief speaker.

Mrs. Jack J. Hill read a paper on Jefferson Davis the soldier, stressing his service to the United States prior to his entrance into the Confederacy. "Facts about the capture of Davis at Irwinton, Ga.," were given by Mrs. Harry Cobb. Mrs. Tom Simpson gave the origin of the name of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Dr. I. A. White, pastor of the First Baptist church of Cartersville, also addressed the chapter.

June Message From State Regent

It is with reverent thanksgiving that I am able to send you my third message as state regent of Georgia D. A. R. I feel that I have been on a long, long journey and have just returned. This return is due largely to the many messages of love and encouragement sent me by you, beloved daughters. Your prayers for my safety must have been wafted back to this earth and have settled around my bed, for I have been conscious at all times of your solicitude and care.

With renewed health and strength, I feel an added zest to get back to the work which has never been absent from my thoughts.

Our chapters have selected their officers for the new year; our committees have been arranged, and all is in readiness for an auspicious start in September—a start that will carry us through the year, in splendid achievement, reflecting honor and glory upon our illustrious society.

During the summer months, let us plan and think well over the part which each of us is to play in the fulfillment of our obligation to our society. To you, regents, I would suggest that you map out the plan of action which you intend to pursue, in spreading patriotism in your community, in contributing to the various causes of our D. A. R., and in conducting the business of your individual chapters.

For you, chairmen, it is the appointed time to become acquainted with the members of your committees—communicate with each one, exchange ideas as to how best the work of your committee be carried out—create a spirit of cooperation with them, which will tend toward increasing their interest and enthusiasm. Then have your circular letters ready to send out by the first of September to each chapter regent.

To my officers I would say this is a splendid time for study and preparation for the strenuous work which is ahead of us. To the leaders of any organization falls the obligation of being informed.

And to the rest of the 4,800 members of our state society, I would say, you are the backbone of our organization; without your loyal cooperation, very little can be accomplished, for "a chain is only as strong as its weakest link." I do not believe there is one single weak link in our Georgia society. To you I am pinning my faith; my belief that all will be well, and that the work of our organization will go forward with zeal to a triumphant conclusion. We have what is needed for this, for besides interest, enthusiasm and loyalty for a great cause, we have love—"and the greatest of these is love"—so I wish you a happy and profitable summer, with renewed energy for the real beginning of our work in September.

(MRS. JULIUS) MAY E. TALMADGE.

Magna Charta

BY MRS. CHARLES F. RICE.

American liberty is founded upon English liberty. From 1607 'till 1776 we were Englishmen. If our rights as Englishmen had not been infringed, it is probable that we would still be English, as Canada, Belize and Guina are English.

English growth in liberty prior to 1776 was our growth. By successive steps Englishmen wrested the proud rights of self-government. Magna Charta was the first step. Then habeas corpus, trial by jury, declaration of rights, petition of rights and no taxation without representation and representation in the house of commons, and in the house of peers have made England a democracy. Otherwise, we might be the victim of a centralized government like the military tyranny of Germany, or the absolutism of a czar-governed Russia.

We can no more write the political history of America without its English foundations than we can write it leaving out the names of George Washington, James Monroe, Thomas Jefferson and Woodrow Wilson.

June 15, 709 years ago was one of the great days of our calendar of human events. On that day, June 15, 1215, King John, of England, signed the Magna Charta at the historic conference of Runnymede, at the demand of the barons who sought relief from royal oppression. It is called the keystone and basis of English liberties.

Some one has said, it may not have laid down any new principles, but the signing by the unwilling John marked the dividing line between the age of traditional rights and the age of written charters of liberty. It was the true forerunner of the parliaments and statutes that came after. It reduced old principles to writing and gave them a vitality and force that they did not have before.

This charter provided certain rights so that justice could no longer be sold, denied or delayed. It established the supremacy of the law over the will of the king, and has been called "liberty's foundation."

The benefits accruing from the charter are today the precious possessions of civilized mankind.

One of the greatest British statesmen has termed it the "Bible of the English Constitution." The characterization is justified as the great charta has stood between the will of autocracy and the common people.

How Day Originated.

Magna Charta day is celebrated throughout the English-speaking world as a memorial to the fundamental unity of purpose of a widespread race whose responsibilities for the future of the world of democracy are now greater than ever before.

The idea originated in the United States of America, arising from a plea of J. W. Hamilton, of St. Paul, Minn., for a further strengthening of the bond of friendship and good will among the English-speaking nations, whose ideals of justice and government are drawn so generously from the principles laid down in Magna Charta 600 years before our Declaration of Independence was promulgated and before the American constitution became an establish fact.

Twenty thousand churches, Sunday schools and newspapers observed the day in 1923.

The movement has been twice recognized by official proclamations by Governor Trinkle, of Virginia, and Mayor Rolfe, of San Francisco, examples which will be widely followed in the future.

An annual commemoration of "Liberty's Birthday," June 15, will serve to set out in sharp relief a wholesome example to the wide world.

We, as colonists from the mother country, brought as our most precious possessions this gift of liberty an inheritance from our forefathers. This love of liberty brought about in course of time the war of the American revolution and the Declaration of Independence, the war of 1812, which made America the freest country on God's earth, the refuge of the oppressed and the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Our forefathers invoked the deathless basic principles of Magna Charta when they declared their independence and when they planted the firm rock of the American constitution.

The general assembly of the Presbyterian church at Toronto, Canada, unanimously approved the plan of the annual commemoration, also the bishops of the American Methodist church at their meeting at Portland, Ore., indorsed it in 1921.

Leaders of thought in the United States have expressed the view that the finest service the people of the seven English-speaking nations can render to the world at this hour is to make themselves better understood to each other.

In America Magna Charta is often appealed to in discussions of constitutional questions, and its promise of protection by "the law of the land" is incorporated in some form in every American constitution.

Anglo-Saxon Heritage.

It should be borne in mind that the great branches of the Anglo-Saxon family have no closer tie than that which has grown out of the clauses of the Magna Charta. Traced back to the charter the interests of the people are common.

Magna Charta observation means the clearer view of the great principles that make us, though living under different flags and climes, a people with a common interest and a single purpose.

It should bring a realization of our mutual purposes and ideals, and give to those coming to our shores from foreign lands an early and true conception of the principles upon which Anglo-Saxon civilization is founded and as much as anything else, instill in us, one and all, much needed appreciation of our heritage, the Magna Charta.

The provisions of Magna Charta, never repealed though to some extent amplified, were solemly reasserted in the famous declaration by parliament in 1628, which we call the petition of right and were finally re-enacted in the Bill of Rights of 1689.

Thus the charta of 1215 was the starting point of the constiutional history of the English race, the first link in a long chain of constitutional instruments which have moulded men's minds and held together free governments wherever the English tongue is spoken.

The Bill of Rights was in the thoughts of those who framed the first constitution of Massathusetts and Virginia when the colonies renounced their allegiance to the British crown.

Much of the document of 1689 was incorporated in those constitutions. From them the old provisions, largely in the original words of the great charter, passed into the federal constitution of the United States.

The federal constitution supplied a model for republican constitutions, enacted in later days.

The civilization of the world, to a considerable extent, is necessarily international in its origins, representing the high attainments of the different races, various peoples, diverse countries.

Let us hail the birthday of Magna Charta as a yearly rededication of allegiance to what these principles mean to us. Let us solemnly dedicate ourselves afresh to a new doctrine of peace, friendship and cooperation, and above all, patience in our relations with each of the seven nations whose cooperation will insure peace on earth, establish justice and determine the cause of future civilization along safe and noble lines.

There is no room for divided allegiance; there is no room for more than one flag, one language, one loyalty, and that to the land of our birth or adoption.

Chapter Reports

Oh! But my washwoman is Different!

We hope so, Madam. But certainly every one's washwoman isn't different. Because the average washwoman takes your clothes to surroundings which you scarcely like to think of.

The plain facts are these. Unfortunately, the average washwoman does not come from the better sections inhabited by her race, where sanitary conditions are regulated, but from the outskirts—yes, from the hovels where sanitation is little thought of. You can hardly expect cleanliness under such conditions.

Your Laundry, with its immaculately clean wash rooms, its sanitary wash methods, offers you a family wash service at practically the same cost you pay the washwoman, and the work cannot be compared. When you think it over, of course you are going to choose your Laundry.

The Peace Demand

The American peace reward was offered by Dr. Edward Bok and the plan which the jury selected was given the widest publicity. The Council of Women for Home Missions, through its twenty constituent boards tried to secure an expression of opinion from all the women of the protestant churches.

Letters, ballots and a copy of the plan were sent to all the auxiliaries in southern Methodism. It is not known how many women voted, but enough is known to be sure that the number was very large. Evidence also shows that it was overwhelmingly in the affirmative. The organized women of America stand committed to the principle of American membership in the world court. East and west, north and south, they have expressed themselves to that effect. Their natural conviction is that law and friendship are better than war and enmity. If membership in the world court is a step toward world peace, that is a step they desire to see taken at the earliest possible moment.

Women are dedicated to unrelenting opposition to war spirit with its train of evils in the form of crushing taxation, preparedness, defensive measures, race and national prejudice. All of these are the exact opposite of the missionary spirit which the women of the protestant denominations have been cultivating for the love of God and humanity for so many long years. Southern Methodism has sent its relief money and its missionaries of the gospel of peace to Europe, to Asia, to South America, to Africa. That is its time to declare that war is a crime. The decline and annihilation of many flourishing missions is directly traceable to the recent war. Substitute moral force and public opinion for military and economic force. To this sentiment the council women of the M. E. Church, South are glad to subscribe.

"And what was the last word the Master said that parting night when they broke brother-bread. That night He knew men would not let Him live. Oh, what but 'peace I leave' and 'peace I give?' And yet behold: near twice a thousand years and still the battle-wrath, the grief, the tears. Let mercy speed the hour when swords shall cease and men cry back to God: 'There shall be peace!'"

DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The busiest women of the W. M. U. of the Atlanta Baptist association are the efficient and untiring district secretaries, each of whom has under supervision societies of the several grades in ten or more churches. During the recent W. M. U. convention these secretaries performed the important task of meeting the trains at all three stations in order to give all the messengers and visitors prompt welcome to our city. Our Bapist women are indebted to Mrs. J. Lawrence Turner, chairman, with Mrs. T. E. White, co-chairman; to the other faithful secretaries, Mrs. L. O. Freeman, Mrs. P. A. Williams, Mrs. W. O. Mitchell, Mrs. J. W. Smith and Mrs. W. F. Wesley, and to their large corps of assistants, for their gracious and hearty service.

GEORGIANS REELECTED.

Mrs. George Westmoreland, of Atlanta, and Mrs. W. P. Anderson, of Hapeville, have the honor of being reelected as members on the home misson board of the Southern Baptist convention.

MRS. KING SPEAKS.

Through the invitation of Mrs. Lillian Moore, director of missions in the W. M. S., of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, Mrs. C. W. King, mission chairman of the W. M. U., of the Atlanta association, was present on Monday last, at the monthly meeting and was cordially welcomed and introduced by Mrs. Edwin Stewart, the leader of the afternoon. Mrs. King made a fine address and outlined the plans for the missionary training school which is to be held at the Baptist tabernacle the last week in June.

PRAISES W. M. U. SESSSIONS.

It was extremely gratifying to Mrs. W. A. Hartman, superintendent of the W. M. U., of Atlanta, to receive a letter from Mrs. W. C. James, president of the southern union, in which she said: "It is with exceeding pleasure that I have the privilege of writing to you on behalf of the Woman's Missionary union to express to you personally our great appreciation for the splendid piece of work you did as general chairman of arrangements for the annual meeting in Atlanta. There was nothing left undone that could be done for our comfort and the efficiency of the meeting. Everything moved on so smoothly that I could scarcely know there was any machinery at all, except for the fact that it had to be else things would not have run smoothly. I want you to express my personal appreciation to every chairman, to every member of the committees, to ushers, pages, to the musicians and all who had any part in the work there in Atlanta. . . . I want to say to our pianist, Mrs. A. L. Cumming, that it has been a long time since we had a pianist who was on time at every meeting and on the job all the way through. I never turned my head to look in that direction and signalled for a hymn, but that I found her ready and responsive."

There are many delightful writers among our Georgia women and it is always easy to find those who are willing to use their talents in the interest of their denominational affairs. Those who read the reports of W. M. U. convention in the Christian Index of recent issue, are grateful to Mrs. W. F. Withaft, of Fort Valley, and Mrs. U. B. Frost, of Hepzibah, for the faithful and excellent accounts given of the 1924 convention which reached on the first evening a high spiritual level and was sustained throughout the entire meeting.

Training School Graduate

Miss Dorothy Kellam, who recently was graduated from the Baptist W. M. U. training school in Louisville, Ky., and who has taken the position of young people's leader of the W. M. U. of North Carolina.

A Real Bible Class At Ponce de Leon Baptist

The Young Women's Bible class, better known as the Holliday Bible class of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Bapist church, is a real Bible class. A real Bible class for the reason that the purpose of the class is Bible study.

Every Sunday school class, you will say, is organized for the purpose of Bible study, but may I tell the reader just what kind of Bible study this class is doing?

A little more than two years ago a group of young women were meeting every Sunday morniug and listening quietly to lectures on the Sunday school lessons by the teacher of the group. Finally the group began to feel that just listening was not learning and that a systematic study of the Bible would be far more interesting and helpful towards spiritual growth (for we come to Sunday school for spiritual growth) than merely listening to a lecture, however good the lecture and inspiring the lecturer.

These young women asked the teacher of the class if he would be willing to undertake the teaching of this group if they would consent to be real students of the Bible. He said he would try. Now this teacher happened to hail from Scotland and had had special training in Bible study and Bible teaching and he welcomed the opportunity to teach those who were really anxious to know more about the Bible. So a real Bible class had its beginning.

Gospels Studied.

The first study was the first three gospels with a text book, "The Teachings of Jesus" as a supplement. The text book provide daily Bible readings and discussions. The study was completed in about four months, then the class took up the study of "Genesis" with Marcus Dodd's "Genesis" as a textbook. A thorough study of Genesis was made, then the class spent some time on the Book of Psalms. Next the Book of Isaiah was studied with George Adam Smith's exposition of Isaiah as a text aid. This was a rather hard piece of work and some members of the class felt that the effort required to get the real meaning of Isaiah was too great, but the more effort the better the result, and the class finished the study by saying, "We would not take anything for our study of Isaiah."

Of course every Bible class must study Paul's teachings, so the next attempt was the study of Philippians. The study continued for about three months rather successfully. The class is now beginning a text book entitled "When God and Man Meet," by Dr. W. J. Young, of Emory university.

Real Bible Class.

With this course of studying as a background for the deep and rich truths of the Bible, would you not call this a real Bible class?

The class, although organized mainly for Bible study, has an activity upon which its members are working enthusiastically, and that is a scholarship fund. With this fund the class hopes every two years to enable some young women to finish her college education. One young woman has already finished her college course by the aid of this fund.

Many of the young women of the class are members of the Business Woman's League of the church, and that organization is doing a wonderful work towards unifying the young women in civic, social and religious work.

Purpose, power, personality, and spirituality are the aims of the class Mr. W. R. Halliday is the teacher, and so the name Halliday Bible class, for it is through his teaching and leadership that the members of the class have gotten the deeper and richer meaning of the Bible.

MARIE COLLINSWORTH,
Class President.

Georgia B. W. M. U. Notes of Interest.

At the first meeting of the executive board of the W. M. U. of Georgia a pleasing reminder of that great assembly was presented in a letter from Mrs. W. C. James, president of the W. M. U. of the South. In the letter which was addressed to Mrs. W. A. Hartman, superintendent of the Atlanta association, Mrs. James expressed her appreciation of the manner in which Atlanta women handled their share of the convention and remarking on the smoothness with which the machinery worked. She spoke especially of her appreciation of Mrs. A. L. Cumming, who acted as pianist for the W. M. U. meetings and who was present and on time at all of the sessions. The absence of the corresponding secretary, Miss Patrick, was necessary on account of her attendance at the meeting in Nashville of the 1925 program committee of the Southern Baptist convention.

The quarterly report of Mrs. W. S. Lawson, of Macon, personal service chairman, was read, Mrs. Lawson not being able to attend. She gave the total cash and valuation for personal service for the quarter reported as $7,185.55; 3,022 visits to the hospital, 8,323 visits in the interest of Sunday schools, 6,404 garments distributed, 9,179 trays and baskets given out, 5,385 flowers sent and 7,980 tracts and books and 655 Bibles distributed were other items listed on this excellent report.

A letter from Miss Ida Rhoad, field worker for the state, was read, reporting a vast deal of work she had accomplished in the last month. She reported attending seventeen meetings, 2 Sunday schools, making 23 talks, conducting 9 open conferences, working in three associations (Daniel, Rehoboth and Smyrna), organizing 9 new organizations (4 W. M. S., 4 Sunbeams and 1 Y. W. A.), reviving 1 G. A. and 1 Sunbeam Band and speaking at 5 district rallies. Miss Rhoad is an enthusiastic worker, and most encouraging reports are received from the districts she has visited.

The names of Misses Ruth Chapman, Lucile Brown and Ruth Maness were presented to the board as having passed all examinations and desiring admittance to the Training school in Louisville, Ky., and these were favorably passed on. Miss Audie Crowe, who was awarded a scholarship to the Training school last month on condition that she successfully pass the physical examination, met this requirement and is ready to enter the school. Much is expected of these young women. Mrs. I. B. Smith, White Cross chairman, spoke of having had a conference with Dr. T. W. Ayers, who has just returned from China. Dr. Ayers expressed himself as being in great need of a new clinical outfit and fifteen white iron beds for children. The board voted to have new White Cross leaflets containing up-to-date information as to White Cross work. The members expressed deep regret at the prolonged illness of Mrs. Ayers.

Among the out-of-town members present were Mrs. J. C. Lanier, West Point; Mrs. G. S. Borders, Cedartown; Mrs. J. P. Nichols, Griffin, and our beloved Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, president of the Georgia W. M. U.

Appeal Being Made For Needed Funds For Appleton Home

Throughout the diocese of Atlanta an appeal is being made for funds to carry on effectively that very important institution, the Appleton Church home.

This home throws protecting arms about homeless and orphaned children, giving them not only physical and moral care in the present, but it also plans for their future through such fundamental training as sends them forth better prepared to meet the issues of life.

All who gives serious thought to the present drift of things are aware that at no time have zones of protection and safety been more essential. The sort of atmosphere in which a child lives and grows was never so important. In fact the future social fabric depends upon the child's reaction to its environment today, while in the last analysis it is such provision as the adult makes, or fails to make, for these future citizens that will eventually come back as a blessing or a curse.

So it is not only a beautiful thing but a very wise thing to support in an adequate way those institutions which create the life-sustaining atmosphere where the best qualities of childhood are developed.

Such a place is the Appleton Church home, a sacred charge upon the Episcopal church in the diocese of Atlanta and now in need of funds. Ideally situated in the environs of Macon, it offers that which is conducive to a sound physical growth, while through the loving ministration of those within the home the child's spirit expands as a flower responds to the rays of the sun.

School for Mission Study Will Open in Tabernacle

Feeling the great importance of mission study among the Baptist women of the W. M. U. of the Atlanta association, Mrs. C. W. King, the mission study chairman of the association, with a keen sense of the need, has arranged a program of mission study to be carried out in a training school for leaders. This school will open at the Baptist Tabernacle, Monday, June 23 and continue Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings from 10:30 to 12 o'clock. The graded system will be observed, and there will be three classes taught at the same hour. Mrs. C. W. King has been unanimously chosen by the district workers in conference, as teacher of the Woman's Missionary society class, and the book selected is, "A Decade of W. M. U. Methods," by the brilliant Mississippi W. M. U. writer Miss Margaret McRea Lackey.

The Y. W. O. and G. A. class combined, will be taught by Mrs. J. H. Coin and the text book will be, "Ann of Arva," by Hubbard. The Sunbeam class will study, "The Honorable Japanese Fan," an extremely popular work by Margaret Applegarth, a noted young people's leader.

Missionary Study a Necessity.

It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of mission study in its relation to the success of world wide missions. We can not be interested in things of which we are ignorant. "Interest has its origin in knowledge." It is quite possible to gauge a woman's knowledge of the success and importance of her denomination missionary program when she says "I am not interested, and the whole thing is a failure anyway." For "No one is ever down on Missions that is up on missions," and no one is thoroughly "up on missions," without being willing to give some of her valuable time to the study of Kingdom enterprises. The value of our prayers, work, and gifts is intensified, amplified, and multiplied when we have a righteous zeal, which is according to knowledge. One of our W. M. U. workers has recently said, "Not only does information produce inspiration, but inspiration brings with it perform—ation."

Certificates and Awards.

The annual report of the W. M. U. to the Southern Baptist Convention calls attention to the fact that "the Union has for a number of years had mission study for one of its particular aims but it was not until 1918 that special courses were outlined and a system of certificates and awards for such study was inaugurated. The courses of study include certain fundamental books such as "All the Word in All the World," "Stewardship and Missions," "How to Pray," "Intercessory Prayer," "Talk on Soul Winning" and "The Plan of Salvation." Of course the regular study books on home and foreign missions are included in the course as well as two books on W. M. U. history and the W. M. U. Manual of Methods.

During the past year, there were 17,099 study classes and 97,738 seals were awarded for the study of one book. The seals are pasted on certificates. Official seals are awarded when a certificate has a sufficient number of small seals attached; 4,407 official seals were awarded this past year. Having completed 17 mission study books and taught a class allied with Woman's Missionary Union, 195 women received Honor Certificates. An advanced course of mission study is being prepared, for which, diplomas will be awarded to those, who have finished the certificate courses."

Mrs. C. W. King is not only interested in increasing the number of mission study classes in her association, but also that examinations shall promptly follow, so that the Atlanta association (one of the most able in the state) may take a high place on the roll of those who receive oficial seals and Honor Certificates. Our state president, Mrs. W. J. Neel, writing of Georgia's record as a whole in mission study says: "The widespread and deeper interest in mission study is among the special successes of the year. Through the inspiration of Mrs. Paul White, the Georgia chairman many successful schools of missions have been held, resulting in genuine revivals and new visions of stewardship." Thus it is that mission study makes for progress in every department of missionary endeavor.

Baraca Class Gives Mock Marriage.

An event of Monday evening was a mock wedding held at Central Baptist church. The Win One Baraca Class, represented by Howard Bussey, and the Central Baptist Philathea class, represented by Miss Lucy Whatley, represented the bride and groom.

Mrs. Charles Maddox sang preceding the ceremony. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by the church's pianist, Mrs. Frank Jackson, as the bridal party entered. Mrs. Laura Metcalfe, president of the Philathea class, was the matron of honor. Miss Thelma Whatley, first vice president of the Philathea class, was one of the bridesmaids. She entered with Dr. Thomas M. Godwin, groomsman of the Win One Baraca class.

Miss Cora Roberts, second vice president of the Philathea class, entered with Jack Sproud of the Baraca class as groomsman. Preceding the bride, little Miss Daisy Metcalfe, flower girl, entered scattering sweetpeas and daisies in her path.

The bride, Miss Lucy Whatley, secretary of the Philathea class, entered with H. W. McLarty, teacher of the class, who gave her in marriage. The bride was beautiful in a white satin gown trimmed in crystal beads and sequins. She wore a white tulle wedding veil with a bandeau of silver. She carried a bouquet of white roses, white sweetpeas and fern.

She was joined at the altar by the groom and his best man, C. Geiger, president of the Baraca class.

An impressive ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. W. L. Hambrick.

Y. W. C. A. Has Varied Program for Week.

The Y. W. C. A. board of directors will hold its monthly meeting Monday at association headquarters, Peachtree Arcade. It will be the first meeting of the president of the Y. W. C. A., Mrs. Archibald Davis, with the directors since her return from the recent national Y. W. C. A. convention in New York when she was elected a member of the national board of the association for a term of six years.

The officials of the Y. W. C. A. camp at Highland, Ga., announce that girls are registering as far in advance as the closing week. Miss Lucy Marvin Adams, camp director, urges that girls register at the Y. Peachtree Arcade, at their earliest convenience in order that all applicants may have an opportunity to go to Camp Highland during the season, instead of the registration being filled from time to time by the same groups. It is stated that the camp is arranged this season to accommodate 5,000 from June 7 to September 2, which gives an opportunity for a large number to attend.

How Many Women Peel Their Faces at Home

Any woman nowadays may quickly rejuvenate her complexion at home by a safe and painless peeling process. It has been found that ordinary mercolized wax, applied like cold cream at night, causes the thin veil of lifeless, sallow or blotchy cuticle to gently flake off in tiny particles, revealing the fresh, vigorous and beautiful young skin underneath. The wax peels off only the unsightly outer film. The process defies detection and unveils a clear, white, lovely complexion which is, of course, a perfectly natural one. Many thousands of women now use mercolized wax, which may be obtained at any drug store. Naturally the process also removes all such surface blemishes as freckles, pimples, tan, liver spots. It makes the face look years younger. —(adv.)

Lemons Bleach the Skin White

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It cannot irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It cannot be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared. —(adv.)

MY DAUGHTER WOULD CRY AT EVERYTHING

Nervous and Irritable. By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Became Entirely Normal

Clinton, Wisconsin.—"My daughter was in a very run-down condition, and was irritable, and would cry at every little thing she was so weak and nervous. As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped me when I was a girl I gave it to her to build her up, and the results were all that we could wish for. I wish that every mother with growing girls would try it for these troubles girls often have. I had taken it myself before my girl was born, and she was one of the nicest babies any one could wish to have. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to women and girls and cannot praise it too highly." — Mrs. I. A. HOLFORD, Box 48, Clinton, Wisconsin.

Mothers can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

After the invocation by Dr. R. O. Flinn of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, announcements were made by the principal of the honor society members—from the senior class: Misses Carolyn Essig, Eloise Gaines, Vera Kamper, Louise King, Gladys Neal, Lucile Stone—from the junior class: Misses Jane Dillon, Mary Ellis, Alie Glenn, Ethel Reid, Evelyn Williamson.

Senior Class Day.

One of the loveliest features of the commencement was the senior high class day, which was held on Monday afternoon, June 2, on the front campus of the school.

The exercises for the class day have always been planned by the seniors, and belong especially to them. This year the plan and sketch of the exercises was written by Miss Ann Lane Newell of the graduating class. Heretofore the exercises have included only the high school girls, but this year the children of the lower school were asked to participate.

At the beginning of the exercises trophies won during the year were awarded. The class basketball trophy, presented to the school by the student government association, was won by the junior class. Tennis cups were given to Miss Marion Bonnell and Miss Louise King. Track trophies were won by Miss Elizabeth McWhorter and Miss Dorothy Ingram.

The greatest honor to be awarded below the senior class was a silver loving cup, presented to the school several years ago by the high school scout troop, to that girl most representative below the graduating class. She must attain a high scholarship, and be active in athletics and student life. Miss Jane Carmack, of the sophomore class, won this honor.

"Napsonia" Is Highest Honor.

The feature of the afternoon, "The Crowning of Napsonia," is given annually. Napsonia represents the spirit of the North Avenue Presbyterian school, and she is chosen from the senior class, by the seniors. Miss Mary Armstrong, president of the senior class, was chosen Napsonia.

The fairy queen for the occasion, also an honor, was chosen from the junior class, the junior marshal, Miss Mary Ellis. The junior class was the fairy court, the freshmen the jesters, and the sophomores the garland girls. Miss Verderey Rosenbusch, as the spirit of springtime, was the principal dancer, calling to her assistance her fairies, her flowers, sunbeams, raindrops and her butterflies, all of these dances being given by members of the lower school.

The class day was under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Clanton, assisted by Miss Verderey Rosenbusch, and music by Mrs. R. S. Russell, assisted by Miss Spencer McGaughey and Miss Mary Leffingwell.

The ceremony was performed at 6:30 o'clock, and was witnessed by a large gathering of friends and relatives, including prominent out-of-town guests.

Miss Farley Weds Mr. Shelor On Saturday

A beautiful home wedding of Saturday was that of Miss Margaret Farley and Edgar Grogan Shelor, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Farley, on Highland avenue. Rev. Alexander F. Copeland, Jr., of Hamilton, Ga., cousin of the bride, performed the ceremony in the presence of only the immediate family of the bride and groom.

The improvised altar was erected in the living room between two wide French windows. Banked against the wall were palms. At intervals were placed tall pedestal baskets filled with Easter lilies. On either side were cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers and wreathed with southern smilax.

The reception rooms were elaborately decorated with roses, sweet peas and snapdragons. Handsome silver vases, baskets and bowls filled with these lovely flowers were artistically arranged on mantels, bookcases, consoles and cabinets.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was beautifully rendered by Mrs. D. E. Sudduth, sister of the groom. "To a Wild Rose" was played softly during the ceremony.

The bride was handsomely gowned in a model of biege crepe Romaine trimmed with rows of narrow grosgrain ribbon and tiny French roses. Her hat was a becoming blue bird model of pink chiffon and yellow straw with hand-painted chiffon flowers. She wore a corsage of bride's roses showered with valley lilies.

After an informal reception the bride and groom left for a two weeks' motor trip, after which they will be at home at 996 Highland avenue. The bride's going-away costume was a tailored suit of sand poiret twill with hat and furs to match.

In the living room where the ceremony was performed was an improvised altar covered with a flower trellis of Dorothy Perkins roses and Easter lilies. On either side of the altar, there were huge jardinieres of roses. Burning white and pink tapers shed a soft glow over the bridal party.

The impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. W. A. Woodruff, of Atlanta, uncle of the bride, in the presence of close friends and relatives.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Elizabeth Allgood, of Atlanta, sang sweetly, "Oh Promise Me," accompanied by Miss Mary Belle Woodruff, of Decatur, who also rendered "Flower Song" softly during the ceremony.

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the bridal party entered. First to enter was the matron of honor, Mrs. Charles L. Pickens, sister of the bride, gowned in Oriental lace over crepe, carrying an arm bouquet of pink roses. The maid of honor, Miss Mattie Lou Still, entered with the bride. She was lovely in a frock of white canton crepe and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Joe Miot, of Atlanta.

What's What in the Shops and about town

Bride or Graduate!

Vacation or honeymoon planning—it matters not where you go, the smartest thing to wear on your trip, as well as the most serviceable—is a tailor-made suit from Devera, on the 7th floor of the Grand Building. The Devera Shop is to Atlanta women what Brooks Brothers is to New York men—the last word in distinctive tailoring. If you will go by and see them I know you will agree with me!

Paris reports that woman wants but little lingerie and that little exquisitely made of the finest of fabrics and laces—really, we women have known that always—'tis nothing new!

After the Honeymoon

I don't suppose there is a woman living that does not dream of a wonderful little home all her own to be had some day. And this month of June—the month of brides and wedding bells, brings the dream of home just a little nearer and dearer. So of especial interest is this bit of news!

Here is opportunity to make the dream come true—on June 12th, at 10 a. m., Piedmont Crest is to be sold! Piedmont Crest is a new subdivision just beyond the beautiful Morningside Park, located in Atlanta's most desirable neighborhood. To be sold for a song!

I know just how much it cost to have a wedding and honeymoon and usually there is very little left, but even in this case you can afford to begin buying that little home for years to come. The lots at Piedmont Crest are to be sold at auction for only one-fourth cash and the balance arranged on terms covering two years.

This Auction is to be conducted by J. P. King Auction Company, which has made a reputation in that they have handled such properties as to offer the buyer a real result-bringing investment without the risk of the ordinary speculative deal. This is another of their wonderful offerings.

A bus will leave the Piedmont Hotel for Piedmont Crest on June 12th and will take you free of charge. You simply can't afford to overlook this opportunity of a lifetime.

Summer Sports!

A store that has an appeal to every woman who is a housekeeper! "The Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady," as Kipling once wrote, "are sisters under the skin." And while the Rogers stores appeal to the Colonel's lady, Judy O'Grady wants what the Colonel's lady uses—and can have it too, if she shops here, for, through quantity buying for their 200 stores, Rogers is able to give its customers quality at low prices!

When Vacationland is calling and we are already complaining of that most disturbing of maladies—spring fever—the Rogers stores are doubly interesting to every one just now because of the many, many outdoor and picnic foodstuffs to be found there! Even if you can't take that trip to the mountains or seashore you can have a wonderful day with the children out of doors and with very little trouble with the aid of the dainties from Rogers.

For instance, Rogers' mayonnaise mixed with a bit of Underwood's deviled ham or tongue spread on a slice of Rogers' bread will make delightful sandwiches for the occasion. And who ever heard of a picnic without pickles?—again, you find the very best at low prices at Rogers, for they handle the famous Heinz pickles and relishes. Olives, both stuffed and plain. Block's national biscuit line will furnish sweet cakes.

One of the most important things to take is a good cool drink—and Rogers has the original nice drink for picnics—Za-Rex! I say nice for the picnic, it is good for all times and occasions, but especially convenient for the picnic because all one has to take along is a small pint jug of these fruit juices, and when lunch time arrives add water and ice and you will have the most delicious drink! This pint jug makes a gallon. Za-Rex is made of pure fruit juices and will not hurt the kiddies. It is prepared in many flavors, such as orange, lemon-lime, strawberry and also a good grape punch. Another thing about Za-Rex, it is very inexpensive!

There are dozens and dozens of other picnic necessities to be had at Rogers' (even the picnic basket), and with the convenience of the Rogers stores there is no reason in the world why this summer should not be one long to be remembered by both yourselves and the children. Nothing, as you yourself know, is longer remembered or gives more pleasure to the child than the picnic days of childhood — so gather up the kiddies and a few of their friends and take the car and ride away to a wonderful day out in the open!

Hot Weather Comforts.

Even when the thermometer does register 90 degrees in the shade, and there doesn't seem to be a bit of breeze stirring anywhere, it's such an easy task to make yourself comfortable with the many hot weather electrical appliances from the Georgia Railway and Power Company. They'll double the pleasure of summering at home!

Every home, as well as every office, needs an electric fan. Then you can be assured of a refreshing breeze all the time. You surely would not think of drinking stagnant water, so why breathe stagnant air when you can get every size and almost every price fan at the Marietta street office of the Power Company? These are all standard makes.

As the hot weather gets nearer and nearer at hand housewives, more than anyone else are interested in making the summer work just a bit cooler and easier! And when we think of all the many fluffy ruffles of the summer frocks that must be fresh for the summer days, I know of nothing that will lighten the work more than one of the Power Company's electric fans. Here, too, are many other electric conveniences that will not only insure a well-ordered, smoothly-running home, even if one has servant difficulties, but many that will add charm and beauty to any residence!

4 O'Clock Fashion Gossip.

Don't you just adore the new large hats? They all have droopy brims, the kinds that mysteriously hide one eye and let the other eye tantalize the world. I saw one that I especially liked. It was white picot straw and was draped with exquisite Spanish scarf which hung alluringly over one side.

They told me in the shops that everything Spanish is very new. They showed me the new Bambalina sailors with their dashing red roses and their little black lace veils. They are dear!

Wherever smart women gather for tea this summer there are sure to be a number of lace-trimmed hats. A daring black satin sailor with black lace dipped a tiny bit over one eye. A large droopy hat of narcissus yellow picot straw with ecru draped gracefully over the brim and down over one shoulder! These charming new lace-trimmed hats are doubly alluring because they are so unlike the severe tailored styles so popular for sports and street wear! (adv.)

Distinguished Visitors

By Mrs. August Burghard, Macon.

The Georgia W. C. T. U. is honored by its distinguished visitors this jubilee year.

We entertained the National and World W. C. T. U. president, Miss Anna A. Gordon, at the national-state jubilee celebration in Augusta early this year, then Mrs. Ella A. Boole, the national vice president and world treasurer, will be our state convention speaker at Albany in October.

In July a number of Georgia cities and towns will have as guests Mrs. Rachel Don, president, and Miss M. Henderson, secretary of the New Zealand W. C. T. U.

Of course we will entertain these "whom we delight to honor" in our homes, arrange receptions for them and public meetings, and as Mrs. Armor says, "Give them a warm welcome and help them to see points of interest in your city. Show them where the saloons used to be and the improved conditions now. New Zealanders are the most haspitable people I ever saw."

She says further of Mrs. Don, "She is a good speaker and a good preacher. She is alive, cordial, enthusastic, level-headed and dedicated to the work. She has the love and respect of New Zealanders, high and low."

Miss Gordon and Mrs. Armor both recommend Mrs. Don as an interesting and forceful speaker. Miss Henderson is "a college woman, quiet, ont demonstrative, but pure gold," says Dr. Armor. Mrs. Don says, "Miss Henderson is not a speaker, but the best informed woman we have."

Rev. John Dawson, general secretary of the New Zealand Alliance, sends this endorsement: "I may say that Mrs. Don is one of our most effective women speakers in New Zealand. She is thoroughly informed on the liquor question and speaks with fervor and power. We always feel safe when Mrs. Don is one of our speakers, whatever the occasion may be. God has gifted her above many.

"While in your country she will be seeking both information and inspiration for the continuance of her work in this land when she returns. I commend her to your unreserved confidence. She is worthy of every kindness and care and whatever help she receives will find its response in increased, efficient work both with you and with us."

Writing about their approaching visit from our national headquarters Mrs. Jennie Kemp says: "World prohibition of the liquor traffic is our goal. Here is an opportunity to help furnish some worth-while ammunition for that fight.

Wet Propaganda From America Hurts New Zealand.

"As you know New Zealand is one of the strategic centers in the world-wide campaign. Three times the dry forces have secured a majority vote, but the peculiarities of the election laws in New Zealand, requiring two-thirds majority over the total vote for opposing measures, have lost them the victory. In 1925 they vote again and our New Zealand comrades think the one thing which may lose them the victory is the reports of failure of prohibition in America, with which their papers are filled.

"Miss Henderson writes: 'Just as surely as the sun rises every day our morning paper will have a long cabled story from America to show how impossible it is to enforce prohibition, and as we read our prayers go out to you have comrades who are in the midst of the strife.'

"With true W. C. T. U. heroism these two workers are coming to America for the sole purpose of finding out the facts and gathering information to use in winning the 1925 campaign in New Zealand."

Mrs. Don writes of her desire for "the privilege of seeing the work of your great organization, but above all to see prohibition in force. We want to know your work, to catch the inspiration of your warrior women so that we may be surcharged with dynamic power to renew our efforts when we return."

Mrs. Don speaks on the liquor traffic, on child welfare and on New Zealand, the latter she illustrates with slides.

The Georgia W. C. T. U. will cooperate to make their Georgia visit a success in every way. The treated our loved Dr. Armor royally when she was their guest. We will show them what southern hospitality is like.

Beautiful Jubilee Party.

An affair of great beauty and delight was the reception with the Columbus Theresa Griffin W. C. T. U. entertained recently. The jubilee spirit prevailed and the fifty and golden idea was carried out in pleasing manner.

The invitations read in gold:

News From Second District.

Among the business transacted at the third and second district jubilee meetings, held at Colquitt, groups were formed and leaders elected: Southern group, Seminole, Grady, Decatur and Thomas counties, Mrs. H. J. Sandlin, Thomasville, leader; eastern group, Worth, Tift and Colquitt counties, Mrs. Willard Harmon, Tifton, leader; central group, Daugherty, Mitchell and Baker counties, Mrs. C. H. Cross, Albany, leader; western group, Calhoun, Early and Miller counties, Mrs. Gordon Roberts, Colquitt, leader.

Mrs. Frank T. Brown, Cairo, was reelected president, a richly deserved honor. The other officers are: vice president, Mrs. Stewart Rogers, Boston; secretary, Mrs. Will Crawford, Thomasville; treasurer, Mrs. J. Q. Smith, Cairo.

A few items from some of the county president's report follow:

Grady county, Mrs. W. O. Harrison, president: As there are 43 white schools in Grady, the Cairo W. C. T. U. was divided into 43 committees, each committee sponsors a school, visiting it frequently, securing signers to total abstinence and anti-cigarette pledges, cooperating in temperance assay contests, distributing W. C. T. U. leaflets and other literature—17,456 pages. In several instances prizes for the best essays were presented; 20 winning essays have already been received. A picture of Frances Willard was given one school and most schools given flower seed and plants to beautify the grounds. Temperance day programs were furnished every school. With the aid of the efficient county school supervisor a splendid health crusade was "put over," the W. C. T. U. furnished 750 health cards, 45 manuals, 43 record books, 435 song books and 354 reward buttons.

Colquitt county, Mrs. W. V. Strother, Moultrie, president: Had two luncheons for rural teachers, distributed in rural schools 100 Union Signals, 800 leaflets, spoke on negro work at district meeting at Waycross, held three meetigns with negroes, organized an L. T. L. with 40 members, visited negro schools and secured 30 pledge signers, wrote 50 letters and made several trips in interest of the work. The report ends with a glowing account of the wonderful accomplishments of the large Countrie W. C. T. U., its influence for good permeating the county.

Miller county, Mrs. B. C. Bird, president: Held several successful public meetings, posted posters in schools and drug stores, hold regular meetings, have a Y. P. B. organized, carry on departmental work.

Decatur county, Miss Georgia Fleming, president: An essay contest was held in all Decatur county schools on March 28; subject of essays, "Why One Gains by Total Abstinence."

The winners were Dorothy Latham, sixth grade Climax school, first prize, $5; Hugh Guffey, sixth grade, Climax school, second prize, $3; Carl Jackson Edmonds, fifth grade Pine Hill school, third prize, $2; James Hodges, sixth grade Brinson school, fourth prize, $1.

The large number of essays were unusually good. "They showed considerable originality of thought and treatment, evidencing earnest search and hard study." Miss Fleming and her helpers did much work making preparation for this worth-while accomplishment.

Miss Colclough and Mr. Welchel Announce Engagement

Unusual social interest throughout Georgia centers in the announcement in today's Constitution of the engagement of Miss Frances Etta Colclough, of Penfield, Ga., to Robert Fred Welchel, of Atlanta. This announcement is of particular interest in educational circles of the state, where both Miss Colclough and Mr. Welchel are widely and favorably known.

Miss Colclough is the youngest daughter of John Martin Colclough and the late Mrs. Frances Boswell Colclough, of Penfield. Through both her maternal and paternal ancestry the bride-elect is related to families long identified with the growth and progress of that section of Georgia. Miss Colclough is a graduate of the Georgia State College for Women, and of the Georgia State College of Agriculture. She was one of the first class of twelve young women to graduate from the University of Georgia, receiving her degree of bachelor of science in home economics with the class of 1920. During and since her college days Miss Colclough has been a leader in all activities for the development and advancement of women. Her efforts have contributed no small part in establishing standards that have helped to break down old traditions and prejudices against women at the university. She is a member of the Alpha Mu society, the honorary home economics society of the university. She was the first president of the university Y. W. C. A.

Since her graduation, Miss Colclough has been engaged in home economics work in Georgia, first as district supervisor of extension work for women and girls, with headquarters at Augusta, and later as state home demonstration agent with headquarters at Athens. In this capacity, Miss Colclough has traveled widely throughout the state, and has been instrumental in establishing home economics work in Georgia on the high plane it occupies today. She has made countless friends in every section of the state who will be interested in her approaching marriage.

The groom-elect is the son of the late A. M. Welchel and Mrs. Julia Reed Welchel, of Gainesville. Both the Welchel and Reed families are prominent in north Georgia. Through his father, Mr. Welchel is connected with the Brown family which has furnished two governors to the state. Mr. Welchel is a graduate of the state college of agriculture at Dahlonega, and also of the University of Georgia. During the World war, Mr. Welchel served as a lieutenant in the aviation division of the service. For a number of years he was connected with the extension division of the state college of agriculture, but for the last two years he has acted as field agent for the sttae bureau of markets.

The home was attractively decorated with Dorothy Perkins roses, the sun parlor where the punch was served having been converted into a bower of roses and ferns.

Mrs. Burns was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Charlie D. Tillman, and her two charming young sisters, Miss Elizabeth Tillman and Miss Jim Tillman. An attractive feature of the occasion was the part played by the little son of Dr. and Mrs. Burns, Master McIntosh Burns, Jr., presenting the shower of presents to the guest of honor.

Miss Minnich To Wed Hugh B. Bodenhamer.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Wilson P. Minnich, of Uhrichsville, Ohio, to the marriage of their daughter, Achsah, to Hugh B. Bodenhamer, of Decatur, to take place on Saturday afternoon, June 14, at 4:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, 234 Trenton avenue, in Uhrichsville.

Miss Malcolm Weds John Britton McGirt.

Sylvester, Ga., June 7.—A wedding of wide interest to a host of friends was that of Miss Claire Elizabeth Malcolm to John Britton McGirt on Tuesday, June 3, at the home of the bride's mother in Ty Ty. Only the immediate families and a very few friends were invited to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Charles Augustus McGirt, cousin of the groom.

A very artistic altar was improvised in the living room of ferns and smilax and a profusion of white hydrangeas and roses. The scene was lighted by green and white tapers. Immediately preceding the ceremony Mrs. R. A. Heinsohn sang 'Perfect Love" to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Francis McGirt, sister of the groom.

The bride entered with her sister, Mrs. Wood, as matron of honor, and was met at the altar by the groom with his best man, James McGirt, his brother. The impressive ring ceremony of the Presbyterian church was used. The bride was lovely on this occasion in a modish suit of tan cloth. She carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses.

Mrs. Wood was beautifully gowned in green Georgette and carried pink and white gladioli.

Mrs. McGirt is the third daughter of Mrs. Noel Nelson Malcom, a young woman of unusual attractiveness and charm, possessed of a beauty of character that endears her to all. She will make many new friends in her new home.

Mr. McGirt is the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. James McGirt, of Sylvester, and was reared in this city where he is widely known and universally liked, a young man of unquestionably fine character. He possesses many qualities that will insure for him a successful career in his chosen line of business. He is assistant diversion agent in the Atlantic Coast Line railway offices in Waycross.

Mr. and Mrs. McGirt left on the afternoon train for Richmond, Va. Upon their return they will make their home in Waycross, where they will be at home to their friends after June 15.

No one willfully neglects!
--- And yet ---

THOUSANDS and thousands of people are being robbed of their most treasured gift—good vision. "Oh, my eyes are all right!" you may say, but reflect for a moment. Do you have headaches? Do your eyes sting and burn when you read long? Do "crow-feet" at the corner of your eyes mark you as a "squinter?"

Every one of these signs indicate poor vision—fading vision — vision crying for help, relief and assistance.

Whether you are a man, woman or child you should heed the call of nature. Stay the thief that is stealing your most treasured gift. Come to the assistance of tingling over-worked nerves. Save your vision from a disastrous wreck that will hold you back all through life.

It is the business of Dockstader's to make and fit glasses that give comfortable vision. A preliminary test will determine whether or not it is necessary to consult an eye specialist (Oculist). Every one of our men are experts and able to advise you correctly —and to fit glasses that will aid your vision.

And remember Dockstader's glasses are good-looking and will add to your appearance.

PRESIDENT OF ATLANTA WOMAN'S CLUB ISSUES MESSAGE

Mrs. Norman Sharp Issues Message to Club Women

Mrs. Norman Sharp, newly-elected president of Atlanta Woman's club, issues the following message to the club membership in which she outlines the department work to be featured during her term of office. She says:

"In becoming the president of the Atlanta Woman's club I am cognizant of the great confidence and trust the members have placed in me and with the same cooperation and assistance given the splendid women who preceded me in this great honor, I feel confident that the work can be carried on successfully and I accept the office with the deepest appreciation.

"Perhaps no period in the world's history has ever felt a more urgent need and been marked with such abiding interest in child welfare and such increasing demands for constructive programs as during this generation.

Child Welfare Measures.

"The club women of America, pleading for better child welfare measures throughout many years, have come to realize more and more that the children can and must have that training which will insure them their natural rights and prepare them for useful citizenship.

"Knowing so well the great need of such a program among club women, who are most all mothers, your president hopes to have 'motherhood training' and 'the development of the child' as the keynote of her administration. The junior department of the Atlanta Woman's club will be stressed as never before, attention being given to such training as is necessary to the development of the girl and boy and at the same time to assure them the most delightful recreation under the best leadership.

"Semi-monthly tea-dances will be given, swimming parties will be arranged by the camp fire and scout leaders under the Woman's club chaperon, open air botany classes will be established and all kinds of interesting activities for young people. Mrs. Clifford Walker, whom we all know to be especially interested in the development of the child, will act upon the advisory committee for the 'motherhood training.' Other experienced leaders have been chosen and it is the greatest desire of your president to see marked results of this efficient training shown in the youth of the club.

"Another special feature which your president will emphasize during the year will be the classes in the various languages—French, Spanish and Italian. Mrs. E. M. Horine will direct the French circle, which promises to be especially interesting to the members. Psychology is another subject which will be discussed by able leaders for the edification of the members.

"In planning for the coming year your president is relying solely upon the cooperation of every member of the club and the united effort of all to accomplish what is a vision that presents itself to her in looking forward to a successful and constructive year, which she most earnestly trusts may be a period of happiness and great achievement.

"Many plans are being arranged by the heads of the various departments, our usual activities going forward as never before, and with the mighty effort of the individual, brought together into one great untity, the value of such service cannot be estimated. A full list of appointments and reappointments will be announced at an early date."

The Business and Professional Women's club entertained with a dinner Wednesday evening. Covers were placed for forty.

School of Health To Meet Sunday.

The regular meeting of the School of Health will be held Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in assembly room No. 2, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

This will be symposium day at which time the members will tell in what way the school has benefited them. Robert Bryan Harrison, director of the school, will preside, and extends a cordial invitaton to the public to attend.

President and Officers Are Honor Guests at Reception

Never before in the history of the Atlanta Woman's club has there been a more brilliant and beautiful party than given Friday afternoon honoring the new president, Mrs. Norman Sharp. More than two hundred women gathered around an exquisitely appointed table to do honor to their new leader.

Garlands of pink roses, baskets of sweet peas and Marguerite daisies, alternating with silver candlesticks holding pink unshaded tapers, adorned the tables. At each guest's place reposed a lovely little corsage as a souvenir of the happy occasion.

Mrs. James Thompson Williams and Mrs. W. P. Dunn arranged every detail to make this a most delightful affair. Mrs. W. L. Fitts, the new director of the dining hall of the club, left nothing undone to have the best service and most tempting refreshments.

Mrs. Sharp Presides.

Mrs. Sharp presided over the tea table and in a most graceful manner expressed her heartfelt appreciation to the members for honoring her as their leader, and after paying a beautiful tribute to the club members she appealed to them for their united support and earnest cooperation. She then introduced Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, first vice president of the club, who responded in her usual charming manner with a few words of appreciation and love for her coworkers.

At the suggestion of Mrs. Sharp a silent toast was given Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, second vice president of the club, in her absence from the city and much regret was expressed in her not being present. Mrs. W. F. Melton, secretary, was presented and in her inimitable way said that she recalled years ago that her family had an old darky on the plantation who expressed the progress of the world as "the old ark is a movin'", and she wished to remind those present that the Woman's club was "a-movin'" very fast, and under the new president she felt convinced would continue its rapid progress. Mrs. Sharp expressed regret at the absence of Mrs. J. P. Phillips, assistant secretary of the club.

A beautiful toast was given Mrs. Sharp by Mrs. James F. Williams. Mrs. J. B. McNelly, daughter of Mrs. Melton, gave a toast to her mother, "the finest one under the sun, who works for her club, her home and mankind; she is young, energetic and the best you can find. She's my pick of all mothers the whole world through; she suits me to perfection and doesn't she suit you?"

Others making brief and attractive toasts were Mrs. Walter Sims, Mrs. E. V. Carter, Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, Mrs. Eva Corrigan, Mrs. John R. Hornady, Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, Mrs. W. P. Dunn, Mrs. W. A. Robertson and Mrs. B. M. Boykin. Mrs. Bun Wylie, regent of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., offered the cooperation of the chapter to the Woman's club and wished for the club a most successful year under the new administration. Mrs. Wylie was followed by Mrs. John A. Perdue, president United Daughters of the Confederacy, and Mrs. W. S. Coleman, regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, who both paid a lovely tribute to the club and offered their loyal support to the new officers. Mrs. De Lox Hill was lovely in her appreciation of the club.

Mrs. M. A. Cox, with her talented daughters, furnished the orchestra music for the occasion as a compliment to the new administration. As a closing feature of the afternoon William R. Brand, who is in the city with the Rebie Crawford committee, rendered several beautiful piano selections.

Handsome Gowns.

Mrs. Sharp was charming in a cream lace model with expuisite hat to match and wearing a corsage of pink roses and lilies of the valley, presented to her by Mrs. W. L. Fitts. Mrs. Stevenson wore an Alice blue crepe with crystal beading. Mrs. Melton was attired in orchid silk with cream lace trimmings. Mrs. W. P. Dunn was handsome in black silk with jet beading. Mrs. James Williams was handsomely gowned in deep cream lace over satin. Mrs. Walter Sims wore an attractive model of black Canton crepe with a touch of orange. Mrs. John Hornady wore a becoming gown of brown silk and cream lace. Mrs. Arthur Hazzard was attractive in black lace. Mrs. Eva Corrigan wore a lovely model of black lace and satin.

Junior Department Holds Interesting Social Meeting

The junior department of the Atlanta Woman's club was delightfully entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, and many interesting plans were arranged for the activities of the department for the coming year. Mrs. Tom Brooke, chairman of the department, which includes Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and the interesting little Blue Birds, is especially enthusiastic over the future program.

The chairman of the three divisions in this work are Mrs. Heywood Simmons, Camp Fire group; Miss Nell Enloe, Girl Scouts; Mrs. Paul LaBlant, Blue Birds division. Since the junior work of the Woman's club will be especially stressed in the new administration many delightful recreational adventures will be staged during the summer months, leading up to real accomplishments during the active club season.

Camp Activisites.

In speaking of the Camp Fire activities, Mrs. Brooks says: "The usefulness of Camp Fire program lies in its flexibility, it works according to fixed fundamental principles, but it is wide in its appeal to girls of all ages and to girls of every type. Its flexibility and scope are shown by not only meeting the needs of an individual girl, but also in its ability to fit in with the schools, churches, settlement districts and every community. It is because of this that the Woman's club plans a definite program to use with the older girls of the junior department." The chairman has received a suggested program from the national headquarters, which will be followed as conditions permit; but at present a purely recreational program will be adopted for the summer months. Girls can win honors in nature lore, handicraft, outdoor cooking, swimming, tennis and all sports, and at the same time have a wholesome good time. The tea-dances will be a special feature for the summer months.

Miss Enloe in giving some of the plans of the Girl Scouts division says: "Our summer activities have already begun, for Saturday the Woman's club scout group attended in a body a scout rally of all the troops of Atlanta at their day camp off Peachtree road. The members had a delightful outing; wading, treasure hunts, quick-fire contests, games, stories around a brilliant camp fire, for it was cool on that date; picnic lunches and awarding of badges were enjoyed. Dugal Evans and Mildred Dolive have the most home and community service hours. We will spend our vacation months in a delightfully planned recreational program of swimming, camping, playing games and taking hikes. With the seven or eight hundred scout members in Atlanta, the work is usually kept up with much enthusiasm, and while the individual groups have their own little outings, frequently they are brought together in a large community camps, which is especially inspiring to the leader and the members and with there existing in the United States alone more than 300,000 scouts, we are constantly receiving new ideas from the various groups over the country."

Group of Blue Birds.

Mrs. Paul LaBlant has in charge the lovely little group of Blue Birds which is really a younger group of the Camp Fire organization. They are trained to follow their older sisters in the program set before them. They are at present engaged in making Blue Bird song books, which will contain the songs these little folks have selected as their choice. They are planning a hike in the near future, when a marshmallow roast will be enjoyed and other recreational features which a young girl enjoys. The age limit of this group is up to 11 years.

Any young girl is eligible to membership in the junior department of the Atlanta Woman's club with the indorsement of two regular members of the club, and each girl may choose the division which most appeals to her, Camp Fire, Scouts or Blue Birds. Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, urges the girls to unite with this department, in order that they may become affiliated with the club and enjoy the splendid programs arranged by the leaders. Those enjoying Mrs. Sharp's hospitality Thursday afternoon were Mrs. Tom Brooks, Miss Nell Enloe, Mrs. Paul LaBlant, Mrs. Louis Elsas, Mrs. John R. Hornady. Assisting Mrs. Sharp in entertaining were Misses Jane Sharp and Ernestine Hornady, members of the junior department.

FOURTH OF JULY PLANS MADE FOR CELEBRATION

Plans are being arranged by the American citizenship department of the Atlanta Woman's club for a great Fourth of July celebration at Piedmont park, on the afternoon of the national holiday.

The central feature of the celebration will be a procession, planned as spectacular and representative as possible, to be held in the huge arena of the park. Units of the procession will be composed of the various patriotic organizations of the city, the war veterans, musical organizations, Red Cross representatives, military officials and every patriotic body interested in commemorating the day.

Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, first vice president of the Woman's club, is general chairman of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, second vice president, and Mrs. J. D. Evans, chairman of the Americanization division of the club, and the members of the citizenship department. Committee are being formed for all details pertaining to the celebration and a meeting of the entire committee will be held at the clubhouse next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Stevenson urges the women, who participated in the arrangements of last year's exercises, to be present Wednesday, in order that every one who wishes may have a part in the forming of the celebration.

Judge Marcus Beck will be the orator of the day. Governor Clifford Walker, Mayor Walter Sims and Major General David C. Shanks, of the United States army, have been invited to participate in the exercises of the day. Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Woman's club, urges the cooperation of all organizations, which stand for loyalty and patriotism, to make this one of the greatest celebrations Atlanta has ever seen on the Foruth of July.

Modern Topics Club To Be Given Party.

Mrs. L. D. Sanders will entertain the Modern Topics club at a spend-the-day party at her home, 83 Springdale road, Tuesday, June 10.

If Mutt and Jeff had only seen this

They would have thought it was indeed "The Lion-Tamers' Club." Just a casual glance as we were passing through our fur cleaning department revealed 4 polar bear skins, 2 tiger skins, a leopard skin and numerous other smaller skin rugs besides fur garments.

The Stoddard processes for cleaning furs—whether rugs or garments—are the results of years of experience and experiment.

We rid them of dirt, harmful dust and moth eggs without subjecting the fur to the least danger of injury. In fact, our process renews the "Life" and pliability of the pelt.

This is the season when furs of all kinds should be dry-cleaned. It will help forestall the ravages of moths.

We pay return postage.

Being the Tale of One Carstairs, Man of Business, Who Has an Unexpected Meeting With His Youthful Self.

THE nickel alarm clock in Carstair's bedroom was not ornamental, but it was guaranteed to rouse from sleep any except those whose only hope lay in the resurrection trumpet. And yet of late it had been obliged to work hard in order to save its nationally advertised reputation. On this particular spring day it is a question if it would have succeeded at all had it not been for the active cooperation of Carstairs' wife, who left the breakfast she was preparing to snap up the curtains and make considerable extra noise. This was not a pleasant duty, but that could be said of most of her duties. In the present instance she made allowance for the extenuating circumances that a man only half awake is only half a man. If Carstairs even after his tub and a shave retained his grouch he was at least in sufficient control of himself by then to use the language of a gentleman.

However, there was not much doubt about the fact that Sam's nerves were jumpy and that his condition was reactive on the rest of the family. The three children were becoming irritable, and even Agnes, who, thirteen years before started with the disposition of a saint, was showing occasional signs of impatience. She was still ready to put up with a great deal because she had an old-fashioned notion that this was woman's chief mission on earth and because she had a good memory. She was thirty-three now, but once she had been twenty; Sam was thirty-seven, but once he had been only twenty-four. And that was not so long ago. As recently as yesterday she had run across a picture of herself taken in her bride's gown which she had put away with a picture of Sam taken at the same time. She was surprised at how vividly old emotion flashed back. Actually she had felt color in her cheeks—the deep, red flush of youth. Surreptitously and with a guilty feeling—as of one doing something foolish—she had kissed the likeness of the alert, eager young man that for years had lain hidden with hers in the same top bureau drawer.

Even Selfridge remained very still, as though listening on.

She spoke the words as one hums a song, unconsciously.

Carstairs was reaching the office earlier than most of the staff. He had started in this game seven years

He had been a tender and impulsive lover, thrillingly responsive to her most romantic dreams. It was silly perhaps to remember, but they used to read Keats together. At the time it had not seemed such a sentimental thing to do because as a teacher of English such subjects were closely allied to his profession. It was not until after the birth of Ruth and Julie that he had sought a more lucrative field with a State street bond house.

While preparing breakfast that morning those sentences had come, rather absurdly, into her thoughts:

Rose bloom fell on her hands, together prest
And on her silver cross soft amethyst,
And on her hair a glory, like a saint, behind the others, and he had this handicap to make up. Instead of finishing his course for a bachelor's degree in three years he had taken four. Moreover, instead of selecting studies as most men did that might have helped in a business career, he had devoted full time to the liberal arts. On top of this he had remained another year, specializing in English for his A. M. And then he had wasted five years more in teaching. It was not easy to make up any such loss of time. For another man it might have been impossible, but he was an intense sort of fellow and at least had learned to concentrate. From the moment he was fairly awake in the morning until at night he was fast asleep he thought in terms of bonds as, if, and when issued.

The result was now beginning to show. He had risen rapidly in the office, and he already had to his credit in the bank some five thousand dollars—more than he would have had at the end of twenty years of teaching. Give him ten years more—

BUT in the meanwhile the firm had taken over an issue of one million dollars' worth of the bonds of the Sequit Light and Power Co., and his immediate duty was to find customers for these. That is what the alarm clock informed him as soon as it succeeded in penetrating his drowsy brain; this was what Agnes reminded him as she snapped up the curtains; this is what the noisy morning rought house of the children reaching his ears as he sat down to breakfast reminded him again.

"Can't you keep those kids quiet?" he demanded as his wife came in with the coffee.

"I'll try, Sam."

She went out, and soon there was silence—an accusing sort of silence. Somehow it made him feel mean. Then he heard whispers and suppressed giggles which made him feel meaner still. It was as though they were laughing at him. When Agnes returned he had shoved his chair back from the table resolved to leave without breakfast, but she managed to smooth him down. That, too, was one of her duties.

"They're so full of fun in the morning," she excused them with a smile.

She was a pretty woman and when she smiled, even with a trace of weariness, appeared still prettier. Tall and slight, she was a type to endure a good deal without showing it.

"Why can't they play without making so darned much noise?" he asked querulously.

"I don't know," she confessed. "But the noise seems to be the most important part of the game. I wish you wouldn't eat so fast, Sam."

She always sat down with him, but she preferred to delay her own breakfast until the children were dressed. She could not, even if she tried, maintain his hurried pace at the table. It was beginning to tell even on him. He was thin and could not afford to lose more weight.

"I've got a tough day ahead," he explained.

"Will you be home to dinner?" she inquired, wistfully.

I can't tell, Agnes. I wish you wouldn't ask me that every day."

"I was going to make an orange pudding," she offered as an excuse.

"Well, the children will eat it. I'll probably get my supper in the station."

He swallowed his last mouthful of coffee, and stopped only long enough to light a cigarette before reaching for his hat and coat.

"You haven't kissed the children this morning," she reminded him.

"Can't wait," he called back, striding toward the door.

He had not kissed her, either, but she let that go. As he went out, she turned back to his empty chair, his empty cup, his crumpled napkin—all that was left of him.

Carstairs knew better. He should have stopped to see the children and he should have stopped to kiss his wife, but this, however did not bring into question either his loyalty or his affection. If he was neglecting some of the commonplace details of the present he was giving all he had to the future. That the present was commonplace allowed no argument. Today was something to endure as decently as possible. With five people cooped up in a housekeeping apartment, nothing more could be expected. Agnes was doing her best—he was man enough to appreciate that—but of necessity she was swept into the messy confusion. A woman cannot rise at six and prepare breakfast without disorder. If he came home at night and found the same condition it was because she had been through a strenous day in her surroundings as he had been in his. The result was inevitable. There was no escape from it. This held true, too, of the children. They were tired and disorganized at the end of the day. Their shoes, and caps and playthings, no matter how often picked up, remained scattered about. It was those he saw, not the children. He had come to associate Sam Junior with a broken visored cap which he discovered in as many places as though it were twenty caps; Julia with a torn Latin book; Ruth with a crippled doll carriage over which he had tripped a dozen times. Agnes herself was scarcely more than a gingham apron seen hanging limply over a kitchen chair or often enough in the bedroom. Such details were not to be criticized. He could thank his lucky stars he had a wife willing to put up with them herself. That is what he did do—and turned his thoughts back to his work.

Carstairs knew twenty men among the firm's customers who could take up that whole bond issue of the Sequit Light and Power co. They would not, of course, but on the way in town he sorted out in his mind the dozen or so who were the most likely prospects. Of these Selfridge was perhaps first choice. The latter had made a good deal of money during the last few months, but there was nothing novel about that. He was always making a good deal of money. Carstairs' acquaintance with him dated back to the summer he had tutored Selfridge Junior, then a lazy, good natured boy of thirteen. The latter was eighteen now and a junior at Harvard, but judging from remarks his father had recently dropped it was something of a question whether or not the boy would come any nearer than that to a degree. Though bright enough, he was no student.

But it was not with the son, but the father, that Carstairs was concerned. Selfridge was one of his most valuable assets because he was the only representative of a bond house who could penetrate that salesman-proof inner office of the Selfridge Brass Works at Waterbury, Conn. He did not always sell the man, but he never failed to pass a pleasant hour with him on the basis, as nearly as he could determine, of those few months of tutoring in English which had helped the boy through his final entrance examinations. The father had taken an unusual interest in the matter.

CARSTAIRS found on his desk that morning a characteristic note from Selfridge.

"If you're down this way within a day or two, drop in," he wrote.

This sounded sufficiently casual, but Carstairs knew enough to board the 10 o'clock train with his brief case packed with as much literature on the Sequit Light and Power company's convertible 6s, due in 1932, as he could collect. And on the way he spent all his time in digesting these data, much as he used to plug for examinations. The convertible feature was the thing to dwell upon. Selfridge was too conservative to buy a 7 per cent bond and too experienced to dabble with common stock of any sort, but this privilege of converting his safe investment into something containing a little more of sporting element—an option of which he seldom availed himself—apparently satisfied some longing carried over from his youth.

It looked like a good omen when Selfridge's secretary ushered Carstairs into the president's office ahead of half a dozen men who were already waiting, and yet if he had only stopped to think about a moment, it was unnatural for Selfridge to show so much interest in the matter of investments alone. Even though he had been one of the few American business men to discount his inventories at the signing of the armistice, there was no such scarcity of good bonds in the market as to urge a man to haste.

"Hello, Sam," Selfridge greeted him familiarly as he entered. "Sit down a minute until I finish a couple of letters."

"Thanks," nodded Carstairs.

He dropped into a chair, and studied this big, brisk man of fifty admiringly. Here was the living center of this rambling brick plant throbbing in its eager task of turning brass into gold. Secure success was written everywhere, but most of all in the man himself, who was heart of the heart. Big framed, sturdy, steady, confident, every word he uttered and every motion he made indicated control and assurance. Carstairs caught sight of a picture of Jack, the boy, on his desk. The latter had grown to look as like his father as a young oak tree like an old. But at that he had a long way to go before he would be like him.

As Selfridge finished his dictation he turned in his chair, and Carstairs reached for his brief case. Time was figured in seconds here, and there were six men waiting.

"The firm is offering an issue of convertibles which I think will interest you," began Carstairs.

The keen gray eyes narrowed a trifle.

"Do you recommend them, Sam?" inquired Selfridge.

"They—"

"You," interrupted Selfridge.

"Why, yes, sir. They are a sound investment. And the convertible—"

"I'll take fifty thousand."

"You mean—"

"That I'll take fifty thousand," Selfridge repeated impatiently. "I want to talk to you about Jack. He's slumped in his English again."

Carstairs smiled. This was a matter of so little consequence to every one concerned that he was inclined to take it lightly.

"Again?" he asked.

"What in thunder is the matter?" demanded Selfridge.

"Nothing, I imagine, except that he hasn't worked."

EVERTHING considered, there appeared no especial reason why the boy should be expected to do much grinding. This four year college period was for him nothing more than a short vacation between prep school and business. His real job was coming afterwards—if at all—right here in the Selfridge Brass Works. A man with that prospect could afford a leisurely pace.

"He seemed to get along well enough the summer you had him," said Selfridge.

"Yes," admitted Carstairs. "That was good fun."

"Poetry, wasn't it?"

"Mostly. I was rather keen about that sort of thing at the time."

"You wrote a verse now and then yourself, didn't you?"

"Now and then," Carstairs confessed uneasily. "So did Jack."

"O, I didn't know that. Remember any of the things he did."

Carstairs shook his head.

"That was five years ago."

"What he had then is what he needs now," declared Selfridge.

"Probably a little tutoring would pull him up, admitted Carstairs. "There are plenty of men around Cambridge."

"He's been to them all. That sort of thing doesn't do him any good. Those fellows are like machines—fit only for stamping on brass. And there's something in that boy more like fine gold. You found it once. I want you to dig for it again."

"I? exclaimed Carstairs. "You forget how long I've been out of teaching."

"What of it?" You haven't forgotten all you ever knew, have you?

Carstairs grew serious.

"I've forgotten a lot, Mr. Selfridge," he admitted. "Breaking into a new game late, I've had to stick pretty close to my desk."

It sounded like a confession. He had a curious feeling of humiliation.

"You're tied up with your own job, I know," said Selfridge, leaning a little forward. "That's why I can't put this up to you as a strictly

BOUDOIR MIRRORS of America

LADY DECIES

KATHERINE CLEMMONS

At the left is Lady Decies, who was Vivien Gould, and at the right is Kathrine Clemmons Gould, who married Howard Gould, uncle of Lady Decies. Although related distantly by alimony, Lady Decies and Mrs. Gould did not meet when the latter went to London. The difficulty was that while one was a figure in exclusive circles, the other had been a figure in the less exclusive rings of the circus.

The "Sawdust Scent" Follows and Embarrasses Gould Family

With a Circus Complex and a Vaudeville Background Kathrine Clemmons Chooses a Great Career. . . . . Howard and Caesar Are In the Same Class So Far As Their Wives Are Concerned. . . . How a Great "Organization" Was Founded On Stationery and Alimony.

BY MRS. ANONYMOUS.

OF all the feminine founders I have known I suppose Mrs. Howard Gould is the most original. Nothing like the organization she founded has ever been seen before or since on the face of the earth, and if the women never noticed her, her project did appeal to the men.

She had the advantage of beginning her operations during the World War when the fine art of founding reached its highest point of perfection in America. Founders sprang up like mushrooms in the night and women "joined" by the thousands. No draft was necessary.

Scarcely had the war started in Europe before a room was engaged at a big New York hotel by a patriotic foresighted, kind hearted woman, who, at her own expense, "launched a campaign" for organizing the League for Marrying Maimed Soldiers. You see, one had to sign a pledge to marry one of them or get somebody to do it.

Some cold-blooded people were rude enough to suggest that the poor soldiers would have quite enough to bear. But the leaguers said those people were probably German spies trying to break up the league. It was all in the by-laws that it was for the benefit of the race. We just couldn't let the race die out, you know, especially when the dues were only ten dollars a year! Of course, in those days the German spies were everywhere.

EVERYBODY remembers those hectic days of horrifying predictions that the Germans were coming over to attack us on the Atlantic seaboard. It was during these anxious times that the sister of the founder of the League for Marrying Maimed Soldiers launched a campaign to raise $500,000 to buy automobiles to get the innocents safely from the seaboard to the haven of the Rocky Mountains in case the Germans really came.

For causes of that sort money simply rolled in. If there was any protest from the Rockies I never heard of it. I suppose all of the able-bodied men were safe in the trenches and the others did not have spirit enough to protest against the pouring in of the innocents.

The time has come, the tourists said, to talk of many thing; of sailing ships and sealing wax, and cabbages and kings. But the tourists' personal conductor could not fool Mrs. Howard Gould. Anyhow, you can always tell a king by his uniform.

Well, it was in those trying and exciting days that Mrs. Howard Gould got right into the middle of the spotlight. Mrs. Gould was once starred by the celebrated Buffalo Bill—or anyhow, he spent a lot of money trying to star her. As Viola Kathrine Clemmons she rose to the dizzy heights of vaudeville, in the days when vaudeville was in its pure state. And then—the marriage with Howard Gould in 1898. The other Goulds took it for granted that Kathrine had a sort of a circus complex and that they would not find her company congenial. They never took the pains to find out. Whatever may be said of the Gould temperament, it is not tainted with any poetic streak. But it was as if they had said to Howard:

You may tame and refine your Kate
if you will,
But the scent of the sawdust will cling round her still.

AS a matter of fact, there is much to admire in the personality and in the character of this remarkable woman, and had they given her a chance she would, doubtless, have upheld a number of the best-known—and perhaps some of the best—of the Gould traditions. But they didn't give her that chance. They disliked her at long distance. Kathrine didn't dislike them but she disliked the Gould mental attitude toward her—disliked it cordially, almost enthusiastically.

But Katherine Clemmons is not vindictive. She is not mean. Her idea of making the Goulds sit up and take notice was to do somehting worthy of their notice, to achieve a position so high and so fine that they would be compelled to respect and to admire her. She craved neither their society nor their affection, but their respect she did want and their good-will she felt that she deserved.

She got over the ambition to be a society lioness. That spell didn't last long. Besides, she soon saw, as she herself expressed it, "there's nothing to that silly social life—nothing a-tall." She wanted a career—a highly respectable, nationally recognized career. She was done forever with the stage and all that on it was. She wanted prestige—the sort that would get her picture in the newspapers so that the Goulds would have it with their breakfast food every other morning or so. Front page prestige, you know. Yes, she would tower above even the Goulds themselves. Be it said here that the most diligent gossip could find nothing to criticize. She had a modest room at the Biltmore. Howard and Caesar were in the same class so far as their wives—and even ex-wives—were concerned.

THE war was in full swing. Women were knitting and parading and there were organizations galore. But, alas, none of them

Moses' Own Portrait and His Own

Why Science Thinks It Has Found an Actual Statue of the Great Hebrew Law Giver and One Bearing Words That He Himself May Have Written There

The inscription on one of the stone tablets found at Mount Sinai, which supplies strong confirmation of the Bible's account of Moses having been taken from the waters of the Nile and later adopted by Pharaoh's daughter Moses, beholding the flogging of one of his countrymen in the brick yards, prepares to slay the cruel Egytian taskmaster. From the engraving by Julius Schnorr.

STUDENTS of Old Testament history were keenly interested the other day in the cable dispatch from Germany telling how Professor Grimme, of Munster university, had succeeded in deciphering the inscriptions on some fragments of ancient stone tablets found at Mount Sinai and discovering in them a sentence which he thinks confirms the Bible's account of Moses having been found as a baby in the waters of the Nile.

But what will interest every Bible reader far more than this is Professor Grimme's amazing discovery of what he believes to be an actual portrait of Moses, the great Hebrew law giver, and a specimen of his handwriting.

The portrait is in the form of a statuette measuring a little more than seven inches in height and five inches in width. It shows the face of a man in the prime of life, but no signs of the long, flowing beard which modern painters and sculptors almost invariably have given to Moses.

The face shown, however, is one which seems to need no patriarchal beard to give it strength and dignity. The passing of the centuries has done surprisingly little damage to the likeness which some ancient sculptor carved into the stone and the nobility of its features can be distinguished with remarkable clearness.

The reason why Professor Grimme is so positive that this statue is a portrait from life of Moses is because of the inscription on the stone tablet that forms its base. This inscription, which the distinguished scholar thinks there is every reason to believe was written on the stone by Moses himself, contains statements which fit in perfectly with the great law giver's life story as told in the Bible and as supplemented on the stone tablets whose deciphering was announced a few days ago.

This statue, like the fragments of tablets recently deciphered, was found at Sinai, the historic mountain where Moses stood when he received the Ten Commandments from Jehovah. For years it remained unidentified because, until Professor Grimme applied his scholarship to the task, nobody was able to decipher the strange system of writing that appears on it. Some authorities were inclined to think that perhaps it was of no great historical importance, and that the script was that used by Syrians who worked in Sinai's mines.

A number of European scholars kept puzzling over the inscriptions, however, and gradually they succeeded in picking out, one by one, all its curious letters. When Professor Grimme took the results of their work to sum up and correct he discovered that the letters they had picked out were the very primitive characters of an almost complete Hebrew alphabet.

The professor at once set to work to find out what words the letters formed and what those words meant. That was years ago and his tremendously difficult task is only just completed.

AND the complete translation of the inscription proves, Professor Grimme believes, that in this statue we have one of the most precious relics of Old Testament history yet brought to light—an actual image of Moses and a specimen of his handwriting.

The inscription as translated by Professor Grimme reads as follows:

For Baalat (The Mistress).
For the increase of the herds.
For the well being of the herds.
For the well being of M-S-H (Moshe, Moses) chief over the stone workers on Sinai.

The full significance of this inscription can be grasped only by studying it in connection with that on one of the recently deciphered tablets which are also attributed to Moses and in which he says:

"I am son of Hatshepsut, overseer of the mine workers, chief of the Temples of Ma'na and Yahu of Sinai. Thou Baalat of Hatshepsut, thou wast kind, hast drawn me out of the Nile and hast set me over the sanctuary of Ma'an, which is on Sinai."

Hatshepsut was a famous queen of Egypt, whose history is fairly well established by various Egptian inscriptions. The mention of her in the inscriptions recently found in the ruins of the ancient temple at Mount Sinai lead Professor Grimme to believe that she was the Pharoah's daughter who found the infant Moses in the bulrushes, who had him nursed and educated and who later adopted him just as we are told in the Bible.

The temple which held the statuette of Moses is easily recognized through Egyptian inscriptions on it as having been dedicated to Hathor, Mistress of Turquoises, and to Sopdu or Sapdu, a diety believed by Professor Grimme to be the same god that was worshipped in Goshen, where the Israelites lived while in the land of Egypt.

Professor Grimme further claims that Sapdu was identical with Yahu, the god of the mountains, and that the latter name is the same as Yahwe, or Jehovah, the name Moses revealed to the Israelites as the proper one for the Eternal God.

The temples having been dedicated in part to the "mistress of turquoises" is explained by the fact that at Sinai there were rich mines of turquoise and also of copper, which the Egyptians worked for a long time.

The amazing new light Professor Grimme's recent discoveries throw on the history of this time make it seem probable that Moses, after being reared in the Egyptian court and instructed in the secret wisdom reserved for the priests and princes, went to Sinai as leader of the Israelites who were sent there from Egypt to dig ore and precious stones from the mines.

IN the temple of Hathor and Yahu Moses set up as a votive offering the statuette which has now been identified as a portrait of him. Either in the temple or at the entrance to one of the mines he also had placed the tablets on which he testified to his great obligation to Queen Hatshepsut for "drawing him out of the Nile" and adopting him as her son.

If the conclusions drawn by Professor Grimme from his laborious translation of the inscriptions on the statuette and the tablets are generally accepted by other Biblical scholars, they will tremendously increase the world's knowledge of Moses and his time. Until now our information about the first forty years of the great law giver's life has been practically limited to what is to be found in the twenty-five verses that make up the seventh chapter of the Book of Exodus.

"We are forced to the conclusion," says Professor Grimme, "that this statuette presents us with the form and features of a man who was priest to the temple divinity. The headdress also indicates that he was a person of importance, for it was worn only by those of high rank. Archaeologists may well speak of this statuette as a portrait of Moses and historians will reach the same conclusions in the light of a further study of the name and personality of this man.

"We are told in the sixth chapter of the first Book of Kings that the Israelites came out of Egypt 480 years before the beginning of the building of King Solomon's temple. This was in the fourth year of Solomon's reign, or about 960 B. C., which would place the exodus from Egypt in 1440 when Moses, according to Exodus vii: 7, was eighty years old.

The sandstone statuette found at Mount Sinai, which Professor Grimme, the great German archæologist, identifies as a likeness of Moses. It shows a man in the prime of life, between thirty and forty years old. The face has strength and dignity, but there is no trace of the long, flowing beard which painters and sculptors usually give to Moses. The character of the headdress indicates that the statuette represents a man of importance in the community and one who was probably a priest in the Temple

Queen Hatshepsut, the Pharaoh's daughter who became Moses's mother by adoption and to whom he expressed his gratitude on one of the tablets which science has just succeeded in deciphering

"THE authentic portrait of Moses which we believe we have in this sandstone statuette, shows him to be a man in the full bloom of manhood, between thirty and forty years old. The statue could not have been made later than 1479 B. C., the year of Hatshepsut's death, and there are strong grounds for believing that it was erected in the temple at Mount Sinai only a short time before that.

"Since the statue shows a man between thirty and forty years old, all this would indicate that he was born somewhere between the years 1520 and 1510 B. C. But I think the year of Moses' birth can be fixed with even greater exactness.

"From various Egyptian inscriptions we know that Queen Hatshepsut was born in 1530 and died in 1479 B. C., and that her reign began in 1515. It is known that she visited the district near the delta of the Nile, where the Israelites were living, in 1515, and there is no record of her going there again. Her reign was such a busy one that it seems quite unlikely she found the time for another trip.

"It must, therefore, have been in 1515 B. C. that she found in the bulrushes the baby whom she later adopted, and this would place Moses' birth either early in 1515 or late in 1516 B. C.

"Moses belonged by birth to the Hebrew and by culture to the Egyptian people. His maturity led him to the consciousness of his Hebrew attachment. He combined a Hebrew name with his Egyptian appelation and retained, in spite of his Egyptian education, a Hebrew sentiment which impelled him to use in his inscriptions the script of the despised Semites which the Egyptians could not understand.

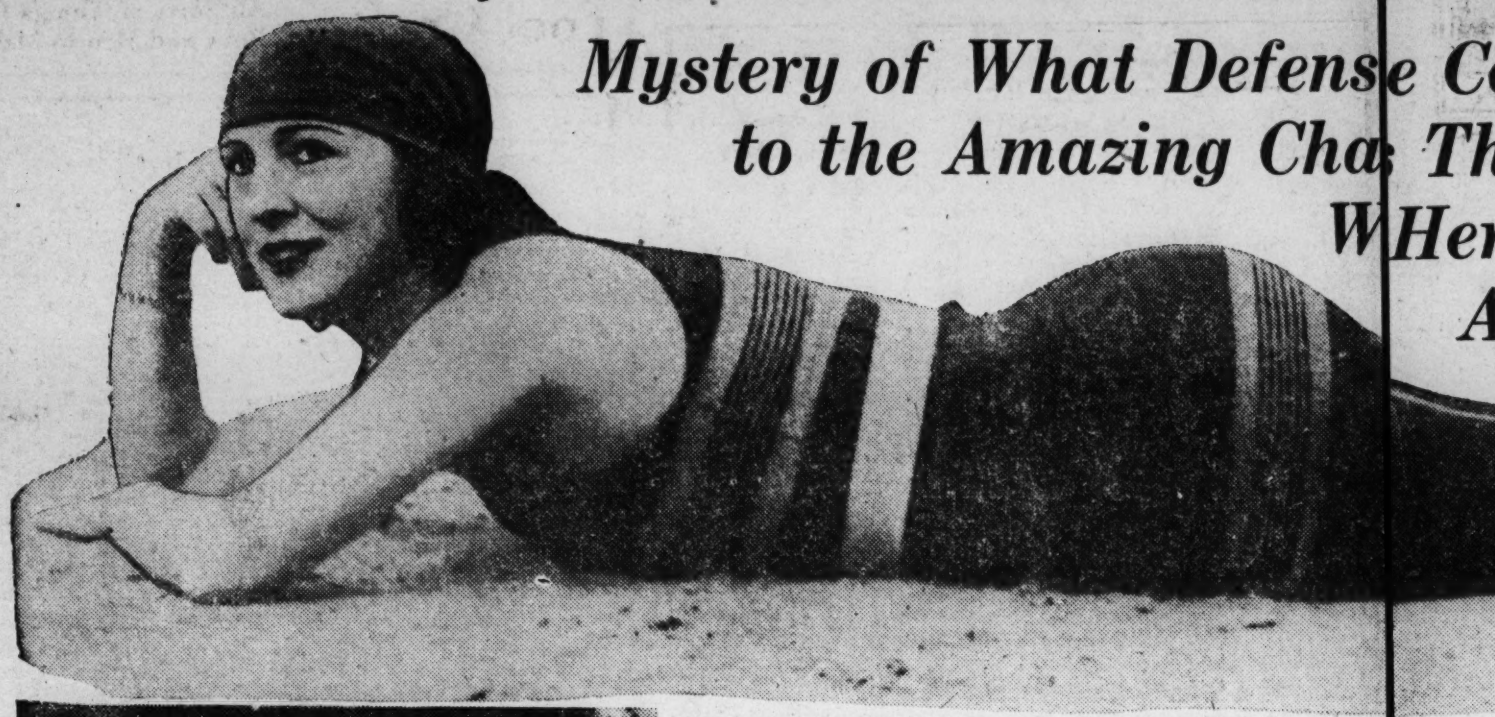

"The Biblical account of Moses' flight from Egypt and his return there is well filled out and explained by our discovery of the inscriptions at Sinai referring to the son of Hatshepsut. The Bible says that as a grown man Moses fled to Midian before the sword of Pharaoh.' Why? He had slain an Egyptian taskmaster who was abusing a Hebrew workman.

"But would that have been sufficient under normal conditions for a member of the royal household to be delivered over to the executioner?

"The picture assumes a different character, if we consider the relation which the man from Sinai bore to the Pharaoh. As a devoted follower of Hatshepsut, he was, after her death, upon the list of those with whom Thutmosis III was ready to hold a bloody reckoning."

Must Harry Thaw's Sister

Mystery of What Defense C to the Amazing Cha Th Her A

WHEN Harry Thaw shot and killed Stanford White because of the wrong he thought the famous architect had done Evelyn Nesbit he escaped the electric chair, as everybody knows, on the ground that the murder was committed while he was suffering from a brain storm.

And now will Harry Thaw's sister, the Countess de Perigny, be forced to plead a similar emotional state of mind in order to escape the consequence of her alleged fondness for the good-looking young married man she employed as chauffeur?

Could it have been a brain storm like that from which the alienists swore her brother suffered which made her become so intereseted in this employee of hers that, as his wife alleges, she wrote him burning letters, loaded him with costly gifts and in other ways quite ignored the fact that he had a pretty young wife?

Emanuel V. Modica is the chauffeur whose relations with the Countess de Perigny are the basis of two suits that are expected to bring out some amazing facts when they are brought to trial in the New York courts.

One is the suit Modica's wife, Madeline, has brought against the Countess de Perigny for $500,000 damages for the alienation of her husband's affections. The other is Mrs. Modica's suit for divorce in which she names the Countess as co-respondent.

In the Brooklyn Supreme Court the other day Mrs. Modica filed three of twenty letters which she alleges to have been written to her husband by the Countess and which are now in the possession of her father, Louis de Martino. Mr. de Martino, in a supplementary affidavit, declares that Modica has admitted that 200 other letters written by the Countess were taken away from him by her husband some time ago.

IN both her alienation suit and the one for divorce Mrs. Modica will undertake to prove that the foreign nobleman's wife was so infatuated with her chauffeur that whenever they were separated she had to exchange letters with him every day.

The first of the three letters filed in court and alleged to have been written by Countess de Perigny to Modica reads as follows:

"August 7, 1923,
"Little Harbor Farm, Woods Hole, Mass.

"Darling: Your letter was a life-saver—as I was feeling low-spirited this A. M. It is a foggy day—and I can hear the doleful sound of the fog-horn out on the cape.

"It is really very nice here and I was out with my sister, cutting flowers in the garden. My brother and his wife are also visiting here now, so I have lots of family and should not be lonely—but—I have not you, and I do miss you more than I ought to—more than is good for me.

"The ride yesterday was lovely—but too long—180 miles, and I got rather tired. It was all I could do to unpack, bathe and get dressed for dinner—but the good, cool night was perfect for sleeping and bed felt good—and this A. M. my eye was all right, so there are compensations.

Harry K. Thaw as he appeared in court in his recent successful attempt to prove that he no longer suffers from brainstorms and is in every way perfectly sane

"Honey, I don't know how long I can stick it out here, but keep on writing until I telegraph you I am leaving. I hate to think of you without the Cadillac, but think I was a pig to take it away.

"Do not let your New York friends impose on you and use your house as a roadhouse. You will get all tired out. Must go down to lunch now. I won't forget you. I shall look for a letter every day. Yours with lots of love,

MARGARET."

The second letter is as follows:

"Woods Hole, Mass., Aug. 9, 1923.

"Dearest Manny: I am getting as dependent on your daily letter as you are on your daily drink, and tomorrow I shall not have any, I know, as the P. O. will be closed for the President's funeral, and I am going to feel lost and sad. To-day I had another swim, and a little fair golf with my sister and brother-in-law. The caddies were scarce, so I used John, and he made a very good caddie and seemed not to mind it at all. He has nothing to do, really, and has good meals in the servants' house and a swim every day, and I imagine from the sounds of the phonograph, a little dance in the evening. So he is enjoying the outing.

"Honey, don't be afraid of my falling in love with any one here. I have only seen my relatives and the Dutch pianist who is stopping in the house, and he, while he is perfectly pleasant, is not the sort to lose one's heart to. He is fat and dense, but does play wonderfully. Tomorow he will play all the funeral marches by way of showing our respect for our dead presiden

"My mother writes that the roa around the place are practically impa sable for automobiles, so when I go shall go by train, and not by moto as I had promised. So you will hav it back again soon, so do not be tem ted to borrow or steal a car. You w have the faithful Cadillac a week fro the time you read this. That is, I can make a graceful get-away fro here.

"I do not like to shorten my vis too much, as my sister wants me stay for a long time, but I think b Tuesday I can leave. I hope so, as want to get back where my two dea ones are. Madeline wrote that Friqu is well and enjoying life. She ha telephoned me to inquire about him.

"What a dull time you must be hav ing—the heat, deadness, strike, every thing closed, and no motor. I a glad you have taken to work about th place. Nothing like work to keep on from thinking.

The third letter was as follows:

"Aug. 25, Cresson,

"Darling: Your third letter came this morning. I never expected to hear that Newark was a place for game. Hope the caretaker enjoyed the rabbit.

"Well, dear, I am leaving here Monday, A. M., between 6 and 8 A. M. It is a long run the second day, about 250—so cannot tell how long it may take the Cadillac.

"Telephone to me Wednesday about 12:30, and we can dinner together for Wednesday night. It will be good to be back, and I am looking forward to lots of dances with you, dear, so be on your toes.

"Mother was awfully nice about my leaving so soon. I really feel rather mean about it, but she has my brother Harry here now and another brother until his wife and little boy arrive the 2d, so she will not be without some of her children.

I think it is good for one to cut it out now and then for a few days. Just to show who has control — one's self or John Barleycorn! Hope I may be able to handle it right when we go out Wednesday evening.

"Now dear, are you figuring out the trip abroad—the S. S. rates, etc., and attending to your passports, etc., etc.? You can call it a loan, if it will make you feel more comfortable. I have not much on hand just now in N. Y., but had notice from Pitts that they have arranged for my letter of credit, and it is a good one, so I shall have plenty when I get over there.

"I shall put a S. D. stamp on this—that you will get it Sunday—as I know what a blue day the Sabbath can be and I do not want you to be sad and despondent.

"Friquet is having a glorious time and looks well. Just a few days now and we shall be together again. I do want to be back with you—I miss you so.

"A kiss, darling, and more later.

"MARGARET."

IN addition to all the volumes of ardent letters Mrs. Modica alleges her husband and his employer exchanged, she offers as grounds for a divorce certain incidents which are said to have occurred while the Countess de Perigny and Modica were crossing the Atlantic together on the Homeric. As further evidence of the relations she thinks existed between the two, she charges that the Countess presented her husband with an expensive automobile and large sums of money.

At the time when she is alleged to have been exchanging daily letters with her chauffeur and calling him "darling" and many other fond names the former Margaret Thaw was a widow. Her first husband, George Lauder Carnegie, died in 1921.

The unique interest which Mrs. Modica charges was taken in her husband began a few months following Mr. Carnegie's death and continued until November, 1923, when the widow was married to Count de Perigny in Paris. During this period Mrs. Modica alleges that Modica ceased to be affectionate to her and often came home in an intoxicated condition, although he had previously been a most temperate man.

The Count de Perigny seems to take a quite sympathetic view of the difficulties arising from the love affair with which his wife is alleged to have amused herself between her first and second marriages.

He hurried her off to Europe to evade service of the papers in Mrs. Modica's alienation suit. Before that, according to the story told in court the other day by Modica, the Count had forced the chauffeur at the point of an upraised cane to give back about 200 letters written to him by the Countess. Then the Count handed the young man a check for $1,000—perhaps to buy liniment for any bruises he might have suffered in the encounter.

But the letters the devoted Count went to such pains to recover were, it seems, by no means all of them. Mrs. Modica claims to have enough others to furnish a strong basis for her claim for $500,000 damages for the alienation of her husband's affections.

What answer will the Countess de Perigny make to these charges of her former chauffeur's wife?

Will she be forced to take refuge in the plea of a "brain storm" that made her temporarily irresponsible, just as her brother Harry did?

There was no difficulty in finding alienists to swear to the reality of Guilt

A Captivating Mystery Story in Which a Crime Is Committed and Solved Under the Spell of Auto-Suggestion

THE darkest hour in Lowell Bradbury's bright successful life thus far was that hour between nine and ten the morning of May 21, following the discovery of his murdered friend Van Wyck Greenfield.

Greenfield failed to respond to the repeated effort of Mrs. Carter, the housekeeper, to arouse him, and Bradbury, who had been summoned from his room on the same floor, broke down the door with a hatchet and found Greenfield stabbed in his bed by an unknown hand. At sight of the tragedy Mrs. Carter threw her hands before her eyes, tottered back into the corridor and fainted.

Bradbury, who had always seemed like a tower, alive to his finger ends, a focus of all the vitality of that gigantically vital city, now sat sprawling in a deep chair in that room so often filled by his vigorous voice and deep laughter.

"Van—Van," he kept repeating. "It can't be true—it can't be true! Why you—of all people—why you?"

"Oh—oh! poor Mr. Greenfield!" wailed Mrs. Carter. "And him so gentle and kind—always doing things for others. What can we do, Mr. Bradbury. What shall we do?"

"Do!" he exclaimed, suddenly straightening and then rising from his chair. "Do! I swear to you, Mrs. Carter, that I shall not rest until the murderer is found! I swear to you that every penny I possess and every hour of my time shall go to the discovery of the criminal! Whoever has done this thing shall pay the full penalty to the uttermost that I can wring from justice."

"Give me Worth ten-thousand—yes—hurry, please." He waited with impatience, clicked the hook up and down angrily.

A faint, muffled voice somewhere finally rewarded him.

"Hello! hello!" He fell upon the instrument like a bird of prey. "Hello! hello! District attorney's office? Give me Mr. Summers—yes—yes—the district attorney himself—no, nobody else will do. Tell him Lowell Bradbury is talking—yes—yes—Lowell Bradbury."

There was a momentary pause, and the speaker hung over the telephone as though fearful that it might abruptly desert him.

"Oh, that you, Lawrence? Yes—Lowell Bradbury. Larry, I want you to drop whatever you are doing and come right up here to my apartment! . . . Larry, don't you suppose I know you have important things? But I ask you to drop 'em and come right up. Something terrible has happened here. Are you coming? Right! Thanks, Larry. I'll expect you in about fifteen minutes," and with a little sigh he hung up the receiver.

Communication with Lawrence Summers, officially the popular and adroit district attorney, but in private life a crony and friend of both Greenfield and himself, seemed in some manner to restore Bradbury to the living currents of life, and, for the first time since his grisly discovery, he began to feel like a responsible being again.

He was startled by a knock at the door. With alacrity he turned to open it.

"Ah, Larry," Bradbury began, wringing the other's hand in the palm that was clammy with chill, "I have never wanted to see you more in my life than I do at this minute," and the changed aspect of Bradbury sent the chill from the ebulient district attorney's palm straight to his gayly beating heart.

"Larry," continued Bradbury, still keeping him at the door, "are your nerves strong enough this morning to stand a violent shock?"

"What is it, Lowell?" wonderingly murmured Summers, at once subdued by the sorrow burdened atmosphere.

"My nerves are all gone to pieces. Just open the door and take a look into Van's room—at his bed—" and he pointed to the slightly open door of Greenfield's chamber.

Summers mutely obeyed.

With a startled cry of horror he stepped back and held his hand to his eyes for some moments there in the hallway. Then, with an effort at composure, he followed Bradbury into the library.

"NOW let us see," began Summers. "Who else knows of this, so far, besides Mrs. Carter and yourself?"

"Not a soul, Larry. You are the first person I communicated with outside this apartment."

Mrs. Carter threw her hands before her eyes, tottered back into the corridor and fainted.

"Good," said Summers, with emphasis. "Everything in starting the search right. In a jiffy I'll have two of the best detectives they can lay hands on at headquarters. Nothing has been moved? Nothing gone over?"

"The only thing disturbed is the door—which I broke in, as I told you."

"O. K." Summers took up the telephone. "Give me Spring three-one-hundred. Hello! Headquarters? Give me Inspector McFarland—detective bureau. Lawrence Summers talking—yes. The district attorney."

"Hello, inspector! Good morning—good morning! This is Lawrence Summers speaking. I want you to send two of your best men to No. 30-A Washington Square, North—at once, this minute, to Mr. Bradbury's apartment—fourth floor. I'm there and waiting for them."

A ring at the doorbell made Bradbury jump from his chair.

"The bulls," said Summers as Bradbury passed him.

With subdued greeting at the door, three men filed in instead of the two expected, and Summers noted in the lead the portly, rubicund McFarland, the inspector in charge of the detective bureau, come himself, in view of the district attorney's interest in the case.

"Thought I'd run up myself and take a look—see how the boys get started."

"Good of you, Mac," responded Summers briskly. "Glad you weren't too busy to take the time."

"This is Detective Sergeant Oppenheim here, Mr. District Attorney," McFarland waved his hand to a dark-faced man behind him with small features and a gleam of gold in his teeth. "And Detective Sergeant Callahan," he added, as a purple-florid, large-faced, stoutish man stepped forward, displaying half a mouthful of the precious metal fashionable on the metropolitan detective force.

"Now what has happened, Mr. Summers?" asked McFarland blandly.

"Sit down," Summers waved the trio toward the furniture in the comfortable room.

"Briefly," began Summers, "a man has been murdered in this apartment some time last night. Mr. Bradbury here discovered the fact about nine o'clock this morning."

And tersely the district attorney, in his vigorous fashion, summed up the history of Greenfield's and Bradbury's joint life here, of his long acquaintance and intimate friendship with them, of the warm attachment between Bradbury and Greenfield, leading up to Bradbury's startling discovery less than two hours earlier.

McFarland rose from his place on the sofa.

"Suppose," he said, "what d'ye say, Mr. Summers, if we take a look at—the room?"

Bradbury unconsciously straightened.

"Come, gentlemen," he said firmly, "I'll show you the way."

All made their way to the scene of the crime.

"The door was locked, Mr. Bradbury?" suddenly asked McFarland.

"Yes," nodded Bradbury.

"Easy to see, chief," spoke up the husky voice of Callahan, "the trick was done from the outside."

"Was the window open like this all night?" inquired Oppenheim.

"Yes, of course," answered Bradbury. "Mr. Greenfield always insisted upon having his window open—even during the day—even in winter."

A Blue Ribbon Short Story

business proposition. But I have a notion, Sam, that you're the one man who can make the boy understand what the sort of thing he has a chance to get now will count for by and by. He's coming in here a little later and he's got to have something else. If he doesn't, those machines will get him—they'll pound him until he's hard. I want him to read poetry. I want him to write poetry. Sounds queer, eh? But listen."

Muffled, through the closed doors, came the steady rhythmic pound of the big machines. It was insistent—ceaseless.

"Day after day—year after year of it, don't you understand?" said Selfridge.

"Yes,' said Carstairs with a shudder.

"If you could spare an hour or two once or twice a week—just to give him the taste again."

"I might give him the hour or two. It isn't that. But the other thing—you don't know, Selfridge. It's gone. I've been working like the devil."

Carstairs spoke irritably and began to repack his brief case with the literature on the Sequit Light and Power Company.

"This is all I read nowadays," he said with a short laugh.

"Supposing Jack drops around to your house some evening, you'd be willing to see him?"

"Of course," agreed Carstairs. "And if there's anything I can do to help him, I will. Only I want you to understand that, as far as teaching goes today, I'd only prove a dub."

Carstairs rose.

"Did I take fifty thousand of those convertibles?" inquired Selfridge.

"Yes, sir, but if you wish to can cel—"

"I do," said Selfridge. "Make it a hundred thousand. I'll get off a note to Jack this afternoon."

ONCE on the train and beyond the direct influence of the dominant personality of this man, Carstairs felt anything but comfortable. He had sold one hundred thousand dollars worth of the convertible 6s, and this, under ordinary circumstances, he would have called a good day's work. But the circumstances were not ordinary. Obviously, Selfridge had not bought the bonds, but had merely taken them in order to carry his point. And Carstairs knew that he should have refused flat footed to become involved in any such proposition.

He would not dare to relate the details of this transaction to any one in the office, for if there was one thing he was trying hard to live down it was his academic past. Elwin, the president, was not wholly blind to some advantages of a college education, but to his mind those consisted chiefly in the social connections a man made and to the particularly favorable position a graduate occupied with the Harvard Athletic association. Even this prestige had been won only after years of struggle against prejudice. If Carstairs went into the office and began to talk about the advantage of poetry in business it would take more than one brace of Harvard-Yale football tickets to offset the suspicion that would be aroused.

On the whole, then, he was in no good humor when he returned to his desk, even though he had to his credit the best sale of the day.

"Great stuff," said Elwin approvingly when he reported.

And little Johnny Nevins, who had just come on the staff fresh from college, hung around for an hour trying to discover how Carstairs did it.

"I saw five men today and never had a nibble," he complained, sadly. "I'm not asking you to give away any tricks of the trade, but what in thunder did you stress, Carstairs.?"

"The convertible feature," the latter answered uncomfortably.

"So did I, but they wouldn't listen. This man Selfridge, a personal friend of yours?"

"I wouldn't call him that. I used to know young Selfridge when he was a kid."

"That gave you your opening, I suppose."

"In a way," growled Carstairs. 'But really, Nevins, I don't deserve any credit for the sale. Say—did you ever write any poetry?'

"Quit your kidding."

"Did you ever read any poetry?"

"Whats' the big idea?"

"I don't know yet. But there was a Keats—"

"Sure, I knew him. He did the half mile."

Nevins was Harvard '22 and just engaged, Carstairs had heard. He liked the boy—a slim, keen faced chap who had won his "H" in the sprints and incidentally, his present opportunity. Elwin knew the value of that kind of advertising and used it for an annual field day event which was widely reported. The office entries would have done credit to a college meet.

"You're thinking of Kelly," Carstairs corrected.

"That's right. Both of them begin with 'K.' He was before my time."

"So was Keats. He wrote verse."

"What the—"

"As near as I can make out he's the man who sold these bonds for me. But don't tell anyone."

"Bah," exclaimed Nevins in disgust as he turned away.

Carstairs went home early that night and honestly tried to make himself agreeable, but the day had been something of a strain and there were still a big batch of those convertibles to be disposed of. That was the trouble—always there were more. But that was business. Elwin & Co. would cease to exist when there were no more bonds to be marketed and then his own job would cease and there you were. This had to go on forever. So he retired early so that he might lie in the dark and consider plans for tomorrow. He went over the list of all possible prospects until he grew confused. There was a pounding in his ears like the steady stamp of those big machines he had heard in the office of Selfridge & Co. They fell finally into a sort of rhythm—a lulling sort of rhythm that blended itself at last into metred cadence like verse.

WHEN Agnes came up an hour later after putting the children to bed she found him fast asleep. She studied his masklike face. It was so, she thought with a shudder, he would look when dead—just the shell of a man. With the eyes closed and the features passive there was not much left. Tonight she was not sure if he were breathing. Crossing quickly to the bed, she touched her fingers to his forehead. It was warm. She hesitated a moment and then, stooping, ran the risk of kissing his lips. He stirred and she withdrew in fear.

Then she removed her apron and undressed and turned out the light and, as quietly as possible, stole into bed. In a few minutes she, too, was asleep—just the shell of a woman in the deep, dark of night.

Selfridge Junior turned up at the house one evening a day or two later, after Carstairs had forgotten all about him—a tall, stalwart chap wearing the mask of a full grown man. He came at a bad time, just as the children, in various processes of deshabile, were on their reluctant way to bed. The house at this hour seemed to be dominated by damp towels and tooth brushes. Agnes, in consternation, fled into the bathroom and tried to round up the children there, but before the visitor was safely in the front room known as the library Sam Junior managed to leap out, and then, in shirt and bloomers, Julie. At this point Ruth, in wrapper and bed slippers, delivered her ultimatum; either she should be allowed to follow or she would scream. Agnes was quite helpless. With her hair in disarray and her face flushed after the effort of the last half hour, she could only remain hidden and pray for the intervention of Divine Providence. But apparently Divine Providence was not at all interested in the complication. To her horror, she heard the young man's voice coming as though from the very center of the group. Then wild laughter and shrieking and the scampering of feet and the noisest kind of "rough house." It was disgraceful. She cowered behind the bathroom door, realizing with terror just how distasteful this sort of thing was to Sam.

She was right. It brought the sweat to his brow, and yet he stood there helpless while young Selfridge organized the three children into a scrub football team. "The Harvard Midgets," he called them, and with a sofa pillow as a football he played center, with Sam as quarter back and Ruth and Julie as right and left ends. Dad had to assume, willy nilly, the responsibility of being the whole Yale team.

It was disgraceful, and, in spite of all Carstairs' protests, lasted a half hour. When at last he did succeed in breaking up the combination, and crowding the children back into the bathroom and Selfridge into the library, he was in no poetic frame of mind.

"We're rather cramped here," he apologized. "That makes it hard to keep the kids where they belong."

"They are a darned good bunch," declared Selfridge. "That boy is quicker than chained lightning. Ought to make a real football player. When does he get to college?"

"That's so far off I haven't thought about it, answered Carstairs. "He may go straight into business."

"That's no way for a Harvard man to talk."

"The pace in town is faster every year. How are you getting on in your work?"

Selfridge sprawled out in a chair with his long legs stretched in front of him, lighted a cigarette.

"Fine," he answered cheerfully.

"Your father seemed to think you were behind on your English."

"So that's why he wished me on you?" grinned Selfridge. "The old fox didn't say anything about that—justs asked me to drop around some evening. Well, I'm darned glad he did. Seems good to see you again. Don't you ever go out to Cambridge nowadays?"

"No."

"We've got a real ball team this year. Why don't you bring the boy out next Saturday?"

"Haven't time, Jack."

"The deuce you haven't! Today is Friday—come along tomorrow with the wife—and the whole family. I'd love to have them. I'm in Hollis this year. Get out early and I'll show them around a bit."

"That's a pretty big order—five of us."

"The more, the merrier. I haven't forgotten the good turn you did me that summer. What do you say?"

"It's mighty kind of you, but—

"You're booked," declared Selfridge. "One fifteen at 10 Hollis. Where did you use to room?"

'Twenty Holworthy."

"Bull Blake has it this year. Played left end on the second. You went in some for sports yourself, didn't you?"

"Baseball—a little."

"You got your H."

"I was only a second string man and made the Yale game on a fluke."

"You didn't make that game on a fluke. Gee— and think of my having to pilot your kids around the yard like they came from some town in Maine. What's the matter, old scout?"

Carstairs frowned. He did not mind the bantering familiarity, for he had to take that even in the office from the younger generation, but he did resent what seemed to him like unwarranted criticism, even though thrown out carelessly.

"You'll find out soon enough when you're through college," he replied testily. "And see here, Jack—it's a bit of reflection on me not to have you make good on English."

"I'd be all right if it wasn't for the reading. But they soak you with so darned much of the stuff—in the spring."

"What you got this week?"

"Keats."

"You used to like him. Remember how we read aloud?"

"You bet. There was one about Agnes—"

"St. Agnes. I have it here."

Carstairs stepped to the case containing the modest library he had accumulated in his teaching days, and found the well worn copy. He blew off the dust and, sitting down by the lamp, lighted his pipe.

"I've hardly looked at this since those days. Want to hear a bit?"

"Shoot," said Selfridge.

Carstairs began rather self-consciously at first. His reading voice sounded strange even to his own ear. But soon he fell into the swing of it, and, before he realized, was lost completey in the amazing beauty of this supremely perfect poem. When he finished the room seemed very still, as though listening on. Even Selfridge remained very still, as though listening on. And outside the room, flat against the wall, stood Agnes, her face flushed, her eyes alight with new life—listening on.

"Read another," said Selfridge with lowered voice.

So Carstairs read another and then another and then another, until it seemed to him this room became suffused with golden light and perfumed as with attar of roses. When Selfridge rose he spoke in a subdued voice as one fearful of interrupting music.

"Tomorrow—old scout,' he said.

As he came out of the room he thought he heard the gentle swish of a woman's skirts fading into the distance. But he saw nothing. Perhaps it was only Porphyro and St. Agnes—gliding away like phantoms.

Carstairs left the office early the next day, picked up the wife and children at Park street, and took the subway for Harvard square. It was as much of an adventure as boarding a ship for Bombay. In the last five years he had not been out here more than twice and then only on business with a trust company. The old brick buildings surrounding the yard had been only old brick buildings surrounding a pleasant open space, a picturesque group in themselves, but quite without significance. His own student days were as detached as the revolution was from old Massachusetts hall. These were historical facts outside the focus of his newer interests. He saw them both as one sees through the large ends of opera glasses.

But today he was coming out here not to sell bonds but to visit Harvard. He felt rather foolish about it, to be sure, but he was the only one of the party who did. Agnes had not looked prettier or younger in several years, while his own children he hardly recognized. Never had he seen them so imaculate from head to toe. The boy actually appeared so much of a gentleman that he began to be proud of him. He had an intelligent face and the slim lithe figure of an athlete. He was twelve, and in five years might actually be an undergraduate if he went to college at all. The boy kept close to his father's side while the two girls clung to their mother, their eyes as alive with excitement as hers. There was something contagious about their joy. Carstairs felt it himself when they came to the surface into the sunlit square gay with Harvard flags.

Selfridge was waiting for them, and did the honors handsomely. He showed them all the buildings and even took them up to Twenty Holworthy, where Carstairs used to room, afterwards seeing the game.

On the way back to the subway every one, though, let down a notch and, somewhat more self-conscious, was still under the influence of that impersonal glow that comes with well deserved victory. The Harvard flags they passed meant a little more than they did before, and so, too, did the brick and iron fence surrounding the yard.

"What's the game next week?" inquired Carstairs as he shook hands with his host.

Princeton. You don't want to miss it."

"I'll be here."

Great! And say—have you got a spare evening any time next week?"

"Seven of them," answered Carstairs.

"Why?"

"I've run across some verse by a chap named Shelley and—"

"Come over and bring the book along."

"You bet I will. When you read that stuff it seems to mean something. But I know how darned busy you are."

"I look it, don't I?" grinned Carstairs. "Anyway, just you come along any evening you feel like it. I'm going to make Agnes listen in next time."

"Fine."

For the third or fourth time that day Agnes felt the color rise to her cheeks—and for no other reason than the fact that she had been noticed, had felt herself once again within the range of her husband's vision. She was not one to complain, but there were days at a time when she was not sure Sam saw her at all. Conscious of her presence he might be—as he was of the wall paper and the dining room chairs—but that was something quite different. Today he had actually looked at her, as at rather a pretty woman. It was this which made her perk up on the way back to Park street, although after the strain of the day and the prospect of preparing supper she was actually very, very tired. But not for ten thousand dollars in cold cash would she have admitted this.

That, however was one of the things Carstairs noticed, but he was man enough to pretend he did not.

"It's been a great day, old girl," he smiled.

"Wonderful."

"What do you say if we finish right and stay in town to dinner?"

"Can we afford—"

"That isn't anything to talk about when you're off on a tout. Where do you want to go?"

"Anywhere will be fun," she answered eagerly.

So he took them to one of the nicest hotels in town, and there, at a table in a corner, they feasted and listened to music and felt themselves quite one with the other prosperous looking people who came and went. And when it was time to pay the check Carstairs did not wince and refused to allow Agnes even to see the amount, and left as generous a tip in the silver tray as Elwin, of Elwin & Co., might have done.

THE nickel alarm clock in Carstairs' bedroom was out of luck. It had a mission to perform, and was not allowed to perform that mission. By the first of June it could not get in more than thirty seconds' worth of honest noise before Carstairs, springing from bed, had it by the throat. He was waking up earlier than formerly, and this in spite of the fact that he was retiring later. There was scarcely an evening now that he turned in before eleven, and yet more often than not he was wide awake at six, a half hour before the clock was set to give its first warning tingle. Moreover, he was awake all over—body, mind, and soul. There was not a sleepy spot in him anywhere, though often enough he indulged in the luxury of lying still for twenty minutes or so and thinking. Here was a kind of mental alertness that would have appealed to Elwin, and yet if that model of efficiency could have followed Carstairs' thoughts he would have been considerably worried. Because, if every light and power company in which Elwin & Co. was interested had been located on the planet Mars, it could not have been farther outside the range of Carstairs' thoughts. Indeed, so located, it might have been nearer, because it was of some of these more distant facts of the universe that he was beginning to take account.

Instead of rushing for the seven forty-five car, he waited now for the eight twenty, and used this extra half hour to go over Sam's Latin lesson. He found a curious entertainment in this—digging up from his memory half forgotten rules and vocabularies, and tramping again in the wake of Caesar's armies. Fifteen minutes of this flavored his whole day and gave him balance. Or perhaps he helped Julie with her history covering the early exploration of America. It was something to follow, if only for a quarter of an hour, Pizarro and Cabot and De Soto and Francis Drake and Jacques Cartier. It was good to remember that such men lived and sailed the open seas in their small craft when the chances were a thousand to one against them. A man who could get peeved over little things with these hardy adventurers in mind deserved scant sympathy.

These fellows gave him, too, a different slant on his morning paper, whch of late left him so depressed. The chaos of ugly news which from day to day seemed almost to prophesy anarchy—murders, divorces, strikes—fell into its rightful place. The old world had worried through a good many more serious crises than these and was still doing business.

He approached his office work with fresh enthusiasm, too, though he himself was not aware of this as the men with whom he came in contact. Even Elwin noticed the diffeence. He had, on the whole, been disappointed in Carstairs. Hard working and conscientious as the man was, he was developing into a mere office executive engulfed in detail. As such he was valuable, of course, but valuable only as such. Now of a sudden, he seemed to be broadening out, though it would have been difficult for Elwin to explain exactly what he meant. The difference appeared to lie in the man's general attitude toward things and in his keener, fresher outlook. Elwin fell into the habit of calling Carstairs into his private office, on one pretext and another, just to hear him talk; though welcomed Mrs. Gould. Somehow she didn't want to be a mere private in the ranks. She was perfectly willing to spend Gould money which came to her in the form of alimony. But she wanted to be president of something or other.

"Well, all right," she said. "While I'm showing the Goulds I might just as well show these women, too. I'll found an organization of my own and I'll elect myself president."

And that's what she did.

But where Mrs. Gould's organization differed from any other one under the sun was in the fact that she needed no members at all. No money was collected for dues. There were handsome offices, first in Washington and then at Fith Avenue and Forty-second Street in New York City. There were velvet carpets and mahogany furniture, and there were files and file clerks, and half a dozen busy little secretaries and stenographers. But Mrs. Gould paid for all these things out of her alimony.

THE stationery was particularly impressive. It was de luxe in quality, refined in arrangement, and all inclusive as to territory. It took in the world in one phrase. The United States Women's Chamber of Commerce—National and International. And her title was equally as comprehensive. That part read somewhat like this, "Kathrine Clemmons Gould," and in parenthesis, ("Mrs. Howard Gould of New York")—for there must be no mistake about that. The Gould name and the alimony that went along with it furnished her all the ammunition she needed. Just under the name one read a most impressive title. It was "Founder-General-President-at-Large," or something equally inclusive. The idea that the title intended to convey was that she was the whole works. And she was.

Whenever there was a very serious big gathering or something very important among business men, she wrote to ask if women would be allowed to attend. Well, that stationery, the implication it carried that the women of the whole world were backing the thing, the Gould name at the masthead—all of these combined to create a deep impression. In nearly every case a short correspondence resulted in an invitation, and at one annual banquet after another of the greatest commercial organizations in this country Mrs. Gould was one of the chief speakers.

Dressed in a pale grey gown and wearing a pink rose hat, armed with press photographs almost life size, accompanied by well-written interviews, flanked by secretaries, she put it over in great style. The vaudeville stage is good training for banquet speaking.

MRS. GOULD. was always made an honorary member at the close of her speech. By the time that season was over her card bore the name of no less than seven of the most important organizations of men in America to which she had been elected honorary member.

That card worked magic in Europe. On the strength of it she appeared before the chambers of commerce of half the capitals of the world. And yet, it is said, that she had no members and no organization—only stationery and a name and Howard Gould's alimony.

People wondered, when they saw her publicity in the London papers, if dainty Lady Decies 'she was Vivien Gould, George Gould's daughter) would entertain her celebrated connection. But she didn't. London could almost hear her keeping still.

And then there came what seemed to be Mrs. Gould's great opportunity. An important international convention of women was meeting in Europe. The United States was entitled to but ten delegates, but thanks to some snappy promotion letters sent out by a tourist agency, the Americans arrived at that convention sixty strong, and Mrs. Gould was there with bells on.

She claimed that the agency promised her if she would go with that party she would travel under the banner of a great American woman's organization, and that under this banner she would stand and shake hand with kings and queens and things. It was also strongly intimated in the circular letter sent out from New York that moving pictures would be taken of the tourists shaking hands with the kings and queens, and that these same pictures would be shown in due time back in their own home towns.

AND, considering all of these advantages over ordinary touring, the price of the trip after all was not so exorbitant—I say considering these advantages, for after all one doesn't get one's picture taken shaking hands with a king every day.

But the agency who sold those tickets reckoned without Mrs. Gould. She was no greenhorn on foreign travel, she knew first class from third class, and she knew what visas cost. The party landed in Italy and by the time they got to their destination they weren't exactly like one loving family.

And the end of it? . . . She was seated in the Bristol Hotel in Christiania, Norway. She declared flatly she was going to bring suit for breach of contract as soon as she could get back to America.

"So they broke their contract with you, did they?" The question was asked just to make conversation.

She grew dramatic, almost tragic. "Did they break thier contract with me?" she cried scornfully. "Well, I should say they did. They told me if I'd pay the price for this trip that I'd meet the kings of Europe, and I haven't met a king—not a damn king!"

Next Sunday: Anne Morgan Re-chickenizes France.

once the subject shifted from business, he was apt to shoot off at strange angles. He might turn back to Caesar and seventy B. C., or he might talk about some dead and gone poet, or perhaps refer to Jacques Cartier, who, in search for furs and new lands for his king, ventured through virgin wilderness with a smiling shrug of his shoulders.

"Where the deuce do you get that stuff?" inquired Elwin.

"From the kids," answered Carstairs "They are full of it."

"I suppose I knew something about it once."

"Sure you did," smiled Carstairs. "It probably didn't mean much then. But now—well—I feel as though I were just beginning my education. They sort of give you a perspective—men like Jacques Cartier and the poets. And even those young chaps at Cambridge playing ball so darned earnestly. There's a deuce of a big world outside of State street, Mr. Elwin."

"I suppose so," admitted Elwin cautiously. "But there's a handful right here."

That was true, to, and he was not neglecting this other world. A few days later he went down to see Selfridge, Senior, about a new bond issue. The latter offered to take a hundred thousand on the spot.

"Not by a jugful," said Carstairs. "This time you've got to listen and do your own buying."

"I can't pay you any other way for what you've done for Jack," declared Selfridge. "He tells me—"

"Whatever he tells you," cut in Carstairs, "we're quits. He's a mighty good boy, Mr. Selfridge."

"He says you have a boy coming along fast, too."

"Sam? He's doing pretty well. Ought to make Harvard in another five years."

"You're tutoring him?"

"No; he's tutoring me."

"Eh?"

"That's a fact—he and Jack, between them. They don't know it, of course, but they are. They've just naturally got perspective, those young uns—possibly too much. They overdistance a trifle, just as we underdistance. If they don't see the trees that make up the forest, we don't see the forest, because of the trees. The trick is to focus our vision just right; not too far and not too near. It's a pretty problem and a delicate problem, sir. If they are sometimes a little too young, maybe we're sometimes a little too old. Perhaps we ought to get together more. Say, Harvard is slated to beat Yale a week from tomorrow. Why don't you come up?"

Proud Selfridge reached into an inner pocket and drew out two oblong tickets with pictures of a Harvard gate done upon them in crimson ink.

"For mother and me," he said. "The boy sent them down yesterday."

Carstairs reached home that evening in time for dinner. He was doing this quite regularly now. With a little planning he did not find it so difficult. And later he helped Agnes with the dishes and then helped to get the children in bed. There was plenty of confusion and plenty of "rough house" and plenty of clutter, but he did not seem to mind it. The scene was before his eyes more like a stage picture, even though he found himself an active participant. For this hour did not stand by itself. In the background there was Caeser and Pizarro and Jacques Cartier, and in the future—

Before going upstairs that evening Carstairs led his wife out to the porch, and for a few moments they stared together at the clear June night sky. His arm stole around her waist. Whispering he quoted:

Heaven's ebon vault
Studded with stars unutterably bright,
Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
Seems like a canopy which love had spread
To curtain her sleeping world.

"They help you to see—those poets," he said.

He led her in again and up to the room where the nickel alarm clock ticked away uselessly. In the dark he whispered something that made her dream all night with a smile on her lips.

"St. Agnes," he said.

Harry Thaw's "brain storm" and thus save him from the electric chair. Doubtless there are many who would be able to find evidence that the Countess was suffering from a similar mental condition when she behaved as she is alleged to have done with her married chauffeur.

The Countess de Perigny is even richer than her brother and able to pay well for whatever medical testimony may be necessary to extricate her from her present embarrassing difficulties.

It will be interesting if the alienists undertake to show how a brainstorm like that which turned a man's heart to murder filled a woman's with lawless love.

"It is quite within the bounds of possibility to prolong our term of youthfulness by 10 or 20 years. In other words, WE NEED NO LONGER GROW OLD AT 40 or 50 This can be brought about by observing certain hygienic measures AND BY IMPROVING THE FUNCTIONS OF A CERTAIN FEW OF THE GLANDULAR STRUCTURES IN OUR BODY." -- Dr. Arnold Lorand

IN "OLD AGE DEFERRED"

ARE you "old" at 40 or 50—or 70? Would you like to prolong the term of youthfulness. Or recapture the charm and regain the vigor of youth, if they have flown? If so, you will find in this page interesting glimpses of a great unfinished scientific drama which might be called "The Defeat of Age."

Parts of this drama are being written by European scientists, who tell of achieving amazing rejuvenation by gland surgery. Other parts are coming from the pens of scores of Americans—citizens of all ages—explaining the writers' personal experiences with a recent medical discovery of European origin.

These writers say the discovery, used at home, has invigorated them, banished the distressing effects of "old age," brought back the vitality of other days and replaced weakness and despair by strength and joy. Some far advanced in years, declare it has made them "young" again. And this discovery, thanks to American enterprise, now is available to everyone—at small cost if it pleases; at no cost if it fails.

You Are NOT as Old as You Feel, Says Science

—but as old as your glands and nerves.

"A man is not as old as he feels, or a woman as old as she looks."

This is an opinion of Dr. Eugene Steinach, of Vienna, originator of the famous Steinach "rejuvenation" operation. He and other progressive scientists believe we are just as old as our great nerve centers and ductless glands—that a man with abundant nerve force and active glands may be "young" at 70, while one lacking in these respects may indeed be "old" at 30.

"The basic principles of rejuvenation have been discovered," and, in many instances, rejuvenation is possible without an operation, says Dr. Kammerer, an associate of Steinach. Recent press dispatches quoted one of America's great surgeons as saying that we should not find renewed youth "leaping from bough to tree top in the glands of monkeys, but in a bottle on the bathroom medicine shelf."

The writers of the letters printed here had no "gland operations" and took no "gland extracts." All the benefits of which they tell were derived, they say, from the medical discovery already mentioned—the tablet preparation known as Korex compound. This compound now is offered to the public under an iron-clad guarantee of "SATISFACTION OR YOUR MONEY BACK."

"Young" Again at 68, He Dec'ares

W. D. LUTTRELL

A complete rejuvenation at the age of 68 is the return W. D. Luttrell, of Lincoln, Neb., says he got from Korex compound.

"Without any gland operation, my youthful vigor has been restored," he writes, "and I owe this rejuvenation and awakening of glands and nerves to Korex. I am 68 years old, but don't feel a day over 30. Korex is the best thing I ever heard of to build up a man."

"I felt new vigor and strength within 10 hours after I began taking Korex," says W. Adkins, Bel, La. "I am 79 years old, but felt the effects of Korex tablets in two days," writes C. H. King, Tinsman, Ark. "Korex took effect on me in 24 hours," says R. A. Leonard, Geneva, Ohio.

THOS. J. GLASCOCK

As Young and Vigorous at 75 as He Was at 35, He Says

Thomas J. Glascock, 75, of Kansas City, Kan., says three weeks' use of Korex compound made him "young" again after he had prepared for death.

"I feel like I did at 35," he writes, "and seem to be getting stronger every day. During my three weeks' use of Korex, pains and weaknesses of many years' standing disappeared almost magically. Today—six months after taking my first Korex tablet—I am as vigorous and supple as I was in the prime of life. When I began using Korex, my memory was virtually gone and I was almost blind. Now my mind is clear and active and I can read the finest print. I am convinced that my restoration is complete and lasting, and I can't express the happiness Korex has brought me. It has made me young again."

D. W. Wood, of New Orleans, past 60 years of age, says: "Korex has brought me back to as good, healthy physical condition as I enjoyed at 35. I am apparently as supple as at 25, and my eyesight is better than for years."

SOME years ago, European specialists announced gratifying results from a newly-discovered vegetable substance, used for its direct and powerful action on the great lower spinal nerve centers. Arousing those centers, the Old World physicians reported, was followed by improved circulation and a sense of renewed vigor and animation, reacting on the entire system as a "rejuvenation."

An American chemist, knowing that thousands needed such help, decided to adapt the substance to a home treatment—safe, simple, inexpensive. Korex compound was the result.

Besides the substance already mentioned, it contains ingredients intended to supplement that agent's effects—improve the functioning in general and build up the system. Korex is praised unstintedly by persons who say it has rescued them from the misery of nerve weakness, lost or depleted vigor and the effects of premature age. Some—notably the aged—give Korex credit not only for renewed vigor, but for "secondary effects of rejuvenation," such as improved eyesight, memory and mental faculties. Several tell of being able to lay aside their glasses after using Korex.

Glands Made Active and Youthful Vigor Renewed

—is the testimony of many Korex users.

The following are typical of favorable reports made by Korex users:

"I have experienced a complete rejuvenation through the use of Korex. My glands have been active, my vital nerve centers awakened and I have been made young. My muscles are supple, my eyesight clearer and I can do a man's work. I feel as young and vigorous as I did at 30, although I am 84."—J. L. Rowell, Bucknum, Wyo. "My glands are active and I have lost that wornout, no courage feeling since taking Korex."—Julio Aviles, Camp Meade, Md.

"Korex has made me feel like 30 instead of 73. My glands are active, and I don't know I have a nerve in my body."—W. A. Mullis, Charlotte, N. C. "Korex moves all troubles and restores all joy and pleasures. I am truly surprised at its power and results."—Herbert Rencher, Lockland, O.

"I am pleased with my first box of Korex. I have been rejuvenated. My glands are active; lost vigor has been restored. I feel 20 years younger."—Harry G. Thompson, Oklahoma City, Okla.

The Comical Garden

BY JANE CORBY.

The garden bed was smooth and straight,
The sun was overhead;
The garden people all were up,
Although they were abed;
And each was trembling on its stalk—
Filled with a dreadful dread.

"It can't be true," the oyster plant
Was saying with a sneer;
"They've made it pleasant for us
Ever since we have been here;
They wouldn't, I am certain,
If they weren't quite sincere."

"You've no head," the cabbage answered,
Raising hers and looking round.
"Just because things have been one way
They won't always, I have found.
I'm all head, and I assure you
That my argument is sound."

A lady cook came walking by,
And holding by her hand
There was a little boy who had
A spade, a basket and
A look the garden people
Couldn't fail to understand.

"He looks extremely hungry," Mourned the blackcaps in the hedge;
"We hope he doesn't see us
Way off here upon the edge;
We'll scratch him pretty sharply
If he touches us, we pledge."

"Well, I told you so," the sage said.
"Now admit that I am wise;
I repeat: we are in peril,
Which I hope you realize—
We are only being cared for Till we're all fit food supplies."

"Why, I never dreamed it," old goose-
Berry cackled with a grin.
"That's not strange," remarked the pumpkin;
"You are always taken in;
If it weren't for the dogwood
Goodness knows where you'd have been."

"Bow, wow, gr-rr-umph!"
said the dogwood;
"I have always done my best
To protect you garden people,
And I'm very much distressed
At the thought that you'll be eaten
As those other two suggest."

Here the catnip ceased its purring,
Bristling angrily instead;
"Those old dogwoods a protection!
"It's quite otherwise," she said.
"Why, they're waiting just to chase me!
Don't, I pray you, be misled."

"Hush, this is no time for quarrels," Cried the thyme. "It's far too late!
See the hungry pair advancing,
And at what a rapid rate."
"Ah, my strength is gone," the onion Wept. "Oh, what a fearful fate."

"Courage!" cried the spearmint; "trust me."
There was time to say no more.
"Let's get pieplant, cook, and blackcaps,
And some beets, or onions, or Some ripe strawberries," the garden
Heard the little boy implore.

Old potato looked up sharply,
Opening wide his many eyes.
And the sweet corn, pale and trembling,
Pricked its ears up in surprise,
While the onion in the corner
Uttered little plaintive cries.

Then the cook, who made no answer,
Stooped down close, quite near the ground
And upon the beets and cabbage
She bestowed a look profound,
Then she straightened, sigh-
ing deeply,
Without saying what she found.

All the garden people trembled,
There was horror in their
look.
The cabbage tried to hide her head,
The beets and catnip shook;
The spearmint whispered
sharply:
"What a fierce, voracious cook!"

The lady cook went walking off
And holding by her hand
She kept the little boy who had
The spade, the basket, and
They went because the garden
Wasn't ripe, you understand.

EDDIE COLLINS ANSWERS BOYS' BASEBALL QUESTIONS

(Written by Eddie Collins Exclusively for This Page)

Do You Like the Squeeze Play?

The squeeze play is simply a hit-and-run play that is undertaken with a man on third base. It is a very hazardous play advocated by some managers and totally disapproved of by others. The success or failure of the play rests almost entirely with the hitter. The runner can cooperate to a certain extent by starting at the proper moment, not so soon as to give the play away and afford the pitcher a chance to waste the ball, or not too late, so even if the batter does hit the ball, he may be thrown out at the plate. Only batters who have absolute confidence in themselves and their ability to connect with the ball when the runner comes charging should be allowed to try this play. It is a risky play and I think should be undertaken only in the latter stages of a close game, when runs are hard to get and the gamble of all or nothing warrants the attempt.

Do You Think Golf Hurts Your Playing?

I have played golf for the past ten years, but more or less intermittently, and as far as that game goes, am only a fair golfer. But at no time have I ever entertained the idea that it in any way hurt my ball playing. The only thing I do not approve of is a game of golf previous to a ball game. I think that such an undertaking has a tendency to take the edge off a player's freshness.

Frequently during playing season open dates occur on our schedule which I take advantage of to play golf. As far as the swings employed in golf and baseball are concerned, I have always thought the former, particularly the follow-through, was a help rather than a hurt to my batting. I am a great devotee of golf.

Do You Approve of the Sacrifice?

The loss of many a ball game can be traced directly to the failure of a sacrifice. Many times you have seen a batter force a man at second and the following hitter line out a base hit, but no score results, simply because batter No. 1 had failed to sacrifice. If he had advanced his man to second, the latter would have been in a position to score on the base hit that followed.

Every batter should learn to bunt. It is vitally important. To sacrifice, the batter must bunt. Any ball that the batter swings at and connects with that results in a bunt, is not a sacrifice. To sacrifice, the primary intention of giving up one's time at bat for the advancement of a runner must be evident. In recent years, a batter has been credited with a sacrifice when he has scored a runner on a fly. But ordinarily, when we say sacrifice, we mean bunt. As the saying goes, whenever you are in doubt, you never are wrong if you bunt. In hitting practice don't fail to devote a part of it in perfecting your bunting. A bunt at the proper time will win many a ball game.

(Eddie Collins will answer more questions on this page next week.)

"What's Wrong with This Picture?"

"My, what a talented person that Eddie Collins must be—a pianist and a famous ball player!" people exclaim when they read an announcement that "Eddie Collins will give a piano concert at Orchestra Hall Sunday." Of course Eddie, the ball player, and Eddie, the piano player, aren't the same person, but people are always getting the two mixed up. Though he can't "tickle the ivories," Eddie Collins, captain of the White Sox and the greatest second baseman, knows how to tickle the fans by putting a man out at second or sending a ball smashing across the diamond.

PLAY "STILL WATER" THIS SUMMER

Play it at camp, play it on hiking trips, play it in the long summer evenings when the gangs of your neighborhood get together for such old standbys as "Run, Sheep, Run." It's a lively game of skill and fun that you won't get tired of for a long, long time.

Use Tennis Ball

An old tennis ball or some other soft ball, caps and a peppy bunch of players—that's the equipment for the game of "Still Water."

All the players, including the pitcher, put their hats or caps in a row against a wall or fence. The pitcher takes the ball and stands on a line drawn four feet from the hats. The other players watch their hats carefully.

Pitcher Tosses Ball

The game begins when the pitcher tosses the ball into one of the hats, either his own or one of the others. The owner of that hat must grab the ball and yell "Still Water!"

When he runs for his hat, the other players run away as fast as they can, but when he calls "Still Water," they must stop in their tracks. The player with the ball the nthrows at the closest player, who can dodge, but cannot get out of his tracks.

The player hit must then get the ball. As soon as he is hit the rest of the players start running again, but when he gets hold of the ball he calls out "Still Water," and they must stop. He then throws the ball at another player, and the game goes on until some one misses.

"Bad Eggs" Mean Forfeit

If the one who throws the ball misses, a small stone called a "bad egg" is put in his cap and he is the pitcher next time. The first player to get five "bad eggs" must pay a forfeit. The forfeit payer must stand with his face against the wall, and each player gets a throw at him from a line drawn twenty-five paces away.

You may chose some other forfeit, if you like, but if you use the ball throwing one, be sure you've a soft ball! If no one manages to hit the forfeit-payer, it's considered that he's paid his forfeit anyway, and goes back in the game.

STORY OF TOM PEARTREE'S PORTRAIT

Thomas Gainsborough was a little boy who liked to draw pictures better than he liked to do anything else. The reason probably was because he could draw such good pictures. By the time he was ten years old, he had sketched every tree and cottage and all the boys and girls in his village of Sudbury, England.

Thomas' father, who was a milliner and then a clothier and a crape maker in turn, one day came in the house and said: "Somebody has been stealing pears out of our pear orchard!" Tommy was almost as angry as his father to hear this news, for the big fine pears were just beginning to get juicy and yellow and if anybody was going to have those pears, Tommy wanted to be the one. He decided to go about catching the thief, but when he told his father he would get the fellow whoever he was, his father just laughed and said: "A fine chance a ten-year-old would have to catch anybody."

Day after day went by and the pears continued to disappear as fast as they got ripe. One morning when Tom went out to the orchard to see if there was even one pear left for him to eat, he was walking along slowly, drawing little pictures of all the things on the way, as he always did, when he suddenly looked up to see a big, burly fellow with an unshaven face in the act of climbing over the stone wall to the pear trees.

Tom didn't know what to do! He couldn't capture the man, for he was too big and rough. If he ran to call his father, the man might get away while he was gone. Just as he was trying to collect his wits, the man spied him. He paused with one foot hanging over the wall in such a funny manner that Tommy wished he could draw him. Then, quick as a falsh, the boy decided that was a fine idea. He opened his sketch book and made a few rapid lines.

When Tom took the picture to his father, he recognized the thief as a town loafer who had often been suspected of stealing from people's orchards. In fact, he had earned for himself the title of Old Tom Peartree. Thomas' picture of the man was such a good likeness that it was sufficient evidence to cause him to be punished.

The story of Tom Peartree's portrait is a true one. Thomas Gainsborough became one of England's great portrait painters when he grew to manhood. "The Blue Boy" and "The Duchess of Devonshire" are two of his pictures that you have probably seen. Admirers of Gainsborough like to tell this story of how his talent as an artist once made him a detective.

THE MIND OF AN INDIAN ELEPHANT

Of all the dangerous animals ever captured when fully grown, the Indian elephant is one of the wisest. is the only one which promptly learns that man's mind is superior to brute force and that it pays to be good. A lion, tiger, bear, elk or monkey captured when an adult will try to fight its way to freedom. It never knows when it is beaten and continues to attempt to break its bonds until usually it dies of broken bones or a broken heart.

Has Best Memory

The Indian elephant is not only one of the best original thinkers, but has also the best memory. A particularly clever chimpanzee can remember as many different things as an elephant, but out of the whole number of captive chimpanzees, there may be only one of this sort, while every Indian elephant captured is capable of learning.

The mentality of elephants is best shown in the circus ring. The whole performance of these trick animals depends upon the ear, eye and memory. It is only an exceptional lion, horse or dog that reaches the exhibition platform, but every elephant has the making of a star. Twenty elephants may go through a military drill and perform the series of antics such as "fall in," "roll call" and several kinds of marching with never an error in the bunch. It is possible for Indian elephants to go through as many as thirty-three acts in the circus ring, each of which he must remember and do perfectly.

Learns Routine Work

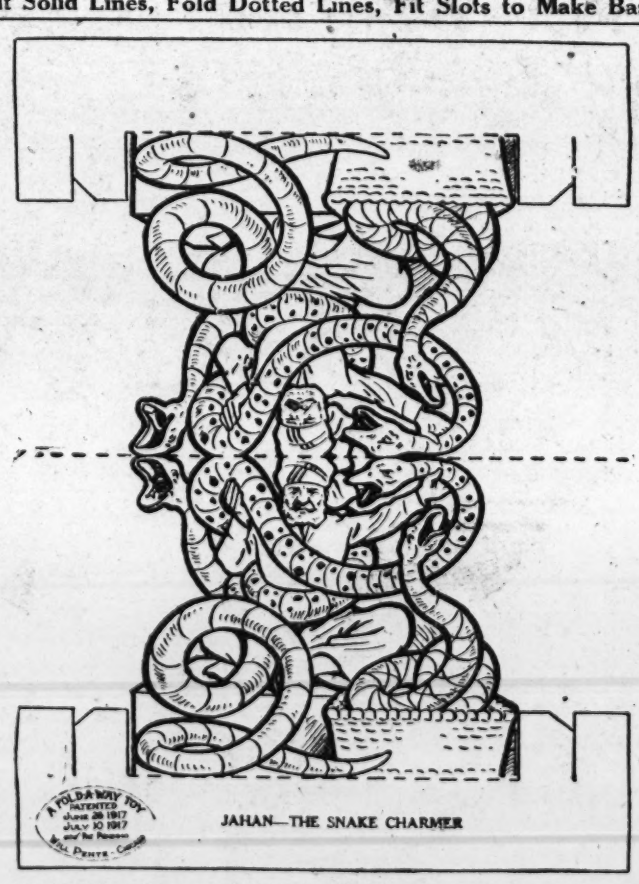

Elephants are also different from other animals in that they can be trained to push, as well as pull.

In the timber camps of southern India every elephant is trained to do at least sixteen things in the routine of work which he must perform by command. In their work they sometimes show more intelligence than human beings.

MAKE YOUR CAMP COOKING OUTFIT

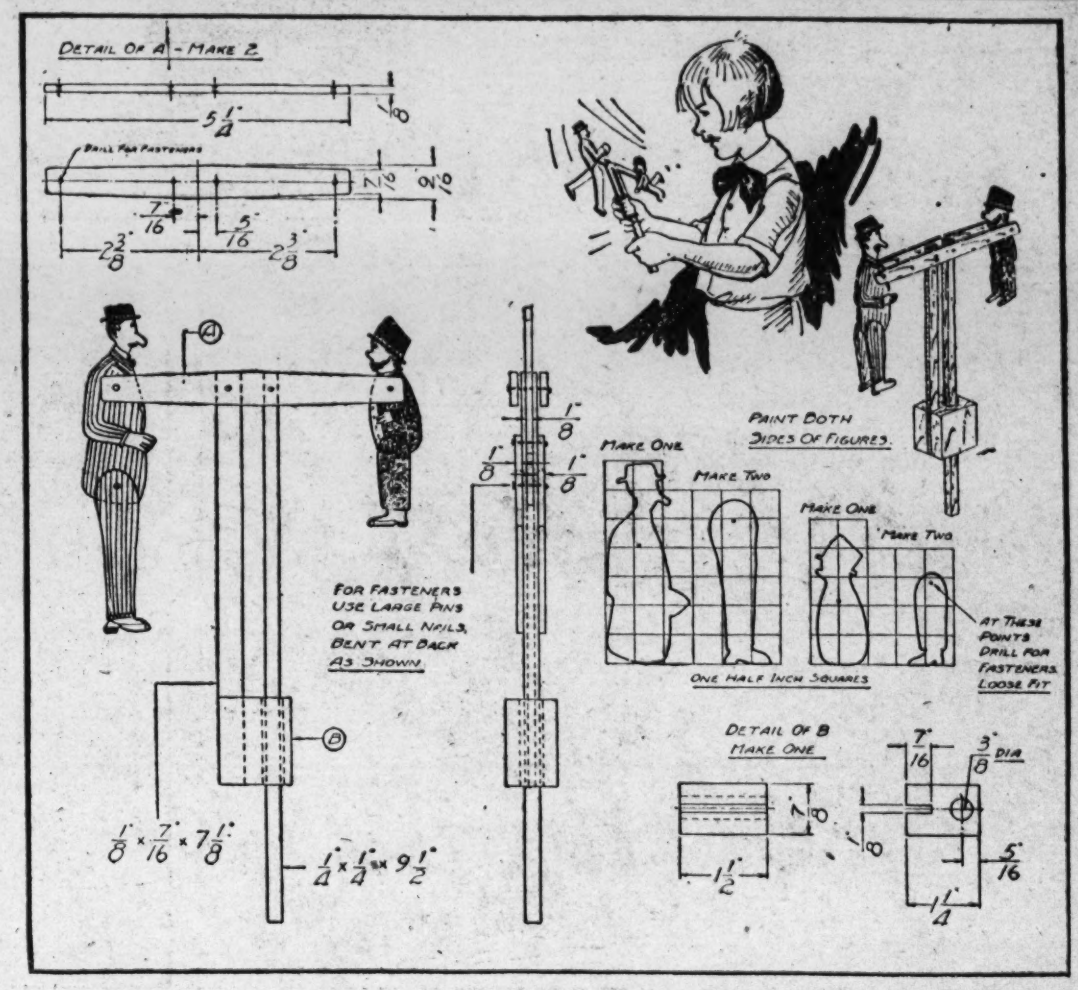

A boy doesn't have to spend several dollars for a highly-polished camping kit when he gets ready to strike for the woods. A cooking pail, a coffee pot and a frying pan are simple to make and convenient to carry when they all fit inside the other like a set of Chinese boxes. The diagram above shows you how to use a lard can for the cooking pot, a molasses can which fits inside for a coffee pail, the top of the second pail for a plate and the lid of the cooking pot for a frying pan.

You have to put wire handles on the pails and you will have to fit the frying pan with a handle. You may be able to devise something yourself, but if you can't, just take a tin spoon and cut off the end of the bowl. Bend back the remaining part to make a handle and reinforce the bend with some small wire for strength. Bore two holes in the pan and two corresponding holes in the handle. Use rivets with nuts to fasten the handle on the pan when you want to use it.

Tool Craft

All Sorts of Things for Boys and Men to Make

By Frank I. Solar

In making this toy which a small child will find most amusing, use any kind of thin wood. The dimensions on the drawing show the thickness to be used, but if you have wood of a slightly different thickness, use that instead.

Cut out the men you see in the drawing, or invent two of your own, if you have a clever idea for some clownish characters. Lay out your patterns very carefully, then cut to shape with a coping saw. Your work may be spoiled if you do not cut them carefully. Sand them with fine sandpaper, rounding all edges slightly.

Next get out the cross arms A, the block B and the two uprights. No part of the work on these pieces is difficult but because they are thin, you must be careful in handling them. The block B has a narrow slot in it into which the thinner upright piece is to be fastened with glue or a small brad. The thickness of the upright is given as an eighth of an inch which means that the slot must be just the slightest bit smaller. If, however, you find yourself lacking in tools to cut so small a slot, cut it as small as you can, then make the upright piece of a thickness to fit into it securely. The rest of the construction will cause you no concern.

The moving parts are held together by means of thin nails or large pins bent over at the back. Thin wire may be used also. If small washers are available, they could be used to advantage in the construction. The joints of the men should have great freedom.

Painting faces, ears, coat, collar, tie and trousers of the men in colors of your own choosing is one of the most interesting parts of making this toy.

A RACE THAT WAS WON BY A CAMERA

When the Republic high school track team met the Valley City team for their annual meet, some of the members of the latter complained because Red Bunker, a former Republic sprinter, had been appointed judge of the races. "Of course he'll try to give the contest to his own school," they said, "but if there's any doubt about who wins, we'll stick up for our rights."

Jack Coffey, the star quarter-miler of the Republic team, had been disqualified at the last minute because his chemistry grade was low, and on the day of the meet he was feeling pretty blue because he couldn't help his team out. But he had gone to Valley City anyway to take pictures of the events, for he was almost expert with his camera.

At the meet, Jack had to content himself with standing at the finish with Red and taking pictures of the winners as they came in. They were pretty evenly divided between the two towns, and when it came time for the relay at the end, it was found that each side had an equal number of points and this last event would decide the winning team.

It was a close race. Jack snapped the winner as he crossed the line, with the second so close behind it was hard to tell which got in first. "Republic, first," called Red through his megaphone. Valley City's side of the grandstand rose in arms instantly, declaring in one voice that their man had won. the Republic folk expressed surprise. It looked as though Valley City had come in first.

A great clamor followed. The Valley City boys declared their intention of beating up the Republic team after dark. After supper at the little restaurant, the Republic boys stood in front, wondering what to do. They knew their opponents were laying for them in front of the high school and would start a rumpus as they passed on their way to the train. Suddenly somebody asked where Jack Coffey was. He hadn't been seen anywhere.

"Beat it as soon as he heard the word 'fight,'" declared one boy. "Saw him myself, headin' for downtown. That's a piker's way to do—flunk out the meet, then sneak off when we get ourselves in trouble."

The Valley City boys were starting up the street toward Republic's defenders. They were armed with something that looked suspiciously like eggs. The angry mob was just aiming its first avalanche of missiles when a tall figure came tearing through the crowd. "Stop the fight," yelled the voice of Jack Coffey. "I've got photographs of the finish here. Just got them developed. Look and you'll see who won!"

The leader of the Valley City crowd took a picture, distrustfully. He gazed a minute at it and then uttered an exclamation of surprise. Then he turned to his gang. "'S all off, fellows," said he, giving the picture to those nearest him. What they saw was Republic's runner at the line, his arm out, and the Valley City boy behind him—Republic had won and the judge was right.

He Caught On.

"His humor is quite contagious."

"How do you mean?"

"Whenever you hear it, it makes you sick."

Notice that Smith has an admiring audience around. They are, reading from top to bottom, Mr. I. M. A BOY'S FIRST BIG GAME HUNT

Sandy Halliday, a fourteen-year-old boy, has accompanied his father on a trip to British East Africa to secure specimens of big game for an American museum. The party goes up into the region of the elephant kingdom and all narrowly escape from death in an elephant stampede. Two of the mammoth tuskers are killed and also a cheetah which attacks. Sandy goes out on the plains alone and is accosted by an animal he cannot see. He fears it is a lion but it turns out to be a harmless warthog.

Two days after the great elephant fight, the killing of the cheetah and Sandy's scare that the warthog gave him, the party of American hunters broke camp on Mt. Kenia to proceed down to the Tana river which they were to follow back to the coast.

"There are two animals we have not yet obtained," remarked Mr. Halliday, "a hippo and lion. When we have added those two species to our collection, we will be ready to go home."

Allan Smith and Sid Carter had bargained with some African settlers for a river boat in which to make a floating trip of a few miles. The natives which composed the servants of the "safari," or caravan, loaded up the equipment and started overland with great bundles on their backs for the spot selected as the next camping ground. The black men marched off singing chants and some with lighter burdens danced with a rhythmic motion. They were as glad to be off again as Sandy and his father's party.

When the hunters had reached the river, Allan Smith directed them to their seats in the old boat, cautioning them to keep an eye out for any hippos that might be lurking in their watery beds. It was known that these animals had overturned boats at times, killing all the occupants. "Hunters who have escaped death in so miraculous manner as we escaped the elephants should not be trapped to their doom by a hippo," was Mr. Halliday's reply to the warning.

All day long the hunters watched and not a hippo appeared. Sandy grew bored as the hours passed without excitement. The scenery was interesting: baboons swinging in the trees along the banks, strangely bright-colored birds flying overhead and all manner of queer jungle sounds coming from the tropical undergrowth. Occasionally a fish would flop up in the sunlit water, so Sandy conceived the idea of fixing up a fishing pole with a string and hook fastened on to his gun. With this contrivance he sat waiting for a nibble when he heard Mr. Carter say, "I see a hippo yonder!"

Sure enough, on the sandbar, under a tree, on one side of the bank, half his body under water, stood the animal. Mr. Halliday fired, struck the hippo and it sank immediately.

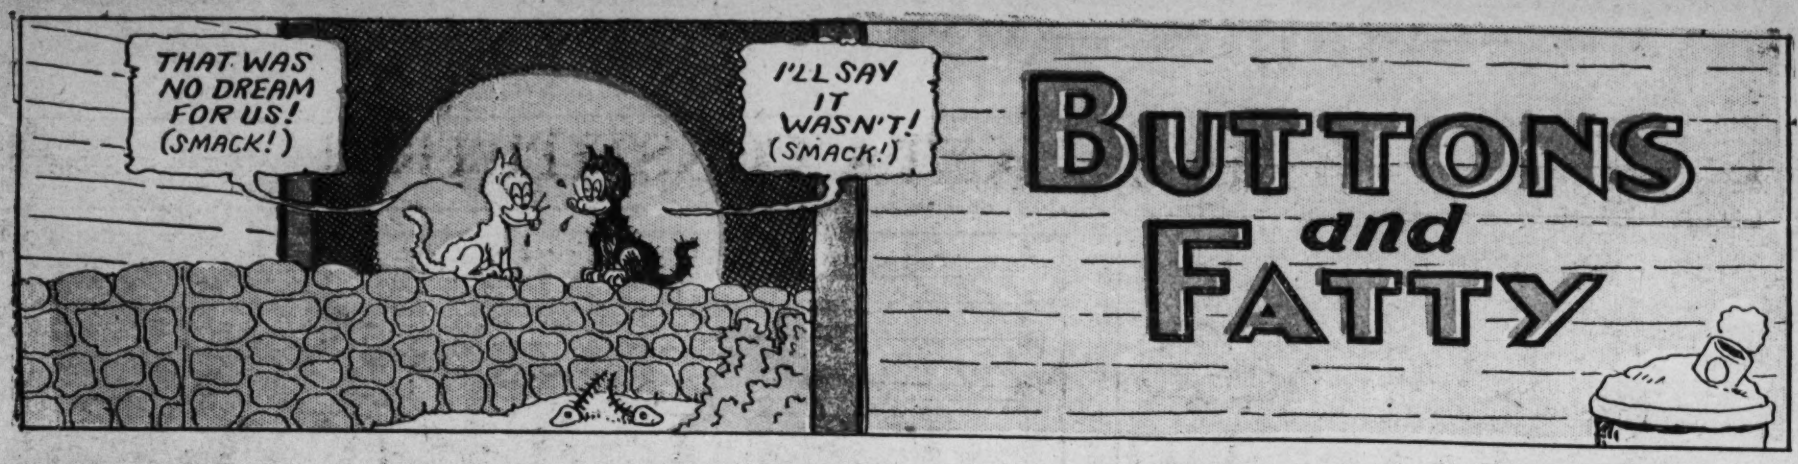

"Now said Mr. Halliday, "we will have to wait an hour or more to see if it rises to the surface. If it was killed it will eventually come up."

(Watch this page for the end of Sandy's adventures next week.)

"Mr. Halliday fired, struck the hippo, and it sank immediately."

NESTLING LIKE A JEWEL IN A SETTING OF THE WORLD-WIDE BEAUTY OF NATURE
A glimpse of the glistening front of the mansion at "Hills and Dales," the beautiful estate of Fuller Callaway, LaGrange, Ga. Greeting each visitor is the legend, "God Is Love," in private hedge, seen in the left foreground. The estate is one of the showplaces of the south

THE VISION OF THE CRYSTAL GAZER
who would look into this sphere would find her glimpse into the future obliterated by the dazzling, yet quite loveliness of this garden of the estate of Fuller Gallaway, LaGrange, Ga., combining in the hundreds of kinds of flowers and shrubbery the natural beauty of three continents.

IN ONE GORGEOUS VISTA AFTER ANOTHER

A WOODLAND PARADISE
to delight the heart of the most ardent lover of nature is the sunken garden of "Hills and Dales," the Callaway estate at LaGrange. In this garden is a tree from the Holy Land, which is reputed to have furnished fruit for the prodigal son in his wanderings.

This Chinese Rug Is but $210
As Pictured---Size Is 9x12 feet

THE reproduction of this rug is made from a photograph taken in our Rug Section. Genuine Mongol quality, being made of the heaviest, most rugged wool grown in the cold districts of Northern China. The panel effect design is particularly pleasing. The dark blue ground contrasts beautifully with the gold and taupe border. The motifs, though small and few in number, show the tree of life, basket of flowers, lotus and iris designs. The price, $210, is especially low for a hand-woven Chinese rug of this quality and beauty.

¶ This is one of many valuable specimens making up our interesting collection of small and large Chinese and Oriental rugs to be seen on our Fourth Floor.
